PREFACE

We do not to-day possess an edition of the Pentateuch and Haftorahs—the Lessons from the Prophets—in Hebrew and English with a popular commentary for use in Synagogue, School and Home. The glosses on the Pentateuch (without the Haftorahs) by David Levi and Isaac Delgado were published 140 years ago, and are, besides, unobtainable to-day. In 1844, De Sola, Lindenthal and Raphall began a commentary on the Sacred Scriptures, of which Genesis alone appeared. The English translation, however, was fantastic, the notes voluminous, and the Haftorahs were not included. Kalisch's volumes on Genesis, Exodus and Leviticus were not written for the Synagogue or for the Jewish Home. All other Jewish Scriptural publications in England and America, either omitted the Hebrew text or were without a Commentary for general use. This present work, therefore, which gives the text in Hebrew and English, accompanied by a brief exposition of both the Pentateuch and the Haftorahs, supplies a long-felt and crying want among Jews in English-speaking countries.

Text. The Hebrew Massoretic text is the latest Letteris edition issued by the British and Foreign Bible Society. I am deeply grateful to the Committee of that Society for their courtesy in generously granting me the use of the plates of this standard and beautiful edition of the Hebrew Bible.

Translation. Thanks to the great courtesy of the Delegates and Syndics of the University Presses of Oxford

Methodist World Service Fund Transferred

University of Southern California

and Cambridge, the English Translation is that of the Revised Version. With one important difference. In a book intended for the lay public, it is inadvisable to give alternative renderings. Wherever, therefore, the Revised Version brings more than one translation of a difficult passage, the rendering most in accordance with Jewish Tradition has been chosen. The Delegates and Syndics of the University Presses are, of course, in no way responsible for the manner in which the Revised Version is reprinted in this volume.

Commentary. In the preparation of the Commentary on Genesis, I have had the invaluable assistance of Dr. J. Abelson (Chapters I–XI), Dr. A. Cohen (Chapters XII–XXXVII), and the late Rev. G. Friedlander (Chapters XXXVII–L). In placing their respective manuscripts at my disposal, they allowed me the widest editorial discretion. I have made full use of that privilege; and have condensed or enlarged, re-cast or re-written at will, myself supplying nearly all the Additional Notes (in which some of the problems of Genesis are examined in the light of Judaism and modern knowledge), as well as most of the introductory and concluding comments to various sections. The same freedom was given me in regard to the explanatory notes on the Haftorahs kindly undertaken by the Rev. S. Frampton. To all my collaborators in this Commentary, I would herewith express my heart-felt thanks.

Authorities. Jewish and non-Jewish commentators—ancient, medieval and modern—have been freely drawn upon. "Accept the true from whatever source it come," is sound Rabbinic doctrine; to which I like to add, "Adopt the beautiful from whatever source it come"—even if it be from the pages of a devout Christian expositor or of an iconoclastic Bible scholar, Jewish or non-Jewish. This does not in any way affect the Jewish Traditional character of the work. My conviction that the criticism of the Pentateuch associated with the name of Wellhausen is a perversion of history and a desecration of religion, is unshaken; likewise, my refusal to eliminate the Divine either from history or from human life.

METHOD OF INTERPRETATION. A word must be added as to the method chosen for leading the reader into what the Jewish Mystics called the Garden of Scriptural Truth. The exposition of the plain, natural sense of the Sacred Text must remain the first and foremost aim in a Jewish commentary. But this is not its only purpose and function. The greatest care must be taken not to lose sight of the allegorical teaching and larger meaning of the Scriptural narrative; of its application to the everyday problems of human existence; as well as of its eternal power in the life of Israel and Humanity. In this way alone can the commentator hope not merely to increase the knowledge of the reader, but to deepen his Faith in God, the Torah and Israel.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS. It is impossible for me to thank all those who, in addition to the collaborators and the bodies mentioned above, have been of help in this work. Among this number, I would especially mention my teacher, the Rev. Dr. H. P. Mendes, Rabbis Dr. I. Epstein and A. Mishcon, the Revs. H. Mayerowitch and G. Prince, and Messrs. E. N. Adler and Herbert Loewe. Dr. A. Cohen and the Rev. M. Rosenbaum have kindly read the proofs and made many useful suggestions.

The fact that this work can be produced unhampered by economic considerations, and can be offered to the public at a far lower price than might otherwise have been possible, is due to the idealism of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Shaerf. They are happy to be of service in spreading the Torah, and desire to look upon these volumes as a memorial to the late Ethel Rosa Schneider, the mother of Mrs. Shaerf. May their generosity and public spirit lead to a strengthening of religious conviction among English-speaking Jews. That such be, with the help of God, the blessed result of this undertaking is my fervent prayer.

J. H. Hertz.

VERSIONS AND COMMENTATORS

A. ANCIENT VERSIONS AND AUTHORITIES

Jerusalem Targum	see Targum.
Jonathan Targum	see Targum.
Massorah	lit. "The Tradition." The original Bible text was unvowelled. The Massoretes fixed the Traditional reading of the Sacred Text and its exact pronunciation, largely by means of vowel points. Their activity began after the Talmudic period and extended to the tenth century.
Midrash	The ancient homiletical expositions of Scripture in the Schools of Palestine.
Onkelos	see Targum.
Philo Judaeus	(20 B.C.E.–40 C.E.) Renowned Jewish philosopher in Alexandria. Author of allegorical commentaries on the Pentateuch.
Rabbis, the	The religious authorities in the Talmudim and Midrashim.
Septuagint	The Greek translation of the Bible made by the Jews in Egypt in the third century B.C.E. The word Septuagint means seventy, because it was believed to be the work of seventy-two scholars selected for that purpose by one of the Ptolemy rulers.
Symmachus	A literal Greek version of the Pentateuch by a Hellenistic Jew of the second century.
Targum	Ancient translations or paraphrases of the Bible into the Aramaic vernacular then spoken by the Jews. The most important of these is the literal translation of the Pentateuch ascribed to Onkelos, the Proselyte, a Mishna teacher of the first century. The Jonathan Targum is a freer paraphrase of the Bible ascribed to Jonathan ben Uzziel, a pupil of Hillel. An earlier and fragmentary version of this paraphrase is known as the Jerusalem Targum.

Talmud	Body of Jewish law and legend comprising the Miśhna and the Gemara, and containing the authoritative explanation of the Torah by the Rabbis of Palestine and Babylon, from the years 100 B.C.E. to 500 A.C.E.

B. MEDIEVAL JEWISH AUTHORITIES AND COMMENTATORS

Abarbanel	(or, Abrabanel,)Don Isaac (1437–1509). Spanish exegete and statesman.
Chizkuni	13th century French commentator.
Ibn Ezra	Abraham (1092–1167), famous Spanish-Jewish grammarian, Bible exegete, philosopher, traveller, and poet.
Kimchi	David (1160–1235). Franco-Spanish exegete and grammarian. His commentary profoundly influenced the Authorised Version of 1611.
Maimonides	Moses (1135–1204). Foremost medieval Jewish philosopher. In his "Guide of the Perplexed," he deals with difficult Bible terms and conceptions.
Nachmanides	Moses (1194–1268). Great Spanish Talmudist, Bible commentator and mystic.
Ralbag	i.e. Rabbi Levi ben Gerson (1288-1344); French exegete,philosopher and scientist.

Rashbam — i.e. Rabbi Samuel ben Meir(1085–1174, Rashi's grandson. Stresses the "plain, natural sense" in his commentaries.

Rashi — i.e. Rabbi Solomon ben Isaac of Troyes (1040–1105), French Bible exegete and greatest commentator of the Talmud. No other commentary on the Pentateuch has had a more enduring popularity or exerted an equal influence in Jewry. "He has two of the greatest and rarest gifts of a commentator, the instinct to discern precisely the point at which explanation is necessary, and the art of giving or indicating the needed help in the fewest words" (G. F. Moore.)

Saadyah — Gaon (882–942), born in Egypt. Religious philosopher and exegete. Translator of Bible into Arabic.

Sforno. — Obadiah (1475–1550), Italian physician and exegete. Teacher of Reuchlin.

C. MODERN ENGLISH VERSIONS

The Authorised Version, also known as the King James's Version, 1611—Of unsurpassed literary beauty.

Leeser, Isaac — The Twenty-four Books of the Holy Scriptures, Philadelphia, 1853—First Jewish Version in English of the entire Bible.

The Revised Version, 1884. Preserves the beauties of the Authorised Version, but corrects its mistakes in the light of modern scholarship.

GENESIS

The Hebrew name of the First Book of Moses was originally Sefer Yetzirah, "Book of Creation." This was rendered into Greek by Genesis, "origin," because it gives an account of the creation of the world and the beginnings of life and society. Its current Jewish name is בראשית Bereshith ("In the beginning") which is the first Hebrew word in its opening sentence. Bereshith is also the name of Chap. I–VI, 8, the first of the fifty-four weekly Torah Readings (Sedrahs) on Sabbath mornings.

If the Pentateuch (which is a Greek word meaning the five books of Moses) were merely a code of civil and religious laws, it would have opened with the twelfth chapter of Exodus, which contains the earliest specific commandment given to Israel (Rashi). But it is far more than a code of law: it is the Torah, i.e. the Divine Teaching given to Israel and the message of Israel to mankind. Therefore, it describes the origins of the Jewish people; traces its kinship to the other portions of the human family—all being of one blood and offspring of one common stock; and goes back to the creation of the world, which it declares to be the work of One Almighty and Beneficent God. All this is told in the first eleven chapters of Genesis. The remaining thirty-nine chapters give the story of the Fathers of the Jewish people—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and his children.

CREATION OF THE WORLD

Chapter I–II, 3

1. In the beginning. Verse 1 is a majestic summary of the story of Creation: God is the beginning, nay, the Cause of all things. The remainder of the chapter gives details of the successive acts of creation. Ages untold may have elapsed between the calling of matter into being and the reduction of chaos to ordered arrangement.

God. Heb. Elohim. The existence of the Deity is throughout Scripture assumed: it is not a matter for argument or doubt. Elohim is the general designation of the Divine Being in the Bible, as the fountain and source of all things. Elohim is a plural form, which is often used in Hebrew to denote plentitude of might. Here it indicates that God comprehends and unifies all the forces of eternity and infinity.

created. The Heb. word is in the singular, thus precluding any idea that its subject, Elohim, is to be understood in a plural sense. The term ברא is used exclusively of Divine activity. Man is spoken of as "making" or "forming," but never as "creating," i.e. producing something out of nothing.

the heaven and the earth. The visible world; that which is above (heaven), and that which is below (earth).

2. the earth. The material out of which the universe is formed.

waste and void. lit. "wasteness and emptiness."

the deep. Heb. tehom, the abyss, from a root which means "to roar." A possible translation would, therefore, be "the roaring waters," land and water forming one roaring chaotic mass.

spirit of God. The mysterious, unseen, and irresistible presence of the Divine Being.

moved. Or, "hovered"; the Heb. word occurs again only in Deut. XXXII, 11, where it is descriptive of the eagle hovering over the young to care for them and protect them. Matter in itself is lifeless. The Spirit of God quickens it and transforms it into material for a living world. The Jerusalem Targum translates this verse: "And the earth was vacancy and desolation, solitary of the sons of men and void of every animal, and darkness was upon the face of the abyss; and the Spirit of Mercies from before the Lord breathed upon the face of the waters."

3–5. First Day. Creation of Light

3. And God said. "By the word of the Lord were the heavens made." Psalm XXXIII, 6. One of the names for God in later Jewish literature is "He who spake and the world came into existence" (Authorised Prayer Book, p. 16.) The phrase God said must be taken as a figurative equivalent of "God willed" (Maimonides).

let there be light. A sublimely simple phrase to express a sublime fact. This light, which is distinct from that radiated later on from the sun, disperses the darkness that enshrouded the Deep (v. 2). The old question, Whence did the light issue before the sun was made, is answered by the nebular theory! The great astronomer, Halley, wrote: "These nebulæ reply fully to the difficulty which has been and darkness was upon the face of the deep:

and the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. 3. And God said, Let there be light: and there was light. 4. And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness. 5. And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night. And there was evening and there was morning, one day.
6. And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the raised against the Mosaic description of creation, in asserting that light could not be generated without the sun."

4. that it was good. i.e. fulfils the will of the Creator. Repeated v. 10, 12, 18, 21, 25, 31. For the significance of this refrain, see Additional Note A, III, p.

5. called. In calling the light Day, God defines the significance of light in human life. In the Bible account of Creation, everything centres round man and is viewed from his angle.

And there was evening. The day, according to the Scriptural reckoning of time, begins with the preceding evening. Thus, the observance of the Day of Atonement is to be "from even unto even" (Lev. XXIII, 32); and similarly of the Sabbath and Festivals.

one day. Not an ordinary day but a Day of God (יומו של הקב"ה), an age. With Him a thousand years, nay a thousand thousand years, are but as a day that is past, Psalm XC, 4. "Earthly and human measurement of time, by a clock of human manufacture, cannot apply to the first three days, as the sun was not then in existence. The beginning of each period of creation is called morning; its close, evening" (Delitzsch); in the same way, we speak of the morning and evening of life.

7. and it was so. Fulfilment follows immediately upon the Divine fiat. "For He spake, and it was done; He commanded, and it stood fast" (Psalm XXXIII, 9).

8. Heaven. In the Bible, Heaven (shamayim) is represented as the habitation of God, in the same figurative sense in which the Temple is similarly described: "Behold heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain Thee; how much less this house which I have builded!" (I Kings, VIII, 27).

Ashkenazi or Sephardi usage. Where both usages agree, the star alone appears; followed by the small numeral indicating that the second, third, fourth, etc., person is here "called up." In this chapter, the Sephardim have the second calling up (שני) after II, 3, which forms the fourth (רביעי) of the Ashkenazim.

14–19. Fourth Day. Creation of Heavenly Bodies

14. lights. The Heb. word signifies sources of light; hence, "luminaries" would be a better translation.

Other peoples ascribed to the sun, moon and stars a benevolent or malevolent potency over the lives of men and nations. Here, however, all idolatry and superstition are swept away. These lights are works of one Almighty God, and are created for His appointed purposes; see Jer. x, 2.

to divide. The first purpose of the luminaries is to be the agencies for marking the division of the day.

for signs. The second purpose is to help man to locate his position when moving over the surface of the earth: they were primitive man's compass.

for seasons. The third purpose is to regulate the calendar. The "seasons" are spring, summer, autumn and winter; also seed-time and harvest. The Heb. word for "seasons"

14. And God said, Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven to divide the day from the night; and let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days and years: 15. and let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth: and it was so. 16. And God made the two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also. 17. And God set them in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth, 18. and to rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good. 19. And there was evening and there was morning, a fourth day.

later acquired the meaning of "festivals," since these were fixed by the year's seasons.

15. to give light upon the earth. The fourth and highest purpose is to provide light to the earth, without which life and growth are impossible.

16. the stars also. They are mentioned last and without explanation, because they play a subordinate part in the life of man, as compared with the sun and moon.

20–23. Fifth Day. Fishes and Birds

20. swarm. Or, "teem." Heb. sharatz. Movement as well as fecundity are implied. It is used in connection of fishes and aquatic animals, rodents and insects.

fowl. A collective noun, meaning winged things.

beast of the earth. Wild animals.

26. let us make man. Mankind is described as in a special sense created by God Himself. To enhance the dignity of this last work and to mark the fact that man differs in kind from the animals, Scripture represents God as deliberating over the making of the human species (Abarbanel). It is not "let man be created" or "let man be made," but

21. And God created the great sea-monsters, and fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that

"let us make man." The use of the plural, "let us make man," is the Heb. idiomatic way of expressing deliberation, as in XI, 7; or it is the plural of Majesty, royal commands being conveyed in the first person plural; as in Ezra IV, 18.

in our image, after our likeness. Man is made in the "image" and "likeness" of God: his character is potentially Divine. Man alone among living creatures is gifted, like his Creator, with moral freedom and will. He is capable of knowing and loving God, and of holding spiritual communion with Him; and man alone can guide his actions in accordance with Reason. "On this account he is said to have been made in the form and likeness of the "Almighty" (Maimonides). Because man is endowed with Reason, he can subdue his impulses in the service of moral and religious ideals, and is born to bear rule over Nature. Psalm VIII says of man, "O Lord . . . Thou hast made him but little lower than the angels, and crownest him with glory and honour. Thou hast made him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands."

27. male and female. A general statement; man and woman, both alike, are in their spiritual nature akin to God.

and the animal creation, was essential to the possession of that dominion" (Lyman Abbott). "What we call the will or volition of Man . . . has become a power in nature, an imperium in imperio, which has profoundly modified not only Man's own history, but that of the whole living world, and the face of the planet on which he lives" (Ray Lankester).

29. meat. Food; so also in next verse.

In the primitive ideal age (as also in the Messianic future, see Isaiah XI, 7), the animals were not to prey on one another.

31. very good. Each created thing is "good" in itself; but when combined and united, the totality is proclaimed "very good." Everything in the universe was as the Creator willed it—nothing superfluous, nothing lacking—a harmony. "This harmony bears witness to the unity of God who planned this unity of Nature" (Luzzatto).

CHAPTER II, 1–3 THE SABBATH

The Torah was not originally divided into chapters. Such division originated in the Middle Ages; and, because of its convenience, found its way into the printed Hebrew text. Sometimes, as here, the division is misleading. Thus, the next three verses belong to the preceding chapter, and form its worthy and incomparable conclusion.

1. were finished. The Heb. verb implies not only completion but perfection.

host. lit. "army"; the totality of the universe conceived as an organised whole, a cosmos.

2. seventh day. "What did the world lack after the six days' toil? Rest. So God finished His labours on the seventh day by the creation of a day of rest, the Sabbath" (Midrash).

finished. Better, "had finished" (Mendelssohn, M. Friedlander).

rested. Heb. "desisted," from creating. In the fourth commandment (Exod. xx, 11) God is said to have "rested," vayanach, on the seventh day. This ascribing of human actions to God is called anthropomorphism, and is employed in the Bible to make intelligible to the finite, human mind that which relates to the Infinite. The Talmudic saying, דברה תורה כלשון בני אדם "The Torah speaks the ordinary language of men," became a leading principle in later Jewish interpretation of Scripture.

3. God blessed. The Creator endowed the Sabbath with a blessing which would be experienced by all who observed it. On the Sabbath, the Talmud says, the Jew receives an "additional soul," נשמה יתרה; i.e. his spiritual nature is heightened through the influence of the holy day.

CHAPTER II

2 1. And the heaven and the earth were finished, and all the host of them. 2. And on the seventh day God finished his work which he had made;
and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made. 3. And God blessed the seventh day, and hallowed it: because that in it he rested from all his work which God had created and made.* iva; iis

hallowed. The root literally means "set apart" from profane usage. The Sabbath demands more than stoppage of work. It is specifically marked off as a day consecrated to God and the life of the spirit.

created and made. Or, "in creating had made" (AJ); lit. "which God created to make," i.e. to continue acting (Ibn Ezra, Abarbanel) throughout time by the unceasing operation of Divine laws. This thought is contained in the Prayer Book (p. 39) "In His goodness He reneweth the creation every day continually." Or, as the Rabbis say, the work of creation continues, and the world is still in the process of creation, as long as the conflict between good and evil remains undecided. Ethically the world is thus still "unfinished," and it is man's glorious privilege to help finish it. He can by his life hasten the triumph of the forces of good in the universe.

The Beginnings of the Human Race

(a) THE GARDEN OF EDEN

Chapters II, 4—III

Chapter II is not another account of Creation. No mention is made in it of the formation of the dry land, the sea, the sun, moon or stars. It is nothing else but the sequel of the preceding chapter. In Chap. I man is considered as part of the general scheme of created things. Chap. II supplements the brief mention of the creation of man in v. 27 of the last chapter, by describing the formation of man and woman and their first dwelling place, as preliminary to the Temptation, and the consequent expulsion from the Garden of Eden in Chap. III. Only such details as are indispensable for the understanding of that event are given.

4. These are the generations of the heaven and of the earth. Some consider this verse as a summary of the preceding chapter (Rashi). Elsewhere, however, in ten different sections of the book of Genesis, such opening words (" these are the generations ") always refer to the things that follow : e.g. " These are the generations of Adam " (VI, 9), means, these are the descendants of Adam. In the same way, " the generations of the heavens and the earth " here begins the account of man, the offspring of heaven and earth; or, the history of Adam and his family.

Lord God. Heb. Adonay Elohim. The two most important Names of the Deity are here used. " Lord " is the usual English translation of Adonay. Adonay is the prescribed traditional reading of the Divine Name expressed in the four Hebrew letters Y H W H—which is never pronounced as written. This Divine Name is spoken of as the Tetragrammaton, which is a Greek word meaning " the Name of four letters." The High Priest of old pronounced it as written, on the Day of Atonement during the Temple Service; whereupon all the people fell on their faces and exclaimed, " Blessed be His Name whose glorious Kingdom is for ever and ever." The Heb. root of that Divine Name means " to be " ; Adonay thus expresses the eternal self-existence of Him who is the Author of all existence. A possible rendering, therefore, for Adonay is " The Eternal," and this has been adopted in some Jewish versions of Scripture.

The other and more general Divine Name is Elohim. Whereas Adonay is used whenever the Divine is spoken of in close relationship with men or nations, Elohim denotes God as the Creator and Moral Governor of the Universe. The Rabbis find a clear distinction in the use of these two terms: Adonay (Lord) describes the Deity stressing His lovingkindness, His acts of mercy and condescension and revelation to mankind (מדת הרחמים); while Elohim, (God) emphasises His justice and rulership (מדת הדין). The Midrash says, "Thus spake the Holy One, blessed be He: If I create the world by Mercy alone, sin will abound; if by Justice alone, how can the world endure? I will create it by both." In the first chapter of Genesis, which treats of the Universe as a whole, Elohim ("God") is used; but in the second chapter which begins the story of man, that Divine Name is no longer used alone, but together with Adonay ("Lord God."). There was soon need for the exercise of the Divine mercy. See Additional Note D, p. 107.

earth and heaven. Since the centre of interest now turns to man, earth is mentioned before heaven.

5. no plant of the field. Vegetation remained in the same state as on the day of its creation (see I, 11), through lack of rain.

and there was not a man. The edible fruits of the earth require not only God's gift of rain, but also man's cultivation. Man must be a co-worker with God in making this earth a garden.

6. there went up. "There used to go up." The Heb. verb expresses continuous action.

a mist. In Assyrian, the word means the "overflow of a river," and it may here have the same significance.

7. formed. The Heb. וייצר, is from the same root, yatzar, as is used of the potter moulding clay into a vessel, possibly to remind us that man is "as clay in the hands of the Potter." The Rabbis point to the fact that in this verse the word for "formed" (vayyitzer) is written with two yods, whereas in v. 19 when relating the creation of animals, it has only one yod (ויצר). Man alone, they declare, is endowed with both a Yetzer tob (a good inclination) and a Yetzer ra (an evil inclination); whereas animals have no moral discrimination or moral conflict. Another explanation is, man alone is a citizen of two worlds; he is both of earth and of heaven.

dust of the ground. "From which part of the earth's great surface did He gather the dust?" ask the Rabbis. Rabbi Meir answered, "From every part of the habitable earth was the dust taken for the formation of Adam." In a word, men of all lands and climes are brothers, children of one earthly, as of one Heavenly, Father. Other Rabbis held that the dust was taken from the site on which the Holy Temple, with the altar of Atonement, was in later ages to be built. That means, though man comes from the dust, sin is not a permanent part of his nature. Man can overcome sin, and through repentance attain to atonement with his Maker.

a living soul. The term may mean nothing more than "living entity." The Targum, however, renders it by "a speaking spirit"; viz., a personality endowed with the faculty of thinking and expressing his thoughts in speech.

9. And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and of the garden, and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. 10. And a river went out of Eden to water the garden; and from thence it was

8. garden. The ancient versions translate it by the Persian word "Paradise," lit. enclosure or park.

eastward. Either, "in the East," the home of the earliest civilisation; or, situated east of Eden. The Targum translates it, "aforetime."

Eden. The Heb. word means "delight"; but it is probably the name of a country, Edinu (signifying "plain, steppe"); and may denote the extensive plain watered by the rivers Tigris and Euphrates. The phrase "Garden of Eden" became in course of time descriptive of any place possessing beauty and fertility. In later Jewish literature, it signifies the Heavenly Paradise where the souls of the righteous repose in felicity.

9. tree of life. The fruit of which prolongs life, or renders immortal. The phrase also occurs in a purely figurative sense, e.g. Prov. III, 18.

the knowledge of good and evil. The Targum paraphrase is, "the tree, the eaters of whose fruits know to distinguish between good and evil." The expression "good and evil" denotes the knowledge which infancy lacks and experience acquires. ("Your children which this day have no knowledge of good or evil," Deut. I, 39.) "Knowledge of good and evil" may also mean, knowledge of all things, i.e., omniscience. See III, 5.

Euphrates. No further description is given, because it was universally known as "the great River" (Deut. I, 7) and "the River" (Exod. XXIII, 31, Isa. VII, 20).

15–16. to dress it and to keep it. i.e. to till it and guard it from running wild. Not indolence but congenial work is man's Divinely allotted portion. "See," declares an ancient Rabbinic book, "what a great thing is work! The first man was not to taste of anything until he had done some work. Only after God told him to cultivate and keep the garden, did He give him permission to eat of its fruits" (Aboth di Rabbi Nathan).

parted, and became four heads. 11. The name of the first is Pishon; that is it which compasseth
the whole land of Havilah, where there is gold;
12. and the gold of that land is good: there is bdellium and the onyx stone. 13. And the name of the second river is Gihon: the same is it that compasseth the whole land of Cush. 14. And the name of the third river is Tigris: that is it which goeth toward the east of Assyria. And the fourth river is Euphrates. 15. And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it. 16. And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: 17. but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.

17. thou shalt not eat. Man's most sacred privilege is freedom of will, the ability to obey or to disobey his Maker. This sharp limitation of self-gratification, this "dietary law," was to test the use he would make of his freedom; and it thus begins the moral discipline of man. Unlike the beast, man has also a spiritual life, which demands the subordination of man's desires to the law of God. The will of God revealed in His Law is the one eternal and unfailing guide as to what constitutes good and evil—and not man's instincts, or even his Reason, which in the hour of temptation often call light darkness and darkness light.

thou shalt surely die. i.e. thou must inevitably become mortal (Symmachus). While this explanation removes the difficulty that Adam and Eve lived a long time after they had eaten of the forbidden fruit, it assumes that man was created to be a deathless being. A simpler explanation is that in view of all the circumstances of the temptation, the All-merciful God mercifully modified the penalty, and they did not die on the day of their sin.

18–25. Creation of Woman

18. it is not good. From this verse the Rabbis deduce that marriage is a Divine institution, a holy estate in which alone man lives his true and complete life. Celibacy is contrary to nature.

an help. A wife is not a man's shadow or subordinate, but his other self, his "helper," in a sense which no other creature on earth can be—all that man's nature demands for its completion physically, socially and spiritually.

meet for him. To match him. The Heb. term k'negdo, may mean either "at his side," i.e. fit to associate with; or "as over against him," i.e. corresponding to him.

19. Better, "The Lord God, having formed out of the ground every beast of the field, and every fowl of heaven, brought them unto the man" (S. R. Hirsch, Delitzsch and W. H. Green). See I, 21, 25. The fishes are not alluded to because they are precluded from becoming man's companions.

call them. Man alone has language, and can give birth to languages. In giving names to earth's creatures, he would establish his dominion over them (I, 26, 28). The name would also reflect the impression produced on his mind by each creature, and indicate whether he regarded it as a fit companion for himself.

18. And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone: I will make him an help meet for him.*iii s 19. And out of the ground
the Lord God formed every beast of the fields, and every fowl of the air; and brought them
unto the man to see what he would call them:
and whatsoever the man called every living creature, that was the name thereof. 20. And the man gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field; but for Adam there was not found an help meet for him. 21. And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon the man, and he slept; and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof: 22. and the rib, which the Lord God had taken from the man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man. 23. And the man said,

20. but for Adam. The dignity of human nature could not, in few words, be more beautifully expressed (Dillmann).

21. a deep sleep. As in xv, 12, the word implies that something mysterious and awe-inspiring was about to take place.

one of his ribs. Woman was not formed from the dust of the earth, but from man's own body. "We have here a wonderfully conceived allegory designed to set forth the moral and social relation of the sexes to each other, the dependence of woman upon man, her close relationship to him, and the foundation existing in nature for the attachment springing up between them. The woman is formed out of the man's side; hence it is the wife's natural duty to be at hand, ready at all times to be a "help" to her husband; it is the husband's natural duty ever to cherish and defend his wife, as part of his own self" (Driver).

22. made. lit. "builded"; the Rabbis connected this striking use of ויבן with the noun בינה, "understanding," intuition; and remarked, "This teaches that God has endowed woman with greater intuition than He has man."

woman. The Heb. word is Ishshah ; that for man is Ish. The similarity in sound emphasises the spiritual identity of man and woman.

24. shall a man leave. Or, "therefore doth a man leave his father and his mother, and doth cleave . . . . and they become one flesh." Rashi says : These words are by the Holy Spirit (רוח הקודש) ; i.e. this verse is not spoken by Adam, but are the inspired comment of Moses in order to inculcate the Jewish ideal of marriage as a unique tie which binds a man to his wife even closer than to his parents.

The Biblical ideal is the monogamic marriage ; a man shall "cleave to his wife," not to his wives. It is the man, though physically the stronger, who is to cleave to his wife ; because in ethical feeling and spiritual intuition, woman is the moral superior of man. The sacredness of marriage relations, according to Scripture, thus goes back to the very birth of human society ; nay, it is part of the scheme of Creation. The Rabbinic term for marriage is קִידוּשִׁין, lit. "the sanctities," sanctification ; the purpose of marriage being to preserve and sanctify that which had been made in the image of God.

Chapter III, 1–8. The Trial of Man's Freedom

1. the serpent. According to the Rabbinic legend, the serpent in its original state stood erect. It had the power of speech, and its intellectual powers exceeded those of all other animals, and it was envy of man that made it plot his downfall.

subtil. The same Heb. root signifies both "naked" and "subtle, clever, mischievous." Seeming simplicity is often the most dangerous weapon of cunning. The gliding stealthy movement of the serpent is a fitting symbol of the insidious progress of temptation.

Yea, hath God said. lit. "Is it really so, that God (Elohim) hath said"—a statement expressing surprise and incredulity with the object of creating doubt in the reasonableness of the Divine prohibition.

2. the woman. Guileless and unsuspecting, she falls into the trap—even enlarges on God's command.

3 נֹאכֵל׃ וּמִפְּרִי הָעֵץ אֲשֶׁר בְּתוֹךְ־הַגָּן אָמַר אֱלֹהִים לֹא

נ׳ v. 6. פתח באס״ף

3. Neither shall ye touch it. There was no word concerning "touching" in the original prohibition. This exaggeration on the part of the woman, says the Midrash, was the cause of her fall.

4. ye shall not surely die. The serpent boldly denies the validity of God's threat.

5. God assigned no reason for the command; the serpent suggests one; when God gave His order, it was not for man's benefit, but because God was envious of what man would become, if he ate the forbidden fruit.

good and evil. A Heb. idiom for "all things" (Cheyne, Ehrlich); cf. II Sam. xiv, 17. The same Heb. idiom occurs in a negative form in xxiv, 50 and xxxi, 24, 29, where it means "nothing at all." The ordinary explanation of the phrase "good and evil" in the literal sense, assumes that God would for any reason withhold from man the ability to discern between what is morally right and wrong—a view which contradicts the spirit of Scripture. Moreover, Adam would not have been made "in the image of God," if he did not from the first possess the faculty of distinguishing between good and evil. And if he lacked such faculty, his obedience or disobedience to any command whatsoever, could have no moral significance. None of these objections holds good in regard to the temporary withholding of ordinary knowledge from Adam, pending his decision to be with or against God.

6. the woman saw. Though the tempter did not tell the woman to eat the fruit, he had woven the spell. The woman looked upon the tree with a new longing—it was good to eat, a delight to the eyes, and it would give wisdom. She turns her back upon the impulses of gratitude, love and duty to God. The story mirrors human experience.

15. enmity. The sight of the serpent will create loathing in man, and fear of its deadly sting will call forth an instinctive desire to destroy it. There is an undying hate between sin and the human soul; sin corrupts man, but man can and will destroy sin.

life (Onkelos, Saadyah). W. Robertson Smith has shown that the word חי in the text which is here wrongly translated, "living," is the primitive Semitic word for "clan"; Eve was the mother of every human clan, the mother of mankind. חי in this sense occurs also in I Sam. xviii, 18 ("Who am I, and who are my kinsfolk, ומי חיי, or my father's family, etc." RV Margin.)

and clothed them. This is one of the passages on which the Rabbis base the Jewish ideal of Imitatio Dei, the duty of imitating God's ways of lovingkindness, and pity. "The beginning and the end of the Torah is the bestowal of lovingkindnesses," they say: "at the beginning of the Torah, God clothes Adam; and at its end, He buries Moses."

22–24 The Expulsion from Eden

22. man is become as one of us. As one of the angels; or, "us" is a plural of Majesty (cf. i, 26), meaning, man is become as God—omniscient. Man, having through disobedience secured the faculty of unlimited knowledge, there is real danger that his knowledge will outstrip his sense of obedience to Divine Law. In our own day, we see that deep insight into Nature's secrets, if unrestrained by considerations of humanity, may threaten the very existence of mankind; e.g. through chemical warfare.

secured through disobedience and lived in sin, an immortal life of Intellect without Conscience, would defeat the purpose of man's creation (Sforno). Therefore, not only for his punishment, but for his salvation, to bring him back from the sinister course on which he had entered, God sent man forth from the Garden. Man, having sunk into sin, must rise again through the spiritual purification of suffering and death (Strack).

24. drove out. Sin drives man from God's presence; and when man banishes God from his world, he dwells in a wilderness instead of a Garden of Eden.

Cherubim. What these really were is a matter of uncertainty. According to Rashi, they were "angels of destruction." The first man was forbidden to enter the Garden again, and the slightest attempt on his part to do so would bring down upon him instant destruction. In the Bible generally, the cherubim are symbols of God's presence (Exod. xxv, 18).

(b) CAIN, SETH AND THEIR DESCENDANTS

Chapters IV and V

IV, 1–16. Cain and Abel

This narrative decribes the spread of sin, issuing in violence and death!

1. gotten. The derivation is based on the resemblance of sound between Cain and the Heb. root kanah—to acquire.

with the help of the Lord. The four Heb. words spoken by Eve are very obscure. The traditional interpretation makes "a man" refer to Cain; and the words, an expression of thanksgiving for her child. Others refer "man" to husband (cf. XXIX, 32). The sequel to the act of disobedience in the Garden would have caused estrangement between husband and wife; and Eve rejoices in the birth of a child, because through Cain, she wins back her husband.

CHAPTER IV

4 1. And the man knew Eve his wife; and she conceived, and bare Cain, and said, I have gotten a man with the help of the Lord. 2. And again she bare his brother Abel. And Abel was a keeper of sheep, but Cain was a tiller of the ground.
3. And in process of time it came to pass, that Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the Lord. 4. And Abel, he also brought of the firstlings of his flock, and of the fat thereof.
And the Lord had respect unto Abel and to his offering: 5. but unto Cain and to his offering he had not respect. And Cain was very wroth, and his countenance fell. 6. And the Lord said unto Cain, Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen? 7. If thou doest well, shall it not be lifted up? and if thou doest not well,

2. Abel. In Assyrian, ablu means "son." The Heb. word signifies "a breath," like his life, so tragically brief. As the younger brother, Abel, is given the lighter task of caring for the flocks; while Cain assists his father in the cultivation of the soil.

3. an offering. This is the first mention of worship in Scripture. The religious instinct is part of man's nature, and sacrifice is the earliest outward expression of that worship. Its purpose was to express acknowledgment of His bounty to the Giver of all.

4. firstlings. The most highly-prized among the flocks.

the fat. The richest part of the animal.

arrest the progress of evil thoughts. Another interpretation is, " Shall there not be acceptance ? " sin coucheth. Sin is compared to a ravenous beast lying in wait for its prey. It crouches at the entrance of the house, to spring upon its victim as soon as the door is opened. By harbouring feelings of vexation, Cain opened the door of his heart to the evil passions of envy, anger, violence, which eventually ended in murder.

and unto thee. Passion and evil imagination are ever assaulting the heart of man; yet he can conquer them, if only he resist them with determination.

8. and Cain told. Or, " spake unto " (AJ). What is said is not mentioned. The ancient Versions supply some such words as, " let us go into the field." This is unnecessary, as Scripture often omits words (see II Chron. I, 2), which are obvious, and can be gathered from the context (Ehrlich).

in the field. Far away from their parents' home, where Cain had his brother at his mercy; cf. Deut. XXII, 25.

9. where is? As in III, 9, the object of the question is not information, but to elicit a confession of guilt (Rashi).

am I my brother's keeper? Cain's answer is both false and insolent. Only a murderer altogether renounces the obligations of brotherhood.

10. what hast thou done? The note of interrogation should be replaced by a note of exclamation. The meaning is: What a deed of horror hast thou wrought! This is further indicated by the fact that the word " brother " is used no less than six times in verses 8-11.

blood. The Heb. word is in the plural. In slaying Abel, Cain slew also Abel's unborn descendants. " He who sin coucheth at the door: and unto thee is its desire, but thou shouldest rule over it. 8. And Cain told Abel his brother. And it came to pass, when they were in the field, that Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and slew him. 9. And the Lord said unto Cain, Where is Abel thy brother? And he said, I know not: am I my brother's keeper? 10. And he said, What hast thou done? the voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground. 11. And now cursed art thou from the ground, which hath opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand; 12. when thou tillest the ground,

it shall not henceforth yield unto thee her strength;
a fugitive and a wanderer shalt thou be in the earth. 13. And Cain said unto the Lord, My punishment is greater than I can bear. 14. Behold, destroys a single human life is as if he destroyed a whole world" (Talmud).

crieth unto me. For vengeance. See Job XVI, 18, "Oh, earth, cover not thou my blood, and let my cry have no resting-place."

11. from the ground. Or, "more than the ground," upon which a curse had been pronounced (III, 17).

12. when thou tillest. Wherever he lives, the curse will follow him and the soil will be barren for him. The remainder of his existence will consequently be an unceasing vagabondage.

13. my punishment. The Heb. word עון means both the consequences of a sin, i.e. punishment, and the sin itself. The Targum renders "mine iniquity is too great to be pardoned." The Heb. word translated "than I can bear" can also be rendered, "to be forgiven." Rashi understands the phrase as a question, "Is my iniquity too great to be forgiven?"

and from thy face. To be "hidden from the face of God," (Deut. xxxi, 18) is to forfeit Divine protection. "This anguished cry of Cain reveals him as a man not wholly bad, one to whom banishment from the Divine presence is a distinct ingredient in his cup of misery" (Skinner).

whosoever findeth me. Cain feared death at the hands of some future "avenger of blood" (cf. Num. xxxv. 10f).

15. sevenfold. The number "seven" is occasionally used in the Bible to express an indefinite large number; cf. Lev. xxvi, 27; Prov. xxiv, 16. Cain's murderer shall be visited with a punishment far greater than that exacted of Abel's, as God had now made manifest His abhorrence of bloodshed to all.

appointed a sign for Cain. According to the Rabbis, Cain was a repentant sinner. God, therefore, reassured him that he would not be regarded as a common, intentional murderer. God's mercy to the guilty who repents of his sin is infinitely greater than that of man. The popular expression, the brand of Cain, in the sense of the sign of the murderer, arises from a complete misunderstanding of the passage.

16. from the presence of the Lord. Having forfeited God's favour, Cain withdraws from the neighbourhood of Eden, which was the special abode of the Divine Presence.

land of Nod. Nod means "Wandering."

thou hast driven me out this day from the face of the ground; and from thy face shall I be hid;
and I shall be a fugitive and a wanderer in the earth; and it shall come to pass, that whosoever findeth me shall slay me. 15. And the Lord said unto him, Therefore whosoever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him sevenfold. And the Lord appointed a sign for Cain, lest any finding him should smite him.

16. And Cain went out from the presence of the Lord, and dwelt in the land of Nod, on the east of Eden. 17. And Cain knew his wife; and she conceived, and bare Enoch: and he builded a city, and called the name of the city, after the name of his son, Enoch. 18. And unto Enoch was born Irad: and Irad begat Mehujael: and Mehujael begat Methushael: and Methushael begat Lamech. 19. And Lamech took unto him two wives: the name of the one was Adah, and the name of the other Zillah. 20. And Adah bare

17. and bare Enoch. Scripture only records the birth of sons to Adam and Eve. Daughters must also have been born to them, who became the wives of their brothers. The marriage of brother and sister was quite common in primitive times, but the Hebrew people looked upon it with such abhorrence (cf. Lev. XVIII, 9) that Scripture makes no reference to the identity of the wife in this passage.

he builded a city. lit. "he was building a city"; did not necessarily complete it. Cain said in his heart, "If it is decreed upon me to be a wanderer on the earth, the decree shall not apply to my offspring" (Nachmanides).

19. two wives. This is especially mentioned, as it was a departure from the ideal expounded in II, 24.

20. father. i.e. the first, the originator of nomad life, Abel had been the keeper of sheep (v. 2); but Jabal widened the class of animals which could be domesticated.

21. harp and pipe. Music, according to Hebrew tradition, is thus the most ancient art, dating from the beginnings of the human race.

22. brass. The Heb. is more accurately translated "copper," since it was a metal dug from the earth (Deut. VIII, 9). Brass is an alloy. The discovery of the use of metals forms an important step in the progress of civilisation.

Naamah. The word means, "pleasant, gracious." Jewish legend states that she became the wife of Noah.

23, 24. A triumphal song on the invention of the weapons mentioned in the preceding verse. Lamech possibly committed an act of involuntary homicide on some young person. He turns to his wives and says boastfully, "See! I have taken a man's life, though he only inflicted a bruise on me. Should the necessity arise, I feel able to lay low any assailant that crosses my path. If Cain, though unarmed, was promised a sevenfold vengeance on a foe, I, equipped with the weapons invented by Tubal-Cain, will be

And Zillah, she also bare Tubal-cain, the forger of every cutting instrument of brass and iron: and the sister of Tubal-cain was Naamah. 23. And Lamech said unto his wives:

Adah and Zillah, hear my voice;
Ye wives of Lamech, hearken unto my speech:
For I have slain a man for wounding me,
And a young man for bruising me:
24. If Cain shall be avenged sevenfold,
Truly Lamech seventy and seven fold.

25. And Adam knew his wife again; and she bare a son, and called his name Seth: for, said she, God hath appointed me another seed instead of Abel; for Cain slew him. 26. And to Seth, to him also there was born a son; and he called his name Enosh: then began men to call upon the name of the Lord.* vi to call upon. Then men began to pray to God (Ibn Ezra); or, once more call upon God under the name Adonay, Lord, which seems to have been forgotten among the descendants of Cain (Hoffmann).

Chaps. II–IV record the sin of Adam and Eve, their expulsion from Eden, the murder of Abel, Cain's descendants reaching in Lamech the climax of boastful and unrestrained violence. Piety, however, does not perish with Abel, and it reaches a new development in the days of Enosh (W. H. Green).

CHAPTER V. DESCENDANTS OF SETH

1. this is the book. Heb. sefer does not always mean a volume ; it may be used of any written document. Rabbinic tradition states the Torah is not one continuous work, written at one definite moment. " The Torah was given to Moses in separate scrolls " (תורה מגילה מגילה נתנה). The formula, " These are the generations," which occurs ten times in Genesis, each time beginning a new section, would mark the beginning of such scroll or " book." This explains why some sections, as this Chapter, have introductory verses which recall or summarise facts mentioned in earlier sections.

The book of the generations of Adam. Heb. זה ספר תולדות אדם, One of the early Rabbis, Ban Azzai, translated these words. " This is the book of the generations of Man," and declared them to be " a great, fundamental teaching of the Torah." As all human beings are traced back to one parent, he taught, they must necessarily be brothers. These words, therefore, proclaim the vital truth of the Unity of the Human Race, and the consequent doctrine of the Brotherhood of Man. " This is the book of the generations of Man "—not black, not white, not great, not small, but Man. In these Scrip-in the likeness. A reminder of the dignity of man's nature.

5. Various theories have been propounded to explain the abnormally long lives of these antediluvians. Maimonides holds that only the distinguished individuals named in this chapter lived these long years, but others lived a more or less normal span. The idea that men in primeval times lived extraordinarily long lives is common to the traditions of most ancient peoples.

Two names in this series of descendants of Seth, Enoch and Lamech, are identical with those among the children of Cain. In both cases, however, the connection makes it evident that they represent different characters.

22. walked with God. To avoid the anthropomorphism, Onkelos renders, "Enoch walked in the fear of God," and the Jerusalem Targum, "served in truth before the Lord." Whereas the other men enumerated merely existed and preserved the race physically, Enoch led a life of intimate companionship with God in that morally deteriorating age. The Heb. idiom "to walk with God" is employed to express a righteous course of life, as though the man who is thus described, walked with and was accompanied by his Maker. A similar phrase is used concerning Noah (VI, 9.)

24. and he was not. These words may mean either that, prematurely. Rashi explains that although Enoch was pious, he was weak and liable to go astray. To avert such a calamity, he was removed from earth.

for God took him. This description of death is profoundly significant. We come from God, and to Him do we return. To die is to be taken by God, in whose Presence there is life eternal.

Rabbinical legend was very busy with the story of Enoch. He was the repository of the mysteries of the universe; and even higher honours were accorded to him in the circles of the ancient Jewish mystics.

29. comfort. The Heb. word for Noah sounds like the Heb. word for "comfort." The birth of his child was regarded as the presage of a brighter time to the father. It proved a source of comfort in an age toiling hard on ground that brought forth little beyond thorns and thistles.

Instead of "comfort us," Rashi translates "shall give us rest"—referring to the invention of the plough, that was attributed to Noah, by which human labour was much lightened.

CHAPTER VI, 1–8. THE GROWING CORRUPTION OF MANKIND

1. multiply. This verse sums up the substance of preceding chapters.

2 לָהֶם׃ וַיִּרְאוּ בְנֵי־הָאֱלֹהִים אֶת־בְּנוֹת הָאָדָם כִּי טֹבֹת הֵנָּה

2. sons of God. Is the literal translation of the Heb. phrase, b'ne Elohim.

Among several primitive peoples there was a belief that there once existed a race of men of gigantic strength and stature who were the offspring of human mothers and celestial fathers, and we are supposed to have an echo of that legend in this Biblical passage. Ancient writers (Philo, Josephus and Book of Jubilees) were misled into this interpretation by the analogy of these heathen fables. There is, however, no trace in Genesis of "fallen angels" or rebellious angels; and the idea of inter-marriage of angels and human beings is altogether foreign to Hebrew thought. The mythological explanation of this passage was in all ages repelled by a large body of Jewish and non-Jewish commentators, though it has been revived by many moderns.

Others render b'ne Elohim by "sons of the great" (in poetic Hebrew, elohim often means "mighty," cf. Ps. XXIX, 1). This verse would thus state that the sons of the nobles took them wives of the daughters of the people, who were powerless to resist. These marriages were the result of mere unbridled passion, and are an indication of the licentious state of society at that time.

"Sons of God" may, however, also mean those who serve God and obey Him, those nourished and brought up in the love of Him as their Father and Benefactor (Exod. IV, 22; Deut. XIV, 1; XXXII, 5; Isa. I, 2; Hos. II, 1). It is quite in accord with Biblical usage that those who adhered to the true worship of God—the children of Seth—are called "sons of God"; and that, in contrast to these, the daughters of the line of Cain should be spoken of as "daughters of men" (Ibn Ezra, Mendelssohn, S. R. Hirsch, W. H. Green).

Verses 1-4 would then point out the calamitous consequences to mankind of the pious sons of Seth merging with those who had developed a God-less civilisation and who, with all their progress in arts and inventions, had ended in depravity and despair. Through inter-marriage, the sons were born unto them, 2. that the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all that they chose.

3. And the Lord said, My spirit shall not abide in man for ever, for that he also is flesh:
therefore shall his days be an hundred and twenty years. 4. The Nephilim were in the earth in those days, and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare of Seth sink to the level of the ungodly race; and likewise deserved the doom that, with the exception of one family, was to overtake mankind. These verses are thus the first warning in the Torah against inter-marriage with idolators.

3. abide in. The above interpretation is borne out by this verse. For, if "fallen angels" were in question, and if it was wrong for them to marry human women, the angels surely were the chief offenders; and yet the sentence falls exclusively upon man. "In God's judgments there is no unrighteousness, partiality, or even the appearance of partiality" (Keil).

for that he also is flesh. Another translation is, "by reason of their going astray they are flesh." Despite the fact that man is created in the Divine image, he has proved by his proneness to err that he is "flesh"; i.e. the earthly side of his nature too readily overpowers the spiritual.

an hundred and twenty years. i.e. his days are numbered: but I will not at once destroy him. There shall yet be an interval of 120 years, before I bring the Deluge upon mankind (Targum); a respite to the human race to give them time for penitence (Ibn Ezra).

4. Nephilim. Or, "giants." They existed before the inter-marriages took place. The mention of Nephilim in Num. XIII, 33, is no reason to assume that they survived the Flood. The excited imagination of the Spies expresses its terror at the men of great stature whom they saw at Hebron, by saying that they must be the old antediluvian giants (W. H. Green).

men of renown. By reason of their abnormal physical strength, they gained for themselves a reputation as heroes. But enduring fame does not rest upon such qualifications as these Nephilim possessed. Their fate was to disappear from the earth, and humanity was to continue through Noah, " a righteous man, and blameless in his generation."

5. wickedness. This verse and the two that follow form the climax to the previous four verses in which the moral depravity of the age is depicted. Retribution is swiftly coming.

6. repented. See note to Chap. II, 2. Here the feelings of a human being are ascribed to God. " He who destroys his own work seems to repent of having made it " (Ibn Ezra).

grieved him. A touching indication of the Divine love for His creation. God is grieved at the frustration of His purposes for the human race—the possibility of such frustration being the price of man's freedom of will. According to Biblical thought, God glories in the beauty of His handiwork; how great then must His grief be, when His handiwork is soiled through human wickedness!

7. I will blot out man. " In the Divine economy of the universe, men or nations, or generations, that thwart God's purpose, have no permanent title to life " (Kent).

had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart. 7. And the Lord said, I will blot out ground; both man, and beast, and creeping thing, and fowl of the air; for it repenteth me that I have made them. 8. But Noah found the animals alive!" But a comparison with Jonah IV, 11, where the innocence of the animals as well as of the little children, is invoked by the Prophet in his plea for Nineveh, suggests that in the Biblical view all life, whether human or animal, forms one organic whole. See v. 12 below.

8. grace. Favour. "Righteousness delivereth from death." On what grounds Noah won the Divine approval, is told in the next verse.

THE CREATION CHAPTER

Genesis I–II, 3, is a worthy opening of Israel's Sacred Scriptures, and ranks among the most important chapters of the Bible. Even in form it is pre-eminent in the literature of religion. No other ancient account of creation (cosmogony) will bear a second reading. Most of them not only describe the origin of the world, but begin by describing how the gods emerged out of pre-existent chaos (theogony). In contrast with the simplicity and sublimity of Genesis I, we find all ancient cosmogonies, whether it be the Babylonian or the Phoenician, the Greek or the Roman, alike unrelievedly wild, cruel, even foul.

Thus, the Assyro-Babylonian mythology tells how, before what we call earth or heaven had come into being, there existed a primeval watery chaos—Tiamat—out of which the gods were evolved :—

"When, in the height, heaven was not yet named,
And the earth beneath did not bear a name,
And the primeval Apsu (the Abyss), their begetter,
And Chaos (Tiamat), the mother of them both,
Their waters were mingled together,
Then were created the gods in the midst of heaven."

Apsu, the Abyss, disturbed at finding his domain invaded by the new gods, induced Tiamat and Chaos to join him in contesting their supremacy ; he was, however, subdued by the cunning of Ea ; and Tiamat, left to carry on the struggle alone, provides herself with a brood of hideous allies. The alarmed gods thereupon appoint Marduk as their champion. With winds and lightnings, Marduk advances ; he seizes Tiamat in a huge net, and "with his merciless club he crushed her skull." The carcase of the monster he split into two halves, one of which he fixed on high, to form a firmament supporting the waters above it. In the same grotesque way, the story continues to describe the formation of sun, moon, plants, animals and man. Many moderns feign to believe that this is the source from which Genesis I is taken. But a thorough-going Bible critic like the late Dr. Driver admits, "It is incredible that the monotheistic author of Genesis I could have borrowed any detail, however slight, from the polytheistic epic of the conflict of Marduk and Tiamat."

The infinite importance, however, of the first page of the Bible consists in the fact that it enshrines some of the fundamental beliefs of Judaism. Among these are:

I. God is the Creator of the Universe. Each religion has certain specific teachings, convictions, dogmas. Such a dogma of Judaism is its belief that the world was called into existence at the will of the One, Almighty and All-good God. And nowhere does this fundamental conviction of Israel's Faith find clearer expression than in Genesis I. When neighbouring peoples deified the sun, moon and stars, or worshipped stocks and stones and beasts, the sacred river Nile, the crocodile that swam in its waters, and the very beetles that crawled along its banks, the opening page of Scripture proclaimed in language of majestic simplicity that the universe, and all that therein is, are the product of one supreme directing Intelligence; of an eternal, spiritual Being, prior to them and independent of them.

Now, while the fact of creation has to this day remained the first of the articles of the Jewish Creed, there is no uniform and binding belief as to the manner of creation, i.e. as to the process whereby the universe came into existence. The manner of the Divine creative activity is presented in varying forms and under differing metaphors by Prophet, Psalmist and Sage; by the Rabbis in Talmudic times, as well as by our medieval Jewish thinkers. In the Bible itself we have at least three modes of representing the overwhelming fact of Divine Creation. Genesis I gives us the story of Creation in the form of a Divine drama set out in six acts of a day each, with a similar refrain (And there was evening, and there was morning, etc.) closing the creative work of each day. The Psalmist, to whom Nature was a continual witness of its Divine Author (Ps. XIX), gives in Psalm CIV a purely poetic representation of the Creation story:

"O Lord my God, Thou art very great;
Thou art clothed with honour and majesty.
Who coverest Thyself with light as with a garment;
Who stretchest out the heavens like a curtain . . .
Who maketh the clouds his chariot;
Who walketh upon the wings of the wind:
Who maketh winds his messengers . . . ."

Again, Proverbs VIII, 22-31, shows forth Divine Wisdom presiding at the birth of Nature.

The mode of creation continued to engage Jewish minds after the close of the Bible and throughout the Rabbinic period, even though the Mishna warns against all speculation concerning the beginning of things. To some, the relation of God to the universe was that of a mason to his work, and they accordingly spoke of God's "architect's plans"; others lost themselves in heretic fancies as to what constituted the raw material, so to speak, of Creation; while to Philo of Alexandria, Creation was altogether outside time. Several of the ancient Rabbis, followed by the later Mystics, believed in successive creations. Prior to the existence of the present universe, they held, certain formless worlds issued from the Fountain of Existence and then vanished, like sparks which fly from a red-hot iron beaten by a hammer, that are extinguished as they separate themselves from the burning mass. In contrast to these abortive creations, the medieval Jewish Mystics maintain, ours is the best of all possible worlds. It is the outcome of a series of emanations and eradiations from God, the Infinite, En Sof. Furthermore, Rashi, the greatest Jewish commentator of all times, taught that the purpose of Scripture was not to give a strict chronology of Creation; while no less an authority than Maimonides declared: "The account given in Scripture of the Creation is not, as is generally believed, intended to be in all its parts literal." Later Jewish philosophers (Levi ben Gerson, Crescas, Albalag) made dangerous concessions to the Aristotelian doctrine of the eternity of matter; which doctrine Yehudah Hallevi, among others, strongly opposed as both contrary to Reason and as limiting God's Omnipotence.

Jewish Attitude towards Evolution

In face of this great diversity of views as to the manner of creation, there is, therefore, nothing inherently un-Jewish in the evolutionary conception of the origin and growth of forms of existence from the simple to the complex, and from the lowest to the highest. The Biblical account itself gives expression to the same general truth of gradual ascent from amorphous chaos to order, from inorganic to organic, from lifeless matter to vegetable, animal and man; insisting, however, that each stage is no product of chance, but is an act of Divine will, realising the Divine purpose, and receiving the seal of the Divine approval. Such, likewise, is in effect the evolutionary position. Behind the orderly development of the universe there must be a Cause, at once controlling and permeating the process. Allowing for all the evidence in favour of interpreting existence in terms of the evolutionary doctrine, there still remain facts—tremendous facts—to be explained; viz., the origin of life, mind, conscience, human personality. For each of these, we must look back to the Creative Omnipotence of the Eternal Spirit. Nor is that all. Instead of evolution ousting design and purpose from nature, "almost every detail is now found to have a purpose and a use" (A. R. Wallace). In brief, evolution is conceivable only as the activity of a creative Mind purposing, by means of physical and biological laws, that wonderful organic development which has reached its climax in a being endowed with rational and moral faculties and capable of high ethical and spiritual achievement; in other words, as the activity of a supreme, directing Intelligence that has planned out, far back in the recesses of time, the ultimate goal of creation—"last in production, first in thought" סוֹף מַעֲשֶׂה בְּמַחֲשָׁבָה תְּחִלָּה. Thus evolution, far from destroying the religious teaching of Gen. I, is its profound confirmation.

As a noted scientist well remarks:

> "Slowly and by degrees, Science is being brought to recognise in the universe the existence of One Power, which is of no beginning and no end; which has existed before all things were formed, and will remain in its integrity when all is gone—the Source and Origin of all, in Itself beyond any conception or image that man can form and set up before his eye or mind. This sum total of the scientific discoveries of all lands and times is the approach of the world's thought to our Adon Olam, the sublime chant, by means of which the Jew has wrought and will further work the most momentous changes in the world" (Haffkine).

II. The second teaching of this chapter is, MAN IS THE GOAL AND CROWN OF CREATION—he is fundamentally distinguished from the lower creation, and is akin to the Divine. Man, modern scientists declare, is cousin to the anthropoid ape. But it is not so much the descent, as the ascent of man, which is decisive. Furthermore, it is not the resemblances, but the differences between man and the ape, that are of infinite importance. It is the differences between them that constitute the humanity of man, the God-likeness of man. The qualities that distinguish the lowest man from the highest brute make the differences between them differences in kind rather than in degree; so much so that, whatever man might have inherited from his animal ancestors, his advent can truly be spoken of as a specific Divine act, whereby a new being had arisen with God-like possibilities within him, and conscious of these God-like possibilities within him. Man is of God, declared Rabbi Akiba; and what is far more, he knows he is of God.

Nor is the Biblical account of the creation of man irreconcilable with the view that certain forms of organised being have been endowed with the capacity of developing, in God's good time and under the action of suitable environment, the attributes distinctive of man. "God formed man of the dust of the ground" (Gen. II, 7). Whence that dust was taken is not, and cannot be, of fundamental importance. Science holds that man was formed from the lower animals; are they not too "dust of the ground"? "And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature"—this command, says the Midrash, includes Adam as well, תוצא הארץ נפש חיה, זו רוחו של אדם הראשון. The thing that eternally matters is the breath of Divine and everlasting life that He breathed into the being coming from the dust. By virtue of that Divine impact, a new and distinctive creature made its appearance—man, dowered with an immortal soul. The sublime revelation of the unique worth and dignity of man, contained in Gen. I, 27 ("And God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him") may well be called the Magna Charta of humanity. Its purpose is not to explain the biological origins of the human race, but its spiritual kinship with God. There is much force in the view expressed by a modern thinker: "(The Bible) neither provides, nor, in the nature of things, could provide, faultless anticipations of sciences still unborn. If by a miracle it had provided them, without a miracle they could not have been understood" (Balfour). And fully to grasp the eternal power and infinite beauty of these words—"And God created man in His own image"—we need but compare them with the genealogy of man, condensed from the pages of one of the leading biologists of the age (Haeckel):

> "Monera begat Amoeba, Amoeba begat Synamoebae, Synamoebae begat Ciliated Larva, Ciliated Larva begat Primeval Stomach Animals, Primeval Stomach Animals begat Gliding Worms, Gliding Worms begat Skull-less animals, Skull-less animals begat Single-Nostrilled > animals, Single-nostrilled animals begat Primeval Fish, Primeval Fish begat Mud-fish, Mud-fish begat Gilled Amphibians, Gilled Amphibians begat Tailed Amphibians, Tailed Amphibians begat Primary Mammals, Primary Mammals begat Pouched Animals, Pouched Animals begat Semi-Apes, Semi-Apes begat Tailed Apes, Tailed Apes begat Man-like Apes, Man-like Apes begat Ape-like Men, Ape-like Men begat Men."

Let anyone who is disturbed by the fact that Scripture does not include the latest scientific doctrine, try to imagine such information provided in a Biblical chapter.

III. JUDAISM IS OPTIMISM, is the third teaching of this chapter. No less than five times is the refrain, "And God saw that it was good" repeated in the Creation Chapter. The world is not something hostile to God or independent of Him. All comes from God and all is His handiwork; all is in its essence good, nor is there anything absolutely evil. Israel acclaims God as the sole "King of the universe, who formest light and createst darkness, who makest peace and createst all things" (Authorised Prayer Book, p. 37). Though Nature seems to be indifferent to man's sense of compassion, the world is good, since goodness is its final aim : without struggle, there would be no natural selection or adaptation to changing surroundings, and therefore no progress from lower to higher. "And God saw everything that He had made, and, behold it was very good" —even suffering, evil, nay death itself, have a rightful and beneficent place in the Divine scheme, is the Rabbinic comment on this verse.

IV. THE SABBATH CONSECRATES WORK AND HALLOWS MAN'S LIFE, is the culminating teaching of the Chapter. The institution of the Sabbath is part of the cosmic plan, and therefore intended for all humanity. The Sabbath is a specifically Jewish contribution to human civilisation. "The actual Jewish Sabbath as we know it is without any point of contact in Babylonian institutions" (Skinner). The ancient Babylonians had "a day of cessation," which they called by a name somewhat similar to "Sabbath," and it was observed on the 7th, 14th, 19th, 21st and 28th days of the months Ellul and Marcheshvan. These were considered unlucky days, and on them the king was not to offer sacrifice, nor consult an oracle, nor invoke curses on his enemies. Quite other is the Jewish Sabbath. It is not merely a day of cessation from toil. On the one hand, it has its positive aspect as a day of spiritual recreation; and, on the other hand, it is a day of joy, and is greeted in the Synagogue in the words לכה דודי לקראת כלה ("Come, my Beloved, to meet the Bride, Queen Sabbath"). It banishes toil and sorrow—a symbol of immortality, of that Life which is wholly a Sabbath.

God the Creator and Lord of the Universe, which is the work of His goodness and wisdom; and Man, made in His image, who is to hallow his week-day labours by the blessedness of Sabbath-rest—such are the teachings of the Creation chapter. Its purpose is to reveal these teachings to the children of men—and not to serve as a text-book of astronomy, geology or anthropology. Its object is not to teach scientific facts; but to proclaim highest religious truths respecting God, Man and the Universe. The "conflict" between the fundamental realities of Religion and the established facts of Science, is seen to be unreal as soon as Religion and Science each recognizes the true borders of its dominion.

Additional Note B

THE GARDEN OF EDEN

Chapter III is one of the most beautiful in the Bible. It has been called the "pearl of Genesis," and men read with wonder its profound psychology of temptation and conscience. With unsurpassable art, it shows the beginning, the progress and the culmination of temptation and the consequences of sin. It depicts the earliest tragedy in the life of each human soul—the loss of man's happy, natural relation with God, through deliberate disobedience of the voice of conscience, the voice of God. "Every man who knows his own heart, knows that the story is true; it is the story of his own fall. Adam אדם is man, and his story is ours" (McFadyen).

Is the narrative literal or figurative, and is the Serpent an animal, a demon or merely the symbolic representation of Sin? Various have been the answers to these questions; and none of them are of cardinal importance to the Faith of the Jew. There is nothing in Judaism against the belief that the Bible attempts to convey deep truths of life and conduct by means of allegory. The Rabbis often taught by parable; and such method of instruction is, as is well known, the immemorial way among Oriental peoples. Eminent Jewish thinkers, like Maimonides and Nachmanides, have accordingly understood this chapter as a parable; and Saadyah regarded the Serpent as the personification of the sinful tendencies in man, the Yetzer hara, the Evil Imagination.

Two fundamental religious truths are reflected in this Chapter. One of them is, the seriousness of sin. There is an everlasting distinction between right and wrong, between good and evil. There have always been voices—Serpent voices—deriding all moral do's and don'ts, proclaiming instinct and inclination to be the truest guides to human happiness, and bluntly denying that any evil consequences follow defiance of God's commands. This Chapter for all time warns mankind against these insidious and fateful voices. In the words of Isaiah it seems to say, "Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter! Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes."

The other vital teaching of this chapter is, Free will has been given to man, and it is in his power either to work with or against God. It is not the knowledge of evil, but the succumbing to it, which is deadly; man may see the forbidden fruit, he need not eat of it. Man himself can make or mar his destiny. In all ages and in all conditions, man has shown the power to resist the suggestions of sin and proved himself superior to the power of evil. And if a man stumble and fall on the pathway of life, Judaism bids him rise again and seek the face of his Heavenly Father in humility, contrition and repentance. "If a man sin, what is his punishment?" ask the Rabbis. The answer of the Prophet is, "The soul that sinneth it shall die"—the wages of sin is death. The answer of Sage is, "Evil pursueth the evil-doer"—the wages of sin is sin. The answer of the Almighty is, "Let a man repent, and his sin will be forgiven him"—the wages of sin is repentance.

Jewish View of the "Fall of Man"

Strange and sombre doctrines have been built on this chapter of the Garden of Eden, such as the Christian doctrine of Original Sin (e.g. "In Adam's fall, we sinned all"—New England Primer. "The condition of man after the fall of Adam is such that he cannot turn and prepare himself by his own natural strength and good works to faith and calling upon God." Art x, Free Will, of the Thirty-nine Articles). This Christian dogma of Original Sin is throughout the Middle Ages accompanied by an unbelievable vilification of Woman, as the authoress of death and all our earthly woe. Judaism rejects these doctrines. Man was mortal from the first, and death did not enter the world through the transgression of Eve. Stray Rabbinic utterances to the contrary are merely homiletic, and possess no binding authority in Judaism. There is no loss of the God-likeness of man, nor of man's ability to do right in the eyes of God; and no such loss has been transmitted to his latest descendants. Although a few of the Rabbis occasionally lament Eve's share in the poisoning of the human race by the Serpent, even they declare that the antidote to such poison has been found at Sinai; rightly holding that the Law of God is the bulwark against the devastations of animalism and godlessness. The Psalmists often speak of sin and guilt; but never is there a reference to this chapter or to what Christian Theology calls "The Fall." One searches in vain the Prayer Book, of even the Days of Penitence, for the slightest echo of the doctrine of the Fall of man. "My God the soul which Thou hast given me is pure," is the Jew's daily morning prayer. "Even as the soul is pure when entering upon its earthly career, so can man return it pure to his Maker" (Midrash).

Instead of the Fall of man (in the sense of humanity as a whole), Judaism preaches the Rise of man; and instead of Original Sin, it stresses Original Virtue (זכות אבות), the beneficent hereditary influence of righteous ancestors upon their descendants. "There is no generation without its Abraham, Moses or Samuel," says the Midrash; i.e. each age is capable of realising the highest potentialities of the moral and spiritual life. Judaism clings to the idea of Progress. The Golden Age of Humanity is not in the past, but in the future (Isaiah II and XI); and all the children of men are destined to help in the establishment of that Kingdom of God on earth.

II. NOACH

(Chapters VI, 9–XI, 32)

THE FLOOD

The primeval traditions recorded in the early chapters of Genesis, stretch away into prehistoric times, and enshrine in outline, great universal truths that touch the origin and meaning of Life and Man. The Rabbis tell us that the Patriarch Jacob spent fourteen years in the centres of ancient Semitic learning, the "academies of Shem and Eber", (בבית מדרשו של שם ועבר) acquiring the ancient traditions which he handed on to his descendants. Among these was the memory of a fearful upheaval with an all-destroying Flood that caused a complete breach in the continuity of civilisation in the primitive dwelling-place of mankind. Striking evidence is now at hand that the Bible story of the Flood is an event in historic times, approximately about the year 3800 before the Common Era. "New discoveries have brought history so close to the Flood period and have produced so many phenomena requiring for their explanation just such an event as the Flood is supposed to have been, that the a priori denial of the Flood becomes thoroughly unscientific. We are justified in asking for more evidence, but there can be little doubt which way that evidence will trend" (L. Woolley). As it was recounted in the families of the Patriarchs, the story of that Flood is of great ethical and religious value. The Deluge was a Divine judgment upon an age in which might was right, and depravity degraded and enslaved the children of men. There were giants on earth in those days; they were the "men of renown"; and life to these super-men meant unscrupulous selfishness and the deification of power and pleasure.

Among these men of violence, one man alone was upright and blameless, Noah, who believed in justice and practised mercy. He preached to the men of his generation—the Rabbis tell us—and warned them that a Deluge was coming, peradventure they might desist from iniquity and turn to righteousness. In vain. He saw that entire generation swept away; but he also lived to see the Rainbow of Promise, and the beginnings of a better world that was eventually to gain in strength, and to find lasting expression in Abraham and his descendants.

9. these are the generations. i.e. this is the story of Noah. This phrase, as in II, 4, introduces a new section of the history.

righteous. In his actions, in his relationship with his fellows.

blameless. "Whole-hearted" (AJ); faultless.

in his generations. The Rabbis point out that these words may be understood either as praise or as blame of Noah. It may be understood as stating that, despite the depravity which raged around him, he remained unspotted and untainted by corruption. It may, however, also mean that in his generations, i.e. judged by the low standard of his age, Noah was righteous; but had he lived in the period of Abraham, he would not have been conspicuous for goodness.

Noah walked with God. But Abraham, Scripture later tells us, walked before God. A father takes his young child by the hand so that the latter walks with him, but he allows an older, maturer child to walk before him. In moral strength, Abraham was the superior of Noah (Midrash).

9. These are the generations of Noah. Noah was a righteous man, and blameless in his generations: Noah walked with God. 10. And Noah begat three sons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth.
11. And the earth was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence. 12. And God saw the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth.
13. And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them: and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth. 14. Make thee an ark of gopher wood; rooms shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without

to a cubit. The precise meaning of these words is doubtful. The "light" (which must be thought of as a kind of casement near to the roof) was to measure a cubit in height;

with pitch. 15. And this is how thou shalt make it: the length of the ark three hundred cubits,
the breadth of it fifty cubits, and the height of it thirty cubits. 16. A light shalt thou make to the ark, and to a cubit shalt thou finish it upward;
and the door of the ark shalt thou set in the side thereof; with lower, second, and third stories shalt thou make it. 17. And I, behold, I do bring the flood of waters upon the earth, to destroy all flesh, wherein is the breath of life, from under heaven; every thing that is in the earth shall die. 18. But I will establish my covenant with thee: and thou shalt come into the ark, thou,
and thy sons, and thy wife, and thy sons' wives with thee. 19. And of every living thing of all flesh, two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark, to keep them alive with thee; they shall be male and female. 20. Of the fowl after their kind, and of the cattle after their kind, of every creeping thing of the ground after its kind, two of every sort shall come unto thee, to keep them alive. 21. And take thou unto thee of all food that is eaten, and gather it to thee; and it shall be for food for thee, and for them. 22. Thus did Noah; according to all that God commanded him, so did he.* ii

or there was to be a space of a cubit between the roof and the top of the casement.

17. and I, behold I. These emphatic words bring out the thought of the terrible necessity of the Flood.

18. covenant. A covenant means an agreement or compact between two parties, for the observance of which pledges are given. Here it is used in the simple sense of a promise. God will fulfil His promise to spare Noah and his family.

22. thus did Noah. i.e. he made the ark and collected provisions. The act of bringing the animals into the ark is described in the next chapter.

Chapter VII, 1–9. Entering the Ark

1. righteous. In vi, 9, Noah was described as "righteous and blameless." Since the present verse was addressed to Noah, whereas vi, 9 was spoken of him in his absence, the Rabbis deduced the rule: "Utter only a part of a man's praise in his presence, but thou mayest speak the whole of a man's praise in his absence." Most people unfortunately give utterance to the whole of a man's blame in his absence, graciously contenting themselves with only a portion of such blame in his presence.

2. clean beast. According to Rashi, this means "of every beast which at a later period would be considered clean by the people of Israel" (Lev. xi and Deut. xiv). But more probably, the distinction between clean and unclean in this passage is based on the fitness of the animal to be used as a sacrifice to God; cf. viii, 20, where it is narrated that Noah offered upon the altar "of every clean beast, and of every clean fowl."

seven and seven. i.e. seven pairs; seven males and seven females. The general direction in vi, 19 to take a pair of each kind of animals into the ark in order to preserve alive the various species, is here supplemented by the more specific

CHAPTER VII

7 1. And the Lord said unto Noah, Come thou and all thy house into the ark; for thee have
I seen righteous before me in this generation.
2. Of every clean beast thou shalt take to thee seven and seven, the male and his female; and of the beasts that are not clean two, the male and his female; 3. of the fowl also of the air,
seven and seven, male and female: to keep seed alive upon the face of all the earth. 4. For yet seven days, and I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days and forty nights; and every living thing that I have made will I blot out from off the face of the ground. 5. And injunction, when the time arrived for entering the ark, that of the clean beasts there shall be seven of each species. As Rashi points out, he required additional clean animals for sacrifice on leaving the ark. From the phrasing of the verse, Malbim shows that the command is concerning Noah's domestic animals. (Hence the phrase איש ואשתו instead of זכר ונקבה in vi, 19).

beasts that are not clean. Of Noah's domestic animals—such as hares, asses, camels—he was to take two each. The phrase "that are not clean" is itself noteworthy. It is a circumlocution which might have been avoided by the use of the simple word "unclean." The Talmud bases on this verse its admonition to avoid impure and unrefined language in conversation.

3. the fowl. From the context it is evident that clean fowl is intended. There would be no unclean fowl, e.g. birds of prey, among Noah's household belongings.

4. for yet seven days. To give Noah time to carry out the instructions which had been given him.

9. two and two. In couples.

10-24. "THE WINDOWS OF HEAVEN WERE OPENED"

11. in the second month. The Rabbis differ as to whether the year is here reckoned as beginning in Nisan or Tishri. On the view that the year commenced with Tishri, the Flood began about November, which is the time of the rainy season. More probably, the Flood began in May, which is the time of the inundation of the Babylonian plain.

that the waters of the flood were upon the earth.

the second month, on the seventeenth day of the

of the great deep broken up, and the windows of heaven were opened. 12. And the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights.

v. 23. הַמ׳ רפה

16. The Lord shut him in. This means either literally that God fastened the door so that it withstood the violence of the storm; or it is a beautifully naive figure of speech to denote the Divine protection which encompassed Noah. Hence the employment of the term Lord, Adonay, for this act of Divine mercy (cf. note II, 4).

17. the waters increased. After it had rained for forty days, the waters were sufficiently deep to bear the ark which, as Rashi remarks, had previously been like a heavily-laden ship stuck in shallow water and unable to move.

18. the waters prevailed. They covered the earth. It will be noted that there were three stages in the increase of the waters. The first was marked by the lifting of the ark (v. 17); the second by the floating of the ark (v. 18); the third by the total submergence of the mountains (v. 19).

20. fifteen cubits upward. This means that the waters

went in, went in male and female of all flesh,
as God commanded him: and the Lord shut him in.* iii 17. And the flood was forty days upon the earth; and the waters increased, and bare up the ark, and it was lift up above the earth.
18. And the waters prevailed, and increased greatly upon the earth; and the ark went upon the face of the waters. 19. And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth; and all the high mountains that were under the whole heaven were covered. 20. Fifteen cubits upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered. 21. And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both fowl, and cattle, and beast, and every swarming thing that swarmeth upon the earth, and every man: 22. all in whose nostrils was the breath of the spirit of life, of all that was in the dry land, died. 23. And he blotted out every living thing which was upon the face of the ground, both man, and cattle, and creeping thing,
and fowl of the heaven; and they were blotted
out from the earth: and Noah only was left, and they that were with him in the ark. 24. And

24. prevailed. Dominated the earth. After forty days' downpour, the waters reached their highest point, and remained so for a period of one hundred and ten days. After 150 days had passed from the commencement of the Flood, the waters began to diminish.

Chapter VIII, 1–5. The Diminution of Waters

1. God remembered. His covenanted promise to Noah that He would preserve him, and all that were with him in the ark (Ibn Ezra). The animals are expressly included in the kindly thought of God. As there is no forgetfulness with God, so we cannot really apply the term remembrance to him (Kimchi). This phrase which is in continual use in devotion is only a human way of speaking of the Divine assuaged. The Heb. verb is used of anger being calmed down (Esther ii, 1). The waters grew calm after the fury of the storm.

3. returned . . . . continually. i.e. kept gradually diminishing.

an hundred and fifty days. Cf. vii, 24. The Flood commenced on the 17th day of the second month (vii, 11); and 150 days later, on the 17th of the seventh month, the waters had decreased to such an extent that the ark grounded on the mountains of Ararat.

the mountains of Ararat. Ararat is the name of a country; see Isa. xxxvii, 38, where the Septuagint translates Ararat

CHAPTER VIII

the seventeenth day of the month, upon the mountains of Ararat. 5. And the waters decreased continually until the tenth month: in the tenth month, on the first day of the month,
were the tops of the mountains seen.

window. lit. "aperture." The Heb. is a different word from that used in VI, 16.

The aperture must have been too small to enable Noah to put his head through, and see for himself what was the state of things outside. The only view he could obtain was of the sky; he, therefore, had recourse to the birds for the purpose of obtaining information. He selected the raven because, as a bird of prey, the raven would sustain itself by feeding on carrion which would abound if the earth were dry.

7. it went forth to and fro. It kept going backwards and forwards. So long as the raven returned to the ark, Noah knew that the waters still covered the earth.

8. sent forth a dove. Rashi explains that between the sending forth of the raven and the sending forth of the dove there was an interval of seven days, since in v. 10 it is stated " he stayed yet another seven days." Noah changed his scout, because the action of the dove would give more reliable information. The dove fed on vegetation; and should it find food, Noah would have the sign for which he was waiting.

11. at eventide. Noah had presumably let the dove out in the morning. It must therefore have flown a considerable distance if it did not return until the evening. The inference was that the earth all around was covered by water.

olive leaf. Since the olive tree grew to no great height, Noah understood that the waters had almost disappeared, though not completely. He, therefore, waited another week. The Rabbis have a beautiful comment on the fact

he had made: 7. and he sent forth a raven, and it went forth to and fro, until the waters were dried up from off the earth. 8. And he sent forth a dove from him, to see if the waters were abated from off the face of the ground; 9. but the dove found no rest for the sole of her foot, and she returned unto him to the ark, for the waters were on the face of the whole earth: and he put forth his hand, and took her, and brought her in unto him into the ark. 10. And he stayed yet other seven days; and again he sent forth the dove out of the ark; 11. and the dove came in to him at eventide; and, lo, in her mouth a fresh olive leaf:
so Noah knew that the waters were abated from off the earth. 12. And he stayed yet other seven days; and sent forth the dove; and she returned not again unto him any more.
13. And it came to pass in the six hundred and first year, in the first month, the first day of the month, the waters were dried up from off the earth: and Noah removed the covering of the ark, and looked, and behold, the face of the ground was dried. 14. And in the second month,

Chapter IX, 1–17. The Covenant with Noah. The Seven Commandments of Man

1–2. The blessing which was bestowed on Adam (I, 28) is repeated, since Noah and his sons were the heads of a new race. The Divine benediction would hearten them to undertake the task of rebuilding a ruined world.

3. every moving thing. The term is here used in a wide sense to include beast, fish and fowl.

as the green herb. The meaning is that just as the green herb was granted to man as food by God (I, 29), so now permission is given him to partake of the flesh of animals.

4. blood. In the Biblical conception, the blood is identified with the life; cf. Deut. XII, 23, "for the blood is the life." This thought was the obvious deduction from the fact that as the blood is drained from the body, the vitality weakens until it ceases altogether. Life, in every form, has in it an

CHAPTER IX

9 1. And God blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth. 2. And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every fowl of the air; with all wherewith
the ground teemeth, and all the fishes of the sea, into your hand are they delivered. 3. Every moving thing that liveth shall be food for you;
as the green herb have I given you all. 4. But thereof, shall ye not eat. 5. And surely your element of holiness, since God is the source of all life. Therefore, although permission was given to eat the flesh of an animal, this was done with one special restriction; viz., life must altogether have departed from the animal before man partakes of its flesh. According to Rashi, the restriction was of a twofold nature. It, firstly, forbade אבר מן החי "cutting a limb from a live animal"—a barbarous practice common among primitive races; and secondly, the blood must not on any account be eaten, since it was the seat of life. This double prohibition of cruelty to animals and the partaking of blood, is the basis of most of the rules of the Jewish slaughter of animals (Shechitah) and of the preparation (kashering) of meats, which have been observed by Jews from time immemorial.

5. the blood of your lives. lit. "Your blood, according to your own souls." The Rabbis understood these words at the hand of every man's brother. Better, "at the hand of his brother-man" (M. Friedlander). This clause emphasises the preceding phrase, "and at the hand of man." If God seeks the blood of a man at the hand of a beast which kills him, how much more will He exact vengeance from a human being who murders his brother-man!

6. by man. This is usually understood, as the Targum has it, through the agency of man, viz., by judges or by an avenger.

for in the image of God. See i, 27. We have here a declaration of the native dignity of man, irrespective of his race or creed. Because man is created in the image of God, he can never be reduced to the level of a thing or chattel; he remains a personality, with inalienable human rights. To rob a man of these inalienable rights constitutes an outrage against the Divine. It is upon this thought that the Jewish conception of Justice, as respect for human personality, rests.

7. This verse is not a superfluous repetition of v. 1. It gives a further reason why God holds bloodshed in such abhorrence. It is His desire that life should be multiplied, and not diminished through murder. The Talmud founded on this verse its strong condemnation of him who does not fulfil the command to found a family.

Rabbinic interpretation of these verses deduced seven fundamental laws from them: viz. (1) the establishment of courts of justice; (2) the prohibition of blasphemy; (3) of idolatry; (4) of incest; (5) of bloodshed; (6) of robbery; (7) of eating flesh cut from a living animal. The Rabbis called these seven laws the "Seven Commandments given to the descendants of Noah." These constitute what we might call Natural Religion, as they are vital to the existence of human society. Whereas an Israelite was to carry out all the precepts of the Torah, obedience to these Seven Commandments alone was in ancient times required of non-Jews living among Israelites, or attaching themselves to the Jewish community.

13. I have set my bow. This does not imply that the rainbow was then for the first time instituted ; it merely assumed a new role as a token of the Divine pledge that there would never again be a world-devastating Deluge. " We must explain the verse as saying, The bow which I have set in the clouds from the day of creation shall henceforth be a token of the covenant between Me and you . . . a covenant of peace " (Nachmanides). The same commentator further asserts, " We must accept the view of the Greeks that the rainbow is the result of the reflection of the sun in the moist atmosphere," i.e. the refraction and reflection of light.

16. I will look upon it. The Midrashic comment is : " When the attribute of Justice will come to accuse you and hold you guilty of offending, then I will look upon the bow and remember the covenant."

in a child's moral training. An intelligent child cannot help now and then detecting a fault or something to laugh at in his parents; but instead of mockery or callous exposure, it is for him to throw the mantle of filial love over the fault and turn away his face. "Am I the one to judge my parents?" a child should ask himself (F. Adler). Few Jewish children have parents who are drunkards, but there is a great number whose fathers and mothers do not, e.g. speak the language of the land as fluently as they do. Instead of laughing at them, Jewish children should be taught to feel: "Have my parents had the opportunities in life that they have given me?" Especially calamitous is it for a teacher to pour ridicule upon the native tongue and customs of the homes of the children under his charge. Such conduct turns some of them into little Hams and Canaans, despising or even openly mocking their parents.

25. cursed be Canaan. It was firmly held in ancient time (cf. XLVIII and XLIX) that the blessing or curse which a father pronounced upon a child affected the latter's descendants. We, therefore, have here in effect a forecast of the future, that the Canaanites would be a servile and degraded race.

servant of servants. A Hebraism expressing the superlative degree; the meanest, most degraded, servant; cf. "holy of holies," i.e. holy in the highest degree.

26. the God of Shem. The meaning is, Blessed be the God who will, in the days to come, keep His promise to the descendants of Shem—the Israelites—the promise to give unto them the land of Canaan for a possession, and to be their God and their Guide.

27. God enlarge Japheth. A play on the root-meaning of the name, which may mean "enlargement." There is an important difference between the blessings bestowed on Shem and Japheth respectively. Of Shem, the ancestor of the Jewish race, it is said, "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Shem"—an indication of Israel's nearness to God and of his destiny as the guardian and missioner of religion. Japheth, the progenitor of the other Indo-European or Aryan peoples, receives the blessing of "enlargement," i.e. worldly prosperity and widespread dominion, but he was to dwell "in the tents of Shem." Friendly relations should subsist between the Semitic and Japhetic races. This is the first of the universalist forecasts in Scripture of the day when enmity between nations will be forgotten, and they unite in acknowledgement of the God of Israel.

The word Japheth may also mean "beauty." The Rabbis spoke admiringly of the cultural contribution of Japheth (Greece) to human life; but they conceived beauty under the category of purity, and longed for Japheth i.e. the beauty of Greece, to dwell in the tents of Shem. Since their day, serious-minded men have looked forward to a Hellenism moralised by Hebraic righteousness and holiness.

Chapter X. The Family of the Nations

This chapter traces the nations of the earth to the sons of Noah. The principal races and peoples known to the Israelites are arranged as if they were different branches of one great family. Thus, all the nations are represented as having sprung from the same ancestry. All men are therefore brothers. This sublime conception of the Unity of the Human Race logically follows from the belief in the Unity of God, and like it, forms one of the corner-stones of the edifice of Judaism. Polytheism could never rise to the idea of Humanity; heathen society "was vitiated by failure to recognize the moral obligation involved in our common humanity" (Elmslie). There is, therefore, no parallel to this chapter in the literature of any other ancient people. It has been rightly called a Messianic document.

While the surpassing importance of this wonderful chapter is religious, "the so-called table of the nations remains, according to all results of archaeological exploration, an ethnographic original document of the first rank which

1. Shem, Ham and Japheth. As in VI, 10; but in the list that follows the order is reversed and Shem is dealt with last, since it is a descendant of Shem—Abram—whose story is to follow.

2. Contains the names of peoples in Asia Minor.

Gomer. The Cimmerians, on the shores of the Caspian Sea.

Magog. The Scythians whose territory lay on the borders of the Caucasus.

Madai. The Medes.

Javan. The Greeks; (Ionians, in the older language, Iawones).

3. Ashkenaz. From a reference in Jer. LI, 27 we learn that they lived in the neighbourhood of Ararat, Armenia. In later Jewish literature, Ashkenaz is used to denote Germany; hence, Ashkenazim, the term for Jews hailing from Germanic countries, in contrast to Sephardim, Jews from Spain and Portugal.

Riphath and Togarmah. Peoples of Asia Minor.

4. Elishah. Most scholars see the word "Hellas" in the name. Others identify it with Southern Italy, Sicily or Cyprus.

Tarshish. Frequently mentioned in the Bible as a flourishing and wealthy seaport. It is generally identified with Tartessus in ancient Spain.

Kittim. A race inhabiting part of the island of Cyprus, of Phœnician extraction.

Dodanim. In I Chron. 1, 4–25 (with which this chapter should be compared) it is written Rodanim, i.e. the inhabitants of the Rhodian islands in the Ægean Sea. Both forms,

Sometimes an event is anticipated, at other times it is told in connection with a later event. אין מוקדם ומאוחר בתורה

6. Ham. The most ancient name for Egypt was "Chem," meaning "black," alluding no doubt to the dark colour of the Egyptian soil.

Cush. Ethiopia.

Mizraim. The most common name for Egypt. The Heb. form of the name is dual, and refers to the division into Upper and Lower Egypt.

Put. Lybia.

Canaan. The word is probably derived from a root meaning "to be low," and Canaan was the term originally applied to the lowland of the coast of Phœnicia and the land of the Philistines. The name was afterwards extended to the whole of Western Palestine. According to this verse, Mizraim and Canaan were "brothers"; i.e. Palestine and Egypt were provinces of the same Empire. This was the case only in the time of the Nineteenth Dynasty, the age of Moses (Sayce). It was quite untrue of the time of the Exile when the alleged author of "P" (see p. 106) is said to have lived. The name "Persians" does not occur in the chapter, because in the days of Moses, these did not yet exist.

7. Tribes and places on the African coast of the Red Sea, or on the opposite shore of Arabia.

Sheba. A great commercial state in Southern Arabia. The Queen of Sheba visited King Solomon (I Kings, x).

8. Nimrod. Nimrod is a descendant of Ham. It is now established that the original founders of Babylonian civilisation, the Sumerians, were a people of non-Semitic stock.

cf. XXII, 14, Num. XXXI, 14, etc. Nimrod's exploits became proverbial.

10. beginning of his kingdom. When he commenced to reign, his dominion extended over the cities here enumerated.

Babel. Babylon; its building is described in the next chapter. It was the centre of the ancient Orient, and for many centuries, the mistress of the world.

Erech. The Babylonian city "Uruk," now called "Warka," on the left bank of the lower Euphrates.

Accad. Name of a city, Agade; also of the land of Accad, Northern Babylonia.

Shinar. A Heb. name for Babylonia; cf. XIV, 1, 9; Joshua VII, 21, etc. Some identify Shinar with "Sumir," the land of the Sumerians (Delitzsch, Jampel).

11. he went forth into Assyria. i.e. Nimrod extended his kingdom and took possession of Assyria (Asshur). Archaeology confirms the Biblical statement that the cities of Assyria owed their existence to the development of Babylonian power by conquest and colonisation.

Nineveh. The capital of Assyria.

12. great city. i.e. Nineveh together with the other three places constituted one great city (Jonah III, 3).

Lehabim. The Lybians.

Naphtuhim. The dwellers of the Nile Delta.

whence went forth the Philistines. A difficulty arises from the fact that in Deut. II, 23, Amos IX, 7, the Philistines are spoken of as coming from Caphtor, i.e. Crete. The explanation may be that there were two immigrations of Philistines, one by way of the Egyptian sea-coast and the other from Crete. They have given their name to the land, "Palestine."

Caphtorim. The inhabitants of Crete.

15. Zidon his firstborn. "Firstborn," the oldest settlement of the Canaanites. Zidon, the capital of ancient Phœnicia, stands for the whole country.

Heth. The Hittites, a powerful and warlike nation who held sway in Syria and Asia Minor from 1800 to 900 B.C.E. Wonderful remains of their civilization have been unearthed since the beginning of this century, and their language is now deciphered.

16. Jebusite. This tribe dwelt in and around Jerusalem, which was originally known as Jebus.

Amorite. This term is sometimes used to denote all the inhabitants of Canaan before the coming of the Israelites, and sometimes one particular warlike tribe amongst the Canaanites.

Girgashite. One of the peoples driven from Canaan by the Israelites (xv, 21).

17. These tribes, mentioned in this and in the following verse, lived in greater or less proximity to Mt. Lebanon.

spread abroad. They extended into the territory mentioned in the next verse.

19. The border of the Canaanites was originally within the limits stated in this verse—from Zidon in the North to Gaza in the South, and from Sodom and Gomorrah in the South-east to Lasha in the North-east of Palestine.

22-24. According to this genealogical table, Eber was the great-grandson of Shem; but he was the ancestor of Abram who is called Ha-ibri (XIV, 13). From "Eber" is formed the word "Hebrew," the name by which the Israelites were known to foreign peoples. Special stress is here laid on Eber because he is, through Abram, the ancestor of the people of Israel.

22. Elam. The name of a land and people beyond Babylonia and the Persian Gulf—the eastern-most people with which the descendants of Shem were brought into contact. As the Elam of history is Aryan, the correctness of the Biblical view that Elam is a son of Shem was questioned. The French exploration at Susa, however, has shown that the oldest Elamite inscriptions are written in Babylonian, which proves that early Elam was peopled by Semites. Bible critics did not relish the idea of being robbed of one of their stock arguments against the trustworthiness of this chapter. But as they are forced to admit that the statement in regard to Elam is correct, they add : " The fact [that his statement is correct] is not one which the writer of the verse is very likely to have known " (Driver). No clearer proof is needed of the negative dogmatism of Bible critics.

Asshur. Assyria, the most powerful of the Semitic peoples.

Arpachshad. Sayce explains the name as " the territory of the Chasd " (cf. Ur of the Casdim, i.e. Chaldæans).

Lud. The Lydians of Asia Minor.

Aram. The Aramæan or Syrian people whose territory included Mesopotamia (" Aram of the two Rivers "). Both the Aramæan people and language were destined to exert great influence in Jewish history.

23. Uz. The land where Job lived (Job, I). In Lam. IV, 21, the Edomites are mentioned as dwelling in the land of Uz.

and Uzal, and Diklah; 28. and Obal, and Abimael, and Sheba; 29. and Ophir, and Havilah, and Jobab: all these were the sons of Joktan. 30. And their dwelling was from Mesha, as thou goest

are the sons of Shem, after their families, after their tongues, in their lands, after their nations.

32. These are the families of the sons of Noah, after their generations, in their nations: and of these were the nations divided in the earth after the flood.* vii

Hul, Gether, Mash. Unidentified localities in Syria.

25. divided. By "earth," is meant the population of the earth. The allusion is probably to the scattering of the peoples described in the next chapter.

Peleg. "Division." In Assyrian, palgu means "canal"; and Sayce believes the "division of the land" to refer to the introduction of a system of canals into Babylonia.

26. Joktan. Regarded as the progenitor of the Southern Arabs.

Hazarmaveth. The land of Hadramaut, in Southern Arabia.

29. Ophir. Famed for its gold (I Kings, IX, 28 and XII).

30. The identification of these Arabian landmarks is uncertain.

Chapter XI. The Tower of Babel and the Diversity of Languages

One explanation of this difficult chapter is that it continues the theme of the preceding section and indicates that the Divine ideal was One Humanity united by one universal language. In view of the division of mankind by diversity of tongue, which has ever been a source of misunderstanding, hostility and war, this chapter answers the question how the original Divinely-ordained unity of language, that indispensable link for the unity of mankind, was lost. Only a great transgression—an enterprise colossal in its insolent impiety and evidencing an open revolt against God—could account for such a moral catastrophe to humanity (Steinthal). Standing symbols of such heathen impiety to the Hebrew mind were the ziggurats, the Mesopotamian temple-towers, rising to an immense height as if intended to scale Heaven.

The building of the greatest of these towers was associated with Babylon, the centre of ancient luxury and power. The Rabbis assert that the builders of this Tower of Babel wished to storm the heavens in order to wage war against the Deity; and "as the highest stage in an Assyrian or Babylonian ziggurat was surmounted by a shrine of the Deity, there is perhaps less fancifulness in these words than is often suspected" (Ryle). Jewish legend tells of the godlessness and inhumanity of these tower-builders. If, in the course of the construction of the Tower, a man fell down and met his death, none paid heed to it; but if a brick fell down and broke into fragments, they were grieved and even shed tears—a graphic summing up of heathen civilisation, ancient or modern. Such an enterprise provoked Divine

CHAPTER XI

11 1. And the whole earth was of one language and of one speech. 2. And it came to pass, as they journeyed east, that they found a plain in the land of Shinar; and they dwelt there. 3. And they said one to another, Go to, let us make brick, and burn them thoroughly. And they had brick for stone, and slime had they for mortar.
4. And they said, Go to, let us build us a city,
and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven, punishment; and that insolence and power were broken by lasting division occasioned by diversity of language.

Quite a different interpretation of this chapter is given by Ibn Ezra: "The purpose of the builders was simply to prevent their becoming separated, and to secure their dwelling together. But as this purpose was contrary to the design of Providence (IX, 1; I, 28) that the whole earth should be inhabited, it was frustrated." The expression "whose top may reach unto heaven" must accordingly be interpreted that that tower was to be of very great height so that it would be visible at a considerable distance and become a rallying point to all people.

a name. If they all dwell together, they would be powerful and become renowned.

5. came down. So again XVIII, 21. An anthropomorphic expression. The Rabbis deduce from this the rule that a judge should never condemn an offender without first seeing for himself both him and the nature of the offence.

6. begin to do. At this early stage in human history, men are led to combine by an unworthy motive. If their design is not frustrated, they might employ their united strength for outrageous purposes. All human effort is both futile and empty, if dictated by self-exaltation, and divorced from acknowledgement of God.

7. let us go down. The plural of Majesty, as in I, 26.

9. Babel. This is an instance of popular etymology based on resemblance of sound and is frequently found in Scripture. The Assyrian name for Babel means, "Gate of God."

and let us make us a name; lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth. 5. And the Lord came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men builded. 6. And the Lord said, Behold, they are one people, and they have all one language; and this is what they begin to do: and now nothing will be withholden from them, which they purpose to do. 7. Go to,
let us go down, and there confound their language,
that they may not understand one another's speech. 8. So the Lord scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city. 9. Therefore was the name of it called Babel; because the Lord
did there confound the language of all the earth:
and from thence did the Lord scatter them abroad
upon the face of all the earth.

10. These are the generations of Shem. Shem was an hundred years old, and begat Arpachshad
two years after the flood: 11. and Shem lived after he begat Arpachshad five hundred years,
and begat sons and daughters.

12. And Arpachshad lived five and thirty years, and begat Shelah: 13. and Arpachshad lived after he begat Shelah four hundred and three years,
and begat sons and daughters.

10–32. From Shem to Abraham

10. these are the generations. This new section, leaving Universal History behind, reverts to the main purpose of the First Book of the Torah, which is that of giving a complete account of the founders of the Hebrew race, viz., Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and their children. Abram is traced back through ten successive generations to Shem, the son of Noah.

THE DELUGE AND ITS BABYLONIAN PARALLEL

Flood stories are very numerous, and are found in every part of the world. But these are of little or no interest to the Bible student or to the modern reader. The Babylonian parallel to the Biblical account of the Deluge, however, stands in a class by itself. Both the resemblances and the differences of the two accounts are of great importance for the understanding and proper appreciation of the Bible narrative.

The Babylonian story is as follows: The gods in council decide to send a Flood upon the earth. One of the gods, Ea, who was present at the council, resolves to save his favourite Utnapishtim—this is the name of the Babylonian Noah. He warns him of the impending danger and at the same time commands him to build a ship. He also furnishes the "superlatively clever one," Utnapishtim, with a misleading pretext to offer his contemporaries when questioned as to the reason for his building the ship. (In the Rabbinical legend, Noah during the years of the ship's construction, is a preacher of repentance. "Turn from your evil ways and live," is his admonition to his fellow men.) When the ship is built, Utnapishtim fills it with his possessions, his family, dependants, including artisans, together with domestic and wild animals. He then enters it himself and closes the door behind him. The storm rages for six days and nights, till all mankind are destroyed, and the very gods "cowered in terror like dogs." On the seventh day, he sends out a dove, which comes back to him. And then he lets go a raven which does not return. On this, Utnapishtim released all the animals; and leaving the ship, offered a sacrifice. "The gods gathered like flies over the sacrifice." The dieties then began to quarrel; but eventually Utnapishtim is blessed, and is received into the society of the gods.

The resemblances between this Babylonian story and the Biblical account lie on the surface. To mention only a few features common to both: the whole human race is doomed to destruction; one man with his dependants and animals is saved in a ship; the episode of the dove and raven; and after leaving the ship, the man offers sacrifices and receives Divine blessings.

Of far greater significance, however, are the differences between the two accounts. The Babylonian story is unethical and polytheistic, devoid of any uniform or exalted purpose, and lacking in reverence and restraint. Not so the terse, direct and simple Hebrew narrative. Instead of the quarrelsome, deceitful, vindictive pack of Babylonian deities, false to one another and false to men, we have in the Hebrew account, the One and Supreme God—holy and righteous in His dealings with man. Unlike its Babylonian counterpart, the Hebrew Deluge is a proclamation of the eternal truth that the basis of human society is justice, and that any society which is devoid of justice deserves to perish, and will inevitably perish. Noah is saved, not through celestial caprice or favouritism, not because he was "superlatively clever," but because he was righteous and blameless in a perverse generation; a man who was worthy of God's approval, as well as of inaugurating a new era for humanity. An impassable gulf separates the Biblical and the Babylonian Deluge stories. This infinite ethical difference between them is recognised even by those who are otherwise hostile to the Bible. "The Biblical story of the Deluge possesses an intrinsic power to stir the conscience of the world, and it was written with this educational and moral end in view. Of this end, there is no trace in the Deluge records outside the Bible" (A. Jeremias).

In its Babylonian form, Assyriologists tell us, the story seems to have been reduced to writing as early as the days of Abraham. It must have been known in substance to the children of Israel in Canaan and later in Egypt. But in the form in which, under God's Providence, the Patriarchs transmitted it to their descendants, it was free from all degrading elements, and became an assertion of the everlasting righteousness of the One God. "The Babylonian parallel only serves to bring out the unique grandeur of Israel's God-idea, which could thus purify and transform the most uncongenial and repugnant features of the ancient Deluge tradition" (Gunkel).

ADDITIONAL NOTE D

ARE THERE TWO CONFLICTING ACCOUNTS OF CREATION AND THE DELUGE IN THE BIBLE?

All those scholars who are followers of what is called "Higher Criticism" maintain that the account of the Flood in the Bible was written much later than Moses. In the face of all archæological evidence to the contrary, they maintain that the art of writing, was not known in Israel before the days of David. Like all primitive nations, Israel had bards and singers who recited and composed legends and tales concerning the exploits of the ancestral heroes; and in the course of centuries, these early legends and tales of Israel assumed a fixed literary form in two distinct collections. They call one of these supposed "collections" E, because the Divine Name used in it is Elohim (rendered in English by God), and allege that it arose in the Prophetic circles of Northern Israel in the ninth pre-Christian century. The other collection they call J, because, they say, it regularly employs the Divine Name which is read as Adonay (translated into English by the word Lord), and they declare it arose in the Prophetic circles of Judaea in the eighth pre-Christian century. A third document (Deuteronomy), they tell us, arose in the reign of King Josiah; and on the return from Exile, a fourth portion of the Torah came into existence, the Priestly Document, which they call P. As these distinct documents, however, E, J, D, and P, do not exist separately or even side by side, we are asked to believe that at various stages in Israel's history, these different parts have been combined and edited by a succession of "redactors." We shall elsewhere in the course of this commentary show the utter baselessness of this revolutionary view of Israel's history and religion. At this place, we shall examine the principal reasons which the critics assign for the division of the text of the Torah into what they call its "original elements." These reasons are: (a) the alleged diversity in the use of Divine Names; and (b) supposed discrepancies in statement between the various "sources." And nowhere in the Pentateuch, they hold, are these differences in Divine Names and in details of statement more evident than in the chapters dealing with the Creation and the Deluge. These sections, therefore, should afford the best test to prove the tenability, or otherwise, of the claims of the Bible critics.

A. Genesis, chapters I and II are supposed to contain two distinct accounts of Creation. Genesis, chapter I–II, 3 is called P—the Priestly account, and is supposed to be post-exilic; whereas Genesis, chapter II, 4–25 is the Prophetic account, E, and is stated to be some three centuries earlier.

But, are there two accounts of Creation? Can Genesis II, 4–25, honestly be considered as such? Unlike Chapter I, it does not describe the coming into existence of the sun, moon and stars, of the seas and their inhabitants. Even Heaven and earth are mentioned only indirectly, in an introductory phrase. Genesis II, 4–25 pre-supposes Gen. I, supplements it, and is unintelligible without it. The proposed distinguishing of the two sources by the use of the different Divine Names fails at the very start. Elohim they declare to be exclusively used by the Priestly writer of Gen. I; and Adonay to be the Divine Name used only by the supposed Prophetic writer to whom they assign Gen. II, 4–15; and yet Elohim occurs 20 times together with Adonay in Gen. II, 4–25 and in Chap. III, which is also held by them to be Prophetic." The Critics attempt to get over this difficulty by stating that Elohim has here been interpolated by the "redactor" 20 times in one chapter. But then, in the conversation between Eve and the serpent, Elohim without Adonay is used! Is this too an interpolation?

As explained in the comment on II, 4, the alternate, or combined, use of Elohim and Adonay for the Name of God presents no difficulty whatsoever. Their employment varies according to the nature of the context. Thus, in connection with the creation of the Universe at large (Genesis I), the Divine Name employed is Elohim. In God's merciful relations with human beings, however, (Gen. II, 4–25), He is spoken of as Adonay, Lord. There is nothing strange or out of the way in such usage. In English, we choose words like Deity, Supreme Being, Almighty, God, Lord, according as the subject and occasion demand. One and the same writer, may at various times use any one of these English terms for the Divine Being. The nature of the context decides what Divine Name is employed. In the same way, different Divine Names in the Hebrew text do not argue a diversity of writers, but simply that the Divine Name has each time been selected in accordance with the idea to be expressed. Dr. David Hoffmann of Berlin, and especially Prof. W. H. Green in his The Unity of the Book of Genesis, have examined each and every instance of the use of these Names throughout Genesis, and have shown the exact appropriateness of each Name to the subject matter in which it occurs.

B. No more are there two distinct accounts of the Deluge than there are two accounts of Creation. Here, too, the Divine Name "test" fails completely. One example will suffice. "And they that went in, went in male and female of all flesh, as God (Elohim) commanded him; and the Lord (Adonay) shut him in" (VII, 16). As the Bible critics declare this verse to be written by P, it ought to contain only Elohim; and yet we have Elohim followed by Adonay! The critics are compelled by their theory to assign the "offending" words to J, although the whole context belongs to P. Those who are not critics find, of course, no difficulty here: Adonay is used, because "the Lord (Adonay) shut him in" describes a merciful action. In face of such a combined use of both Elohim and Adonay as we have here, and in Genesis II, the test of the Divine Name surely breaks down.

Equally baseless is the argument triumphantly brought forward that there is a striking descrepancy of statement in the directions given to Noah, which descrepancy compels the assumption of two distinct accounts. Noah is first told (VI, 19) to take into the ark two each of all animals; whereas, in the next chapter, he is told to take two of all animals, but seven of all clean beasts! The answer is plain: VI, 19 does not say that only two shall be taken from each kind. The first is a general command; whereas the second command at the moment of entering the ark is more specific, and directs that of the clean domestic animals of Noah that were to serve him for food and later for sacrifices, he was to take seven of each. Such general statements (כלל) followed by a statement giving specific details (פרט), is the rule in Scripture. Thus, the opening verse of Gen. I, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," is a general statement. This is followed by a whole series of supplementary specific statements, giving the details of creation. Yet there certainly is no contradiction between the general statement that back of the whole Universe is a Creator, and the remainder of the chapter describing the various creative acts. The same rule of general and specific statement obtains in connection with the command to Noah.

But the utter falsity of the critical theory is proved by the Babylonian version itself. The Babylonian version is in agreement with the Bible account as an undivided whole. There are special points of agreement between it and the portions assigned to P; such as, the precise instructions for building the ark, and the statement that the ark rested on a mountain, etc. There are also special points of agreement between it and the portions assigned to J, such as, the sending forth of birds, and the later building of an altar and the offering of sacrifices. This is unanswerable testimony to the unity of the Scriptural Deluge account.

The procedure of the critics in connection with the Creation and Deluge chapters is typical of their method throughout. It justifies the protest of the late Lord Chancellor of England, the Earl of Halsbury—an excellent judge of evidence—who in 1915 found himself impelled to declare :—" For my own part I consider the assignment of different fragments of Genesis to a number of wholly imaginary authors great rubbish. I do not understand the attitude of those men who base a whole theory of this kind on hypotheses for which there is no evidence whatsoever." A generation before the Earl of Halsbury, the historian Lecky gave expression to a similar judgment, in the following words: " I may be pardoned for expressing my belief that this kind of investigation is often pursued with an exaggerated confidence. Plausible conjecture is too easily mistaken for positive proof. Undue significance is attached to what may be mere casual coincidence, and a minuteness of accuracy is professed in discriminating between different elements in a narrative which cannot be attained by mere internal evidence."

Whenever external evidence comes to light, as in the case of the Babylonian version of the Deluge, or, as we shall see later, in the case of the discovery of the Babylonian Code of Laws—the arbitrary and purely fictitious nature of the critical theories becomes patent to all.

ABRAHAM

I

Mankind descending from Adam became hopelessly corrupt and was swept away by the Deluge. Noah alone was spared. But before many generations pass away, mankind once again becomes arrogant and impious, and moral darkness overspreads the earth. "And God said Let Abraham be—and there was light," is the profound saying of the Midrash. In many a beautiful legend, the Rabbis recount how Abraham refused to walk in the way of the Tower-builders, and broke away from the debasing heathenism of his contemporaries. In his early childhood

one night, he looked at the stars under the clear Mesopotamian sky, and felt, "These are the gods!" But the dawn came, and soon the stars could be seen no longer when the sun rose. "This is my god, him will I adore!" he exclaimed. But then the sun set, and he hailed the moon as his deity. When in turn the moon was obscured, he cried out: "This, too, is no god! There must be One who is the Maker of Sun, Moon and Stars." Having gradually reached the momentous conviction that the Universe is the work of One Supreme Being who is the God of righteousness, he endeavours to open the eyes of others to the folly and idol-worship, and becomes the Preacher of the True Faith. In his father's house, the legend continues, there stood one great idol and a large number of smaller ones. Abraham broke all the smaller ones and then placed the hammer in the hand of the big idol. "They quarrelled among themselves," he later explained to his dumbfounded father, "and the big one thereupon took a hammer and shattered them all. Behold, it is still in his hands!" "But there is no life and power in them to do such things," his father answered in rage. "Why then dost thou serve them? Can they hear thy prayers when thou callest upon them?" was the reply. Abraham was thereupon haled before the ruler of Babylon, Nimrod, who cast him into a fiery furnace (whence the name of the city "Ur," which means fire). An angel of God rescues him unhurt from its devouring flames (Midrash). Abraham the idol-wrecker is the father of that People which was to shatter all idolatries; which was to suffer all things, endure all things, and survive all things in its defiance of despotisms of the body and soul; which was to succeed in turning the course of history by the perpetuation of true religion for the children of men. The call of Abraham is the beginning of the higher spiritual life of humanity.

II

With Abraham, the nature of the Book of Genesis changes. Hitherto, in its first eleven chapters, it gave an account of the dawn of the world and of human society. The remainder of the Book is the story of the founders of the People whose destiny, in the light of God's purpose, forms the main theme of Scripture. These founders of the Jewish People are not divine of semi-divine beings, as is the case with the mythical heroes of Greece, Rome or the Teutonic nations. They are purely human personalities, just normal men, of like passions with ourselves, having their faults and excellencies. "Abraham is the 'Friend of God.' He is nothing more; but he is nothing less. In him was exemplified the fundamental truth of all religion, that God has not deserted the world; that His work is carried on by His own chosen instruments; that good men are not only His creatures and His servants, but His friends" (Stanley).

With the Patriarchs, we leave the dim, Primeval world and enter the full daylight of historical times. Even a generation ago, Bible critics looked upon the Patriarchal stories in Genesis as a tissue of fabrications, at best as legends, but in no case as authentic history. No theory was too fantastic, or too blasphemous, to be put forward as a serious explanation of the narrative. One critic declared Abraham to be a "free creation of unconscious art"; another turned him into a "fetish stone"; a third identified him with the "starry heavens"; and a fourth made of him "a sacred locality." One of the greatest of these Bible critics (Dillmann), who at one time shared those preposterous views, eventually felt himself impelled to state "we have no right to explain these Genesis narratives as pure fiction. They rest in essentials on sound historical recollection." This view is now that of all responsible students of the Bible. "The patriarchal period has been so illumined by recent discoveries," says the author of the commentary on "Genesis" in the International Critical Series, "that it is no longer possible to doubt its substantial historicity. Contemporary documents reveal a set of conditions into which the patriarchal narratives fit perfectly, and which are so different from those prevailing under the monarchy that the situation could not possibly have been imagined by an Israelite of that age" (John Skinner). The words of the Psalmist, "Truth shall spring out of the earth," have become literally fulfilled, and the very stones of the Nile and the Euphrates valleys, of Palestine, and Asia Minor, have given their decisive testimony in vindication of the Torah. "We have travelled far from the time when scholars attempted to turn the Patriarchs into mythical beings. To-day that attempt itself almost appears mythical" (Prof. D. H. Müller).

CHAPTER. XII. THE CALL OF ABRAHAM, v. 1–9

1. out of thy country. "In this land of idol worship thou art not worthy to rear sons to the service of God" (Rashi)—the evil surroundings would contaminate them. The Midrash explains that the command was issued for the benefit of his fellow-men. "When a flask of balsam is sealed and stored away, its fragrance is not perceptible; but, opened and moved about, its sweet odour is widely diffused."

thy country . . . thy kindred . . . thy father's house. These are the main influences which mould a person's thoughts and actions. The words also indicate the severity of the trial which was being imposed upon him. He was to cut himself completely adrift from all associations that could possibly hinder his mission. A similar "call" comes to Abraham's descendants in every age and clime, to separate themselves from all associations and influences that are inimical to their Faith and Destiny.

be thou a blessing. These words contain the ideal which Abram was to set himself, to become a blessing to humanity by the beneficent influence of his godly life and by turning others to a knowledge of God. With the change of one vowel, says the Midrash, the Hebrew word for "blessing" means "spring of water." Even as a spring purifies the defiled, so do thou attract those who are far from the knowledge of God and purify them for their Heavenly Father. And such has indeed been the role played by the children of Abraham on the stage of human history. "The Jew is that sacred being," says Tolstoy, "who has brought down from heaven the everlasting fire, and has illumined with it the entire world. He is the religious source, spring and fountain out of which all the rest of the peoples have drawn their beliefs and their religions."

3. I will bless. They who follow Abram's teachings will like him enjoy God's favour.

the same treasury of blessings which he enjoyed. "The germ of the idea underlying the fuller conception of a Messianic Age was in existence from the time of the founders of the race of Israel. In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed, was the promise given both to Abraham and Isaac. It was a promise that reached far beyond the lifetime of each, farther than the limits of the temporal kingdom their descendants founded; that has obtained but partial fulfilment up to our time, and looks for fullest realisation to that future towards which each of us in his measure may contribute his share" (S. Singer).

4. as the Lord had spoken. In obedience to the Heavenly voice, he leaves the land of his birth and all the glamour and worldly prosperity of his native place; he becomes a pilgrim for life, enduring trials, famines, privations; wandering into Canaan as a sojourner, into Egypt as a refugee, and back again into Canaan—all for the sake of humanity, that it might share the blessing of his knowledge of God and Righteousness.

Lot went with him. Lot was a mere follower, and does not seem to have been inspired with the same ideals as prompted Abram's departure.

8. their substance. Their worldly goods, movable property.

the souls. i.e. their slaves and dependents. The Rabbis take the word "souls" to mean the proselytes whom Abram made among the men, and Sarai among the women. These converts became subservient to God's law and followed their master in his spiritual adventure.

gotten. lit., "made"; for, declare the Rabbis, he who thee will I curse: and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed. 4. So Abram went, as the Lord had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him: and Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran. 5. And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and the souls that they had gotten in Haran; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan; and into the land of Canaan they came. 6. And Abram passed through the land unto the place of Shechem, unto the terebinth of Moreh. And the Canaanite was then in the land. 7. And the Lord appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there builded he an altar

Terebinth of Moreh. Some translate, "the directing terebinth," i.e. the oracular tree held sacred by the tree-worshipping Canaanites. Such trees were attended by priests, who interpreted the answers of the oracle to those who came to consult it. The terebinth (or turpentine-tree) grows to a height of from twenty to forty feet, and may therefore well have served as a landmark.

the Canaanite was then in the land. i.e. was already in the land. "Before the age of Abraham, the Canaanites had already settled in the lowlands of Palestine—Canaan, be it noted, signified Lowlands" (Sayce). The interpretation of this verse as meaning that the Canaanites were at that time in the land, but were no longer so at the time when Genesis was written (an interpretation which misled even Ibn Ezra), is quite impossible. The Canaanites formed part of the population down to the days of the later Kings.

7. unto thy seed. In spite of its possession by the warlike and racially alien Canaanites (x, 6).

called upon the name of the Lord. The Targum renders, "and prayed in the name of the Lord." He proclaimed the knowledge of the true God (Talmud). He had the moral courage to preach his conception of God and duty in the very face of the soul-degrading ideas of divine worship and human duty held by the peoples then inhabiting Canaan.

the south. Or, "the Negeb," the name by which the Southern district of Judah is known. The Midrash explains that Abram was being drawn towards the city of Jerusalem, which is in the south of Palestine.

10–20. Abram in Egypt

10. a famine in the land. Owing to the scarcity of rivers and lack of irrigation, the country was subject to famine if the rainy seasons failed. Palestine nomads would then seek safety in Egypt. A famine drove Abram to Egypt, and the same cause was again to bring his descendants to that land. As the Rabbis say, "The lives of the Patriarchs foreshadow the story of their descendants."

unto the Lord, who appeared unto him. 8. And he removed from thence unto the mountain on the east of Beth-el, and pitched his tent, having Beth-el on the west, and Ai on the east: and there he builded an altar unto the Lord, and called upon the name of the Lord. 9. And Abram journeyed, going on still toward the South.
10. And there was a famine in the land: and Abram went down into Egypt to sojourn there; for the famine was sore in the land. 11. And it came to pass, when he was come near to enter into Egypt, that he said unto Sarai his wife, Behold now, I know that thou art a fair woman to look upon: 12. and it shall come to pass, when the Egyptians shall see thee, that they shall say,
This is his wife: and they will kill me, but they will save thee alive. 13. Say, I pray thee, thou art my sister: that it may be well with me for royal custom in those days. A papyrus tells of a Pharaoh who, acting on the advice of one of his princes, sent armed men to fetch a beautiful woman and make away with her husband. Another Pharaoh is promised by his priest on his tombstone, that even after death he will kill Palestinian sheiks and include their wives in his harem.

13. Once or twice Abram falls a prey to fear and plays with the truth in order to preserve his life. Though merely an episode with him, natural enough in an ordinary man, it is quite unwôrthy of his majestic soul. It is the glory of the Bible that it shows no partiality towards its heroes; they are not superhuman, sinless beings. And when they err—for " there is no man on earth who doeth good always and sinneth never "—Scripture does not gloss over their faults. The great Jewish commentator Nachmanides refers to Abram's action as " a great sin."

that it may be well with me. He would escape death. The same thought is repeated in the following clause.

my soul may live. The Heb. idiomatic way of saying, "I may live."

14. very fair. Sarai was then in middle age, and apparently had retained her youthful beauty.

15. Pharaoh. The Heb. transcription of Pr-'o the Egyptian title of the king of the country. It signifies "Great House." The statement of some writers that the title did not come into use till much later is inaccurate. In the days of the Nineteenth Dynasty, the age of Moses, the word is the usual reverential designation of the King.

16. entreated. i.e. "treated."

and he had. And he came to have. In this verse we have enumerated what was then considered true wealth. Note the omission of silver and gold; cf. Job. 1, 3.

thy sake, and that my soul may live because of thee.* ii 14. And it came to pass, that, when Abram was come into Egypt, the Egyptians beheld the woman that she was very fair. 15. And the princes of Pharaoh saw her, and praised her to Pharaoh: and the woman was taken into Pharaoh's house. 16. And he entreated Abram well for her sake: and he had sheep, and oxen,
and he-asses, and menservants, and maidservants,
and she-asses, and camels. 17. And the Lord plagued Pharaoh and his house with great plagues because of Sarai Abram's wife. 18. And Pharaoh called Abram, and said, What is this that thou hast done unto me? why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife? 19. Why saidst thou,
She is my sister? so that I took her to be my wife: now therefore behold thy wife, take her,
and go thy way. 20. And Pharaoh gave men charge concerning him: and they brought him on the way, and his wife, and all that he had.

18. what is it that thou hast done unto me? "Pharaoh, justly incensed with Abram, sternly reproves him and dismisses him with abruptness." This is the usual non-Jewish comment on this verse. Yet Pharaoh, in whose land the husband of a beautiful wife was in danger of being murdered so that the wife be taken into the royal harem, was hardly justified in his moral indignation towards Abraham. Pharaoh's was largely the blame for the short, coming on the part of the Patriarch.

Chapter XIII. Abram and Lot

1. Lot with him. Lot is here explicitly named because of the incident which follows.

2. rich. lit. "heavy," i.e. laden with possessions.

3. and he went on his journeys. The Heb. implies that he travelled by stages, covering much the same ground as on the outward journey.

4. at the first. Rashi renders: "Unto the place of the altar which he had made there at the first, and where Abram had called on the name of the Lord." See xii, 8.

6. not able to bear them. i.e. there was insufficient pasturage and water for their numerous herds.

7. the Canaanite and the Perizzite dwelt then in the land. This seemingly superfluous clause explains how so large a tract of country could not supply sufficient pasturage for the flocks of Abram and Lot. The older inhabitants would naturally have taken possession of the fertile districts.

8. no strife. Abram's conduct is both self-denying and peace-loving.

CHAPTER XIII

13 1. And Abram went up out of Egypt, he, and his wife, and all that he had, and Lot with him, into the south. 2. And Abram was very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold. 3. And he went on his journeys from the South even to Beth-el, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Beth-el and Ai; 4. unto the place of the altar, which he had made there at the first: and there Abram called on the name of the Lord.* iii 5. And Lot also, which went with Abram, had flocks, and herds, and tents. 6. And the land was not able to bear them, that they might dwell together: for their substance was great, so that they could not dwell together.
7. And there was a strife between the herdmen of Abram's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle:
and the Canaanite and the Perizzite dwelled then in the land. 8. And Abram said unto Lot, Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen;
for we are brethren. 9. Is not the whole land before thee? separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou take the right hand, then I will go to the left. 10. And Lot lifted up his for we are brethren. i.e. kinsmen. Strife would be especially unseemly among relations.

9. the whole land before thee. Although the Canaanites and the Perizzites inhabited the country, there are several unoccupied sites available. In the interests of peace, Abram waives his right, as the elder, to make the selection, and allows Lot to choose in which direction he would go.

10. the Plain of Jordan. lit., "the circle of the Jordan," is the specific name for the land on both sides of the lower Jordan valley. "A large part of this valley is of exuberant fertility . . . Wherever water comes, the flowers rise to the knee, and the herbage to the shoulder" (G. A. Smith).

like the land of Egypt. Watered by the Nile.

as thou goest unto Zoar. Better, as thou camest unto Zoar. This is one of the Mosaic "touches" in Genesis (Naville). Zoar is not the town near Sodom. It is the name of an ancient Egyptian frontier fortress. Speaking to men who had come out of Egypt, Scripture compares the fertility of the Plain of Jordan to the verdure and richness of Egypt "as thou camest unto Zoar," on the edge of the barren desert and sands.

11. Lot chose him all the Plain of Jordan. "He chose the rich soil, and with it the corrupt civilisation which had grown up in the rank climate of that deep descent; and left to Abraham, the hardship, the glory, and the virtues of the rugged hills, the sea-breezes, and the inexhaustible future of Western Palestine" (Stanley).

12. in the land of Canaan. i.e. the remainder of the land.

was well watered every where, before the Lord destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, like the garden of the Lord, like the land of Egypt, as thou goest

Jordan; and Lot journeyed east: and they separated themselves the one from the other.
12. Abram dwelled in the land of Canaan, and Lot dwelled in the cities of the Plain, and moved his tent as far as Sodom. 13. Now the men of Sodom were wicked and sinners against the Lord exceedingly. 14. And the Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward and eastward and westward: 15. for all the land which thou seest,

Chapter XIV. The War of the Kings

Much has been written on this Chapter during the last sixty years. This Chapter does not fit in with any of the so-called "sources" of the Bible critics; hence their determined attacks on its veracity. Its historical accuracy has, however, been strikingly confirmed by recent discoveries, which conclusively show that the age of Abraham was a literary age with a developed historic sense (Sayce).

CHAPTER XIV

14 1. And it came to pass in the days of Amraphel king of Shinar, Arioch king of Ellasar, Chedor-laomer king of Elam, and Tidal king of Goiim, one strong centralised empire, defeated the Elamites, and extended his rule to the shores of the Mediterranean. He undertook the codification of Babylonian law, and his Code was rediscovered at the beginning of this century. The date of his reign is 1945–1902 before the Christian era. The final consonant in the Heb. form of the name probably corresponds to the ending el, "God," in Biblical names.

Shinar. The Targum reads "Babylon"; it seems to have been one of the Egyptian names for Babylonia. The word may possibly be identical with Sumir; see on x, 10.

Arioch, king of Ellasar. i.e. Eriaku, king of Larsa, midway between Babylon and the mouth of the Euphrates.

Chedorlaomer. A Hebraised form of Kudur, "servant of," and Lagamar, the name of an Elamite deity.

Elam. See on x, 22. It was at this time in possession of Babylonia, and therefore, also of Canaan which was under Babylonian supremacy.

Tidal, king of Goiim. Tudghula of the cuneiform texts, who was king of the "hordes" of Northern Kurdish nations mentioned from time to time in the inscriptions as invading Assyria (Sayce). Some explain Goiim as the Heb. form of Gutium, Kurdistan.

2. Bera, etc. The names of these kings (like the "kings" in Joshua, petty princes of Canaanite towns) are discussed in W. T. Pilter's monumental work on Genesis XIV, "The Pentateuch, a Historical Record, 1928," Chap. x.

3. joined together. "Came as allies" (AJ).

vale of Siddim. The name does not occur elsewhere.

Salt Sea. Deservedly so called. Whereas ordinary sea-water contains six per cent of salt, its waters have four times that quantity. The Church Fathers named it "the Dead Sea."

4. they served. i.e. they paid tribute; withholding the annual payment was the act of rebellion.

5. The peoples named in this verse—Rephaim, Zuzim, Emim, Horites are the aboriginal inhabitants of the regions afterwards occupied by Edom, Moab and Ammon; see Deut. II, 9f.

Ashteroth-karnaim. A hill 21 miles E. of the Sea of Galilee. The name means "Astarte of the two horns," derived in all probability from a local Sanctuary of that goddess, whose symbol was the crescent or two-horned moon.

Ham. The primitive name of the Ammonite capital, Rabbah, 25 miles N.E. of the upper end of the Dead Sea.

Shaveh-kiriathaim. lit. "the plain of the two towns."

the Salt Sea). 4. Twelve years they served Chedorlaomer, and in the thirteenth year they rebelled. 5. And in the fourteenth year came

13. the Hebrew. This is the first time this word occurs in the Bible, where it is a title used of Israelites either by foreigners or in speaking of them to foreigners, or in contrast to foreigners. After the exile of the Ten Tribes, when the tribe of Judah (Yehudah) remained the principal branch of

And there went out the king of Sodom, and the king of Gomorrah, and the king of Admah, and the king of Zeboiim, and the king of Bela (the same is Zoar); and they set the battle in array against them in the vale of Siddim; 9. against Chedorlaomer king of Elam, and Tidal king of Goiim, and Amraphel king of Shinar, and Arioch king of Ellasar; four kings against the five. 10. Now the vale of Siddim was full of slime pits; and the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah fled, and they fell there, and they that remained fled to the mountain. 11. And they took all the goods of Sodom and Gomorrah, and all their victuals, and went their way. 12. And they took Lot, Abram's brother's son, who dwelt in Sodom, and his goods, and departed. 13. And there came one that had escaped, and told Abram the Hebrew: now he dwelt by the terebinths of Mamre the Amorite, brother of Eshcol, and brother of Aner; and these were confederate with Abram. 14. And when Abram heard that his Israel, the name Yehudim (translated, Judaioi, Judaei, Juden, Jews) came into general use. The Rabbis, also modern scholars, are divided as to the origin of the name, Hebrew. Either the word is to be connected with Eber (see x, 21, xi, 16f) and signifies "a descendant of Eber"; or it means "one from the other side," in accordance with the statement, "And I took your father Abraham from the other side of the River (Euphrates)" (Josh. xxiv, 3). It is also claimed that the name is identical with that of the Habiri, a nomad people mentioned in the Tell-el-Amarna Tablets (see on v. 18 below), as making war upon the Canaanite towns and population.

14. when Abram heard. The Midrash describes his emotions on hearing the news, in the words of Psalm cxii, 7,

The suddenness of the onslaught, and the assault in several places simultaneously, would enable small bands of men to throw a far larger force into panic. The same strategy was used by Gideon (Judg. King's Vale. Mentioned in II Sam. XVIII, 18 in connection with Absalom.

18–20. Abram and Melchizedek

18. This name (which may mean "My King is righteousness") is mentioned elsewhere in the Bible only in Psalm CX, 4, "Thou art a priest for ever after the manner of Melchizedek," the reference being to the offices of king and priest combined in one man. In the light of recent excavations, every reasonable doubt as to the authenticity of the account of Melchizedek is removed. Among the Tell-el-Amarna tablets are letters to the Egyptian government, written in the fifteenth pre-Christian century by the vassal king of Jerusalem, or "Urusalim." Like Melchizedek, he was a priest-king. For the name, cf. "Adonizedek, king of Jerusalem" (Josh. X, 1). (As repeated reference is made to the Tell-el-Amarna Tablets or letters, a few words must be said of this most remarkable archaeological find. The last Pharaoh of the powerful and mighty 18th Dynasty was Amenophis IV or Ikhnaten, the so-called Heretic King, who undertook to replace the Egyptian religion by a monotheism in which the sun was to be worshipped as the sole god. He moved his capital from Thebes to the modern Tell-el-Amarna in Middle Egypt. His reformation was a failure; he died circa 1350 B.C.E. amidst the curses of his subjects. The capital returned to Thebes, and the maker. lit. "possessor." The word combines the idea of making, creating and owning. The phrase, "Maker of heaven and earth," has been embodied in the Liturgy.

19. and he blessed him. In his capacity as priest, Melchizedek invokes the Divine blessing upon Abram for his chivalrous action.

20. and he gave him a tenth. Abram acknowledges Melchizedek as priest of the Most High, and gives him tithe of the spoil as a thanksgiving offering.

21. give me the persons. As the victor, Abram had the right to dispose of the people he had rescued in any manner he desired. He could have retained them as his slaves, sold them into bondage, or demanded a ransom. But he spurns the doctrine, To the victor belong the spoils.

23. nor a shoelatchet. His fine sense of independence would not permit him to benefit in the slightest degree by the rescue of his kinsmen.

2. what wilt thou give me? This agonising cry enables us to look into the soul of the Patriarch. Of what value were earthly possession to him if a worthy child who would continue his work after him was denied him. This attitude of the Father of the Jewish people towards the child, that it is the highest of human treasures, has remained that of his descendants to the present day. Among the most enlightened nations of antiquity, the child had no rights, no protection, no dignity of any sort. In Greece, for example, weak children were generally exposed on a

15 1. After these things the word of the Lord came unto Abram in a vision, saying, Fear not, Abram: I am thy shield, thy reward shall be exceeding great. 2. And Abram said, O Lord God, what wilt thou give me, seeing I go hence childless, and he that shall be possessor of my house is Eliezer the Damascene? 3. And Abram said, Behold, to me thou hast given no seed:
and lo, one born in my house is mine heir. 4. And behold, the word of the Lord came unto him, saying, This man shall not be thine heir; but he
that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir. 5. And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to tell them: and he said unto him, So shall thy seed be. 6. And Dammesek. "Of Damascus" (AJ). Chap. XXIV shows the important position which he occupied in Abram's household. But, if he was to be Abram's heir, what of the great mission that was the motive of Abram's call from Ur of the Chaldees? The incident which follows allays these anxieties.

3. one born in my house. i.e. my servant. It is noteworthy that Abram does not think of Lot as his possible heir; he had returned to Sodom.

Here the return of the soul to the eternal abodes of the fathers is, with some distinctness, separated from the interment of the body. That both cannot be identical is evident; for while Abraham was entombed in Canaan, all his forefathers died and were buried in Mesopotamia" (Kalisch).

the iniquity of the Amorite. "Amorite" denotes the inhabitants of Canaan generally. Some of their abominations are enumerated in Leviticus XVIII, 21–30. The postponement of the penalty indicates Divine forbearance. God would give the Canaanites full time to repent. Hence he sent Abraham who "proclaimed the Lord," and, with his disciples and descendants, taught by precept and example "the way of the Lord do to justice and mercy." Meanwhile, it may be that I shall obtain children by her.

And Abram hearkened to the voice of Sarai.
3. And Sarai Abram's wife took Hagar the Egyp-

5. my wrong be upon thee. i.e. thine is the responsibility for the wrong done to me by Hagar. Sarai's reproach is that he did not check Hagar's haughtiness towards her.

6 in thy hand. In thy power. From his knowledge of Sarai, he thought she would aim merely to bring Hagar back to proper behaviour.

hardly. Harshly; Sarai probably imposed heavy tasks upon her. "Sarah our Mother acted sinfully in thus ill-treating Hagar, and also Abram in permitting it; therefore, God heard her affliction and gave her a son who became the ancestor of a ferocious race that was destined to deal harshly with the descendants of Abram and Sarai." (Nachmanides). Some modern commentators, however, admit that "few women would have borne the insolence of Hagar."

7. the angel of the Lord found her. "The narrative, like XXI, 16–19, illustrates beautifully the Divine regard for the forlorn and desolate soul" (Driver). This is the first time that an "angel" is mentioned in the Bible. The Hebrew word, like the English "angel," originally means "messenger," and is applied to any agent or missioner of God. The phrase "angel of the Lord," however, is sometimes used to denote God Himself.

Shur. lit. "the wall," or fortification which protected Egypt on the East from the incursion of raiding Bedouins. Hagar, in her flight through the wilderness, wanders to in the direction of her native land.

8. Hagar, Sarai's handmaid. Reminding Hagar of the duty she owed her mistress.

6. But Abram said unto Sarai, Behold, thy maid is in thy hand; do to her that which is good in thine eyes. And Sarai dealt hardly with her, and she fled from her face. 7. And the angel of the Lord found her by a fountain of water in the wilderness, by the fountain in the way to Shur.
8. And he said, Hagar, Sarai's handmaid, whence camest thou? and whither goest thou? And she said, I flee from the face of my mistress Sarai.
9. And the angel of the Lord said unto her, Return to thy mistress, and submit thyself under her hands. 10. And the angel of the Lord said unto her, I will greatly multiply thy seed, that it shall not be numbered for multitude. 11. And the angel of the Lord said unto her, Behold, thou art with child, and shalt bear a son; and thou shalt call his name Ishmael, because the Lord hath heard thy affliction. 12. And he shall be as a wild-ass among men; his hand shall be against every man, and every man's hand against him;
and he shall dwell in the presence of all his affliction. The use of this word clearly indicates the Divine disapproval of Sarah's treatment with Hagar. In ancient Israel, the servant is quite other from the "helot" in Greece, or the "slave" in Rome. Underlying the Hagar narrative is the assumption that fair and friendly treatment should be shown even to an alien bondwoman; cf. the position of Eliezer in Abraham's household.

12. a wild-ass among men. A vivid description of "the sons of the desert, owning no authority save that of their own chief, reckless of life, treacherous towards strangers, ever ready for war or pillage" (Driver).

CHAPTER XVII THE COVENANT OF ABRAHAM

1. I am God Almighty. Heb. "El Shaddai"; cf. Exod. VI, 3, "and I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, as God Almighty." The derivation of the Divine Name, Shaddai, is uncertain, but its general meaning is that of irresistible power. The usual translation, "Almighty," is due to the Vulgate (the Latin version of the Bible). The realisation of Abram's hopes must often have appeared dim and distant to him. Here he is reassured: nothing is impossible to God Almighty. But Abram and his posterity brethren. 13. And she called the name of the Lord that spake unto her, Thou art a God of seeing; for, she said, Have I even here looked after him that seeth me? 14. Wherefore the well was called Beer-lahai-roi; behold, it is between Kadesh and Bered. 15. And Hagar bare Abram a son: and Abram called the name of his son, which Hagar bare, Ishmael. 16. And Abram was fourscore and six years old, when Hagar bare Ishmael to Abram.

CHAPTER XVII

17 1. And when Abram was ninety years old and nine, the Lord appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am God Almighty; walk before me, and be thou perfect. 2. And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly. 3. And Abram fell on his face: and God talked with him, saying, 4. As for me must do their part. They must be "whole-hearted" with God.

be thou perfect. "Whole-hearted" (AJ). i.e. place implicit and undivided confidence in God alone. The Rabbis connect this exhortation with the Covenant of Circumcision which was about to be instituted, and thus indicate the moral ideal which underlies the ritual act.

make my covenant. lit. "I will give (i.e. grant) My covenant." What follows is not a compact between God and the Patriarch, but a statement of the plans which He had designed for Abram and his descendants.

3. and Abram fell on his face. The Oriental mode of expressing gratitude.

4. as for me. Introducing God's part of the covenant, as contrasted with "And as for thee" in v. 9.

a multitude of nations. The Israelites; the Arabs, descended from Ishmael; and the tribes enumerated in xxv, 1f.

5. Abraham . . . multitude of nations. Ab means "father"; and raham, the second half of the new name, is an Arabic word for "multitude." The change of name emphasises the mission of Abraham, which is "To bring all the peoples under the wings of the Shechinah."

8. the land of thy sojournings. The land in which Abraham dwelt only as "a sojourner."

10. this is my covenant which ye shall keep. The meaning is not that the Covenant is to consist in the rite of circumcision, but that circumcision is to be the external sign of the Covenant. As the following verse declares, "it shall be a token of a covenant," just as the rainbow was the token of the covenant with Noah. And even as the rainbow had existed before Noah, this rite had been practised among other peoples before Israel. To whatever origin and purpose it might be traced—whether as a measure safeguarding cleanliness and health (Philo), or to counteract excessive lust (Maimonides), or as a sacrificial symbol—for Abraham and his descendants all these conceptions are supplanted, and the rite is the abiding symbol of the consecration of the Children of Abraham to the God of Abraham. It is the rite of the covenant; and unbounded has been the loyalty and devotion with which this vital and fundamental institu-

between me and thee and thy seed after thee throughout their generations for an everlasting after thee. 8. And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land of thy sojournings,

all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God. 9. And God said

my covenant, thou, and thy seed after thee throughout their generations. 10. This is my tion of the Jewish Faith has been and is being observed. Jewish men and women have in all ages been ready to lay down their lives in its defence. The Maccabean martyrs died for it. The officers of King Antiochus put to death the mothers who initiated their children into the Covenant—"and they hanged their babes about their necks" (I. Maccabees I, 61). The same readiness for self-immolation in defence of this sacred rite we find in the times of the Hadrianic persecution, in the dread days of the Inquisition, yea, whenever and wherever tyrants undertook to uproot the Jewish Faith. Even an excommunicated semi-apostate like Benedict Spinoza declares: "Such great importance do I attach to the sign of the Covenant, that I am persuaded that it is sufficient by itself to maintain the separate existence of the nation for ever."

12. he that is born in the house. i.e. the child of a slave; see on XIV, 14. Slaves were regarded as part of the household.

14. cut off from his people. Either through punishment at the hands of God; or through expulsion from the community.

15. Sarah. Brings out more forcibly the meaning "Princess" than the archaic form Sarai.

17. and laughed. The Targum renders, "and rejoiced," to imply that he laughed for joy, not from incredulity. What follows would accordingly not be a question, but an exclamation of surprise.

18. Ishmael might live. Abraham, despairing of the possibility of having issue by Sarah, expresses the hope that Ishmael "might live before Thee," in order that the promises made to Abraham might be fulfilled through him.

you shall be circumcised. 11. And ye shall be circumcised in the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of a covenant betwixt me and you. 12. And he that is eight days old shall be circumcised among you, every male throughout your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which is not of thy seed. 13. He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant. 14. And the uncircumcised male who is not circumcised in the flesh of his forsekin, that soul shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant.

15. And God said unto Abraham, As for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be. 16. And I will bless her,
and moreover I will give thee a son of her: yea,
I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations;
kings of peoples shall be of her. 17. Then Abraham fell upon his face, and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is an hundred years old? and shall Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear? 18. And Abraham said unto God, Oh that Ishmael might live before thee!
19. And God said, Nay, but Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant with him
for an everlasting covenant for his seed after him.

It is also possible to understand it as a prayer that, though Ishmael is excluded from the spiritual heritage, he may yet live under the Divine care and blessing.

CHAPTERS XVIII–XIX. THE DESTRUCTION OF SODOM AND GOMORRAH

CHAPTER XVIII, 1–16 VISIT OF THE ANGELS

1. and the Lord appeared unto him. The Rabbis connect this chapter with the preceding, and declare that God visited the Patriarch during the indisposition which resulted from his circumcision. From this passage they deduce the duty of visiting the sick.

CHAPTER XVIII

18 1. And the Lord appeared unto him by the terebinths of Mamre, as he sat in the tent door in the heat of the day ; 2. and he lift up his eyes and looked, and, lo, three men stood over against him :
and when he saw them, he ran to meet them from the tent door, and bowed himself to the earth,

in thy sight, pass not away, I pray thee, from thy servant : 4. let now a little water be fetched, and wash your feet, and rest yourselves under the tree : 5. and I will fetch a morsel of bread, and comfort ye your heart ; after that ye shall pass
on : forasmuch as ye are come to your servant.
And they said, So do, as thou hast said. 6. And Abraham hastened into the tent unto Sarah, and said, Make ready quickly three measures of fine meal, knead it, and make cakes. 7. And Abraham rest yourselves. lit. "recline." While the meal was being prepared for them, they could enjoy the shade of the tree in front of his tent (see v. 1).

5. and I will fetch a morsel of bread. It is a mark of the good man, declare the Rabbis, to perform more than he promises. The Patriarch belittles the fare he offers to provide for his guests, but gives them of his best.

7. unto the servant. lit. "the lad," Ishmael, whom Abraham was thus instructing in the duties of hospitality (Midrash). Such instruction in the duty of hospitality to strangers may appear superfluous in the eyes of some parents and teachers to-day. They are in error. In Western countries, the old Bible command, Love ye the stranger, is honoured more in the breach than in the observance. The vulgar, high and low, deem it "patriotic" to despise aliens, and find their foreign manners and language contemptible.

8. The verse may be understood as meaning that the guests were given curd and milk to slake their thirst and refresh them (cf. Judges IV, 19), and then followed the meal proper which consisted of the calf. This procedure would be quite in accord with the dietary laws.

and he stood by them. In the East, the host does not sit with his guests, but stands and attends to their needs.

and they did eat. This is the only place in the Bible where celestial beings are mentioned as partaking of food, or as appearing to do so (see Tobit XII, 19). The Rabbis deduced from this, that it is necessary to conform to the social habits of the people in whose midst one lives.

command his children. Or, "charge his children." An important doctrine is here taught in connection with the word "command," יצוה, which has played a conspicuous part in Jewish life. It is the sacred duty of the Israelite to transmit the Jewish heritage to his children after him. The last injunction of the true Jewish father to his children is that they walk in "the way of the Lord" and live lives of probity and goodness. These injunctions were often put in writing; and this custom has given rise to a distinct type of literary production, the Jewish Ethical Will (צוואה).

16. And the men rose up from thence, and looked toward Sodom: and Abraham went with them to bring them on the way. 17. And the Lord said, Shall I hide from Abraham that which I do; 18. seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him? 19. For I have known him, to the end that he may command his children and his household after him, that they may keep the way of the Lord, to do justice and judgement; to the end that the Lord may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him. 20. And the Lord said, Verily the cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and verily their sin is very grievous; 21. I will go down now, and see whether they have done altogether according to the cry of it, which is come unto their sin. Exemplified in the narrative of the next chapter.

21. I will go down now. An anthropomorphic expression, as in XI, 7, to convey the idea that before God decided to punish the dwellers of the cities, "He descended," as it were, to obtain ocular proof of, or extenuating circumstances for, their crimes.

22. from thence. From the place to which Abraham had accompanied them.

23. The remainder of the chapter forms one of the sublimest passages in the Bible or out of the Bible. Abraham's plea for Sodom is a signal illustration of his nobility of character. Amid the hatreds and feuds of primitive tribes who glorified brute force and despised pity, Abraham proves true to his new name and embraces in his sympathy all the children of men. Even the wicked inhabitants of Sodom were his brothers, and his heart overflows with sorrow over their doom. The unique dialogue between God and Abraham teaches two vital lessons; first, the supreme value of righteousness; and, secondly, God's readiness to pardon (Ezek. xxxiii, 11), if only He can do so consistently with justice.

righteous . . . wicked. i.e. "innocent . . . guilty." Abraham rests his case on the conviction that the action of God cannot be arbitrary but only in accordance with perfect justice. In an indiscriminate destruction, however, all the inhabitants, whether good or wicked, would share the same fate. Abraham pleads that as it would not be just to destroy the righteous, therefore, in order to save the righteous, the judgment which had been pronounced over the cities should be stayed. (Ryle). This intercession on behalf of Sodom and Gomorrah—Abraham arguing with God, yea, bargaining with Him, to save their depraved inhabitants from merited destruction—is the highest spiritual pinnacle reached by the Patriarch. Its grandeur exceeds even the willingness to sacrifice his son at the Divine bidding. Within his breast there was a turned from thence, and went toward Sodom:

but Abraham stood yet before the Lord. 23. And Abraham drew near, and said, Wilt thou consume the righteous with the wicked? 24. Peradventure
there be fifty righteous within the city: wilt thou consume and not spare the place for the fifty righteous that are therein? 25. That be far from thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked, that so the righteous should be as the wicked; that be far from thee: shall not the Judge of all the earth do right? 26. And the shall not the judge of all the earth do right? These words have been well described as an "epochal sentence in the Bible" (Zangwill). They make Justice the main pillar of God's Throne: without it, the whole idea of the Divine totters. Justice, it is true, is not the only ethical quality in God or man, nor is it the highest quality; but it is the basis for all the others. "That which is above justice must be based on justice, and include justice, and be reached through justice" (Henry George). Only Israel, the Justice-intoxicated people, in time became רחמנים בני רחמנים, "merciful children of merciful ancestors." The boldness of the Patriarch's ringing challenge, the universality of the phrase "all the earth," and the absolute conviction that the infinite might of God must be controlled by the decrees of Justice—that, in fact, an unjust God would be a contradiction in terms—are truly extraordinary. Despite the lapse of thousands of years, mankind has not yet fully grasped this lofty conception of God and its ethical consequences in human society. "When Abraham could not find fifty righteous men in Sodom, and pleaded on behalf of

And he urged them greatly; and they turned in unto him, and entered into his house; and he made them a feast, and did bake unleavened bread, and they did eat. 4. But before they lay down, the men of the city, even the men of Sodom, compassed the house round, both young and old, all the people from every quarter; 5. and they called unto Lot, and said unto him, Where are the men which came in to thee this night? bring them out unto us, that we may know them. 6. escape thither, (is it not a little one?) and my soul shall live.* iv 21. And he said unto him, See,
I have accepted thee concerning this thing also,
that I will not overthrow the city of which thou hast spoken. 22. Haste thee, escape thither;
for I cannot do any thing till thou be come thither. Therefore the name of the city was called Zoar. 23. The sun was risen upon the earth when Lot came unto Zoar. 24. Then the Lord rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah
brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven;
25. and he overthrew those cities, and all the Plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground. 26. But his wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt. 27. And Abraham gat up early in the morning to the place where he had stood before the Lord: 28. and he looked

28. Archaeological Exploration has now (1924) established the existence of an early Canaanite civilisation in the Plain. The pottery and all the other ancient finds, however, are older than the eighteenth pre-Christian century at the latest, and point to a great convulsion of nature, which destroyed the towns to the south of the Dead Sea (Albright). There is a total absence of any trace of civilisation from that time till probably the Byzantine period—2,500 years after Abraham (Kyle's Explorations at Sodom, 1929).

29. remembered Abraham. Gives the reason why Lot had been spared.

30. he feared. That God might yet include Zoar in the general destruction originally intended for all the five cities; and it seems that after his departure it was likewise destroyed by fire.

31. there is not a man. Some commentators state that Lot's daughters believed that the destruction had been universal, and that but for them the world would be completely depopulated. This explanation is untenable, seeing that they had just left Zoar. Their conduct does not admit of any extenuation: they were true children of Sodom.

32. wine. The mountainous country of Moab is full of caves; and the Midrash states that the inhabitants used to store their wines in such caves.

29. And it came to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the Plain, that God remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in the which Lot dwelt.

30. And Lot went up out of Zoar, and dwelt in the mountain, and his two daughters with him; for he feared to dwell in Zoar: and he dwelt in a cave, he and his two daughters.

The promise and hope of a son seems to have rejuvenated Sarah. She is taken into the harem of the king of Gerar.

father of the Moabites unto this day. 38. And name Ben-ammi: the same is the father of the children of Ammon unto this day.

CHAPTER XX

20 1. And Abraham journeyed from thence toward the land of the South, and dwelt between Kadesh and Shur; and he sojourned in Gerar. 2. And Abraham said of Sarah his wife, She is my sister:
and Abimelech king of Gerar sent, and took Sarah. 3. But God came to Abimelech in a dream of the night, and said unto him, Behold, thou art but a dead man, because of the woman
which thou hast taken; for she is a man's wife.
4. Now Abimelech had not come near her: and he said, Lord, wilt thou slay even a righteous nation? 5. Said he not himself unto me, She is my sister? and she, even she herself said, He is my brother: in the integrity of my heart and the innocency of my hands have I done this.
6. And God said unto him in the dream, Yea, I know that in the integrity of thy heart thou hast done this, and I also withheld thee from sinning against me: therefore suffered I thee not to

7. a prophet. This is the first time the word occurs in the Bible. It is here used to denote a man who stands in a specially near relationship to God, and is consequently under the Divine protection.

10. what sawest thou? i.e. what hadst thou in view?

12. daughter of my father. The Bible sometimes uses "son" and "daughter" to denote a grandson or granddaughter (cf. IX, 24). Sarah may well have been Terah's granddaughter and Abraham's niece. Nachmanides, in his Commentary, severely denounces the Patriarch's conduct on the ground that it again imperilled his wife; and he adds that it makes no difference whether Abraham told Abimelech the truth in calling Sarah his "sister," inasmuch as he suppressed the all-important fact that she was also his wife. Scripture impartially relates both the failings and the virtues of its heroes.

touch her. 7. Now therefore restore the man's wife; for he is a prophet, and he shall pray for thee, and thou shalt live: and if thou restore her not, know thou that thou shalt surely die, thou, and all that are thine. 8. And Abimelech rose early in the morning, and called all his servants, and told all these things in their ears: and the men were sore afraid. 9. Then Abimelech called Abraham, and said unto him, What hast thou done unto us? and wherein have I sinned against thee, that thou hast brought on me and on my kingdom a great sin? thou hast done deeds unto me that ought not to be done. 10. And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What sawest thou, that thou hast done this thing? 11. And Abraham said, Because I thought, Surely the fear of God is not in this place; and they will slay me for my wife's sake. 12. And moreover she is indeed my sister, the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother; and she became my wife: 13. and it came to pass, when God caused me to wander from my father's house, that I said unto her, This is thy kindness which thou shalt shew unto me; at every place whither we shall come, say of me, He is my brother. 14. And Abimelech took sheep and oxen, and menservants and women-servants, and gave them unto Abraham, and restored him Sarah his wife. 15. And Abimelech

13. God caused me to wander. The verb is in the plural, which is sometimes used when an Israelite speaks to a heathen; cf. also XXXI, 53 and Isa. XXIV, 9. It may also be the "plural of Majesty," cf. I, 26.

And unto Sarah he said, Behold, I have given thy brother a thousand pieces of silver: behold, it is for thee a covering of the eyes to all that are with thee; and before all men thou art righted. 17. And Abraham prayed unto God: and God healed Abimelech, and his wife, and his maidservants; and they bare children. 18. For the Lord had fast closed up all the wombs of the house of Abimelech, because of Sarah Abraham's wife.

CHAPTER XXI

21 1. And the Lord visited Sarah as he had said, and the Lord did unto Sarah as he had spoken. 2. And Sarah conceived, and bare Abraham a son in his old age, at the set time of which God had spoken to him. 3. 9. mocking. " Making sport " (AJ). The Heb. term usually refers to an act of impurity or idolatry. Hence Sarah's natural desire to drive him out of the house " (Ehrlich).

and the child. Abarbanel shows that the Heb. text can be translated to mean that both Hagar and the lad carried the food and water.

8. And the child grew, and was weaned: and Abraham made a great feast on the day that Isaac was weaned. 9. And Sarah saw the son of Hagar the Egyptian, which she had borne unto Abraham, mocking. 10. Wherefore she said unto Abraham, Cast out this bondwoman and her son: for the son of this bondwoman shall not be heir with my son, even with Isaac. 11. And the thing was very grievous in Abraham's sight on account of his son. 12. And God said unto Abraham, Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy bondwoman; in all that Sarah saith unto thee, hearken unto her voice; for in Isaac shall thy seed be called. 13. And also of the son of the bondwoman will I make a nation, because he is thy seed. 14. And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and took bread and a skin of water, and gave it unto Hagar, putting it on her shoulder, and the child, and sent her away: and she departed, and wandered in the wilderness of Beer-sheba. 15. And the water in the bottle was spent, and she cast the child under one of the shrubs. 16. And she went, and sat her down over against him a good way off, as it were a bowshot: for she said, Let me not look upon

25. reproved. While agreeing to the suggested alliance, Abraham stated a grievance ; cf. Lev. XIX, 17, " Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thy heart ; thou shalt surely reprove thy neighbour."

27. sheep and oxen. The exchange of gifts on making a treaty.

30. witness. The acceptance of the lambs would be equivalent to acknowledging Abraham's right to the possession of the well.

31. Beer-sheba. The name is given a double etymology : " the well of seven (lambs)," and " the well of swearing."

33. and called there on the name of the Lord. See on XII, 8.

It is noteworthy that the story of Hagar and Ishmael is the Reading for the First Day of Rosh Hashanah : while the next chapter, the intended Sacrifice of Isaac is read on the Second Day. The highest manifestation of the Divine is not to be found in the calling into existence of Nature's elemental forces ; far higher are God's ways manifest in the hearts and souls of men, in the home life of those who do justice, love mercy and walk humbly with their God.

Abraham reproved Abimelech because of the well
of water, which Abimelech's servants had violently taken away. 26. And Abimelech said, I know not who hath done this thing: neither didst thou tell me, neither yet heard I of it, but to-day. 27. And Abraham took sheep and oxen, and gave them unto Abimelech; and they two made a covenant.
28. And Abraham set seven ewe lambs of the flock by themselves. 29. And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What mean these seven ewe lambs which thou hast set by themselves?
30. And he said, These seven ewe lambs shalt thou take of my hand, that it may be a witness unto me, that I have digged this well. 31. Wherefore he called that place Beer-sheba; because there they sware both of them. 32. So they made a covenant at Beer-sheba: and Abimelech rose up, and Phicol the captain of his host, and they returned into the land of the Philistines. 33. And Abraham planted a tamarisk tree in Beer-sheba, and called there on the name of the Lord, the Everlasting God. 34. And Abraham sojourned
in the land of the Philistines many days.*vii

Chapter XXII. The Binding of Isaac (Akedah)

This Chapter is of great importance both in the life of Abraham and in the life of Israel. The aged Patriarch who had longed for a rightful heir ("O Lord God, what wilt Thou give me, seeing that I go childless?") and who had had his longing fulfilled in the birth of Isaac, is now bidden offer up this child as a burnt offering unto the Lord. The purpose of the command was to apply a supreme test to Abraham's faith, thus strengthening his faith by the heroic exercise of it. The proofs of a man's love of God are his willingness to serve Him with all his heart, all his soul and all his might; as well as his readiness to sacrifice unto Him what is even dearer than life. It was a test safe only in a Divine hand, capable of intervening as He did intervene, and as it was His purpose from the first to intervene, as soon as the spiritual end of the trial was accomplished.

So much for what may be called the positive lesson of the Akedah. We shall now examine another side, the great negative teaching of this trial of Abraham. The story of the Binding of Isaac opens the age-long warfare of Israel against the abomination of child sacrifice which was rife among the Semitic peoples, as well as their Egyptian and Aryan neighbours. In that age, it was astounding that Abraham's God should have interposed to prevent the sacrifice, not that He should have asked for it. A primary purpose of this command, therefore, was to demonstrate to Abraham and his descendants after him that God abhorred human sacrifice with an infinite abhorrence. Unlike the cruel heathen deities, it was the spiritual surrender alone that God required. Moses warns his people not to serve God in the manner of the surrounding nations. "For every abomination to the Lord which He hateth have they done unto their gods; for even their sons and their daughters they have burnt in the fire to their gods" (Deuteronomy XII, 31). All the Prophets alike shudder at this hideous aberration of man's sense of worship, and they do not rest till all Israel shares their horror of this savage custom. It is due to the influence of their teaching that the name Ge Hinnom, the valley where the wicked kings practised this horrible rite, became a synonym for "Hell."

A new meaning and influence begins for the Akedah and its demand for man's unconditional surrender to God's will and the behests of God's law, with the Maccabean revolt, when Jews were first called upon to die for their Faith. Abraham's readiness to sacrifice his most sacred affections on the altar of his God, evoked and developed a new ideal in Israel, the ideal of martyrdom. The story of Hannah and her seven sons, immortalised in the Second Book of Maccabees, has come down to us in many forms. In one of these, the martyr mother says to her youngest child, "Go to Abraham our Father, and tell him that I have bettered his instruction. He offered one child to God; I offered seven. He merely bound the sacrifice; I performed it" (Midrash). As persecution deepened during later centuries, the Binding of Isaac was ever in the mind of men and women who might at any moment be given the dread alternative of apostasy or death. Allusions to the Akedah early found their way into the Liturgy; and in time a whole cycle of synagogue hymns (piyyutim) grew round it. In the Middle Ages, it gave fathers and mothers the superhuman courage to immolate themselves and their children, rather than see them fall away to idolatry or baptism. English Jews need but think of the soul-stirring tragedy enacted at York Castle in the year 1190 to understand the lines of the modern Jewish poet:

"We have sacrificed all. We have given our wealth,
Our homes, our honours, our land, our health,
Our lives—like Hannah her children seven—
For the sake of the Torah that came from Heaven."

Many to-day have no understanding for martyrdom. They fail to see that it represents the highest moral triumph of humanity—unwavering steadfastness to principle, even at the cost of life. They equally fail to see the lasting influence of such martyrdoms upon the life and character of the nation whose history they adorn. Those who are thus blind to unconquerable courage and endurance naturally display hostility to the whole idea of the Akedah and its place and associations in Jewish thought. "Only a Moloch requires human sacrifices" they petulantly exclaim. But in all human history, there is not a single noble cause, movement or achievement that did not call for sacrifice, nay sacrifice of life itself. Science, Liberty, Humanity, all took their toll of martyrs; and so did and does Judaism. Israel is the classical people of martyrdom. No other people has made similar sacrifices for Truth, Conscience, Human Honour and Human Freedom (Martin Schreiner). Even in our own day, Jewish parents in Eastern and Central European lands have refused, and refuse, fortune and honours for the sake of conscience. What is far harder, they sacrifice the careers of their children whenever these involve disloyalty to the God of their Fathers. Few chapters of the Bible have had a more potent and more lasting influence on the lives and souls of men than the Akedah.

1. prove. The Authorised Version has the older English "tempt," i.e. test; a trial (in older English, "a temptation") is that which puts to the test. A test is never employed for the purpose of injury, but to certify the power of resistance. All his other trials of faith were to be crowned by Abraham's willingness to sacrifice his dearest hope to the will of God. The Rabbis speak of it as the tenth and the greatest of the trials to which he was exposed.

and said unto him. From v. 3 we may deduce that God communicated with Abraham during the night, perhaps in a vision.

2. take now. The Heb. is peculiar: the imperative "take" is followed by the Heb. particle נא which means, "I pray thee"—God was speaking to Abraham "as friend to friend," and all thought of harm was excluded. This is the only instance of נא ("I beg of thee") after a Divine command.

land of Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son; and he clave the wood for the burnt offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him. 4. On the third day Abraham lifted up his eyes, and saw the place afar off.

you. 6. And Abraham took the wood of the and offer him there. lit. "lift him up" (upon the altar). God, in His command, did not use the word which signifies the slaying of the sacrificial victim. From the outset, therefore, there was no intention of accepting a human sacrifice, although Abraham was at first not aware of this.

V. CHAYYE SARAH

(CHAPTERS XXIII–XXV, 18)

CHAPTER XXIII. DEATH AND BURIAL OF SARAH

1. an hundred and seven and twenty years. lit. "a hundred years, and twenty years, and seven years"; and since the word "year" is inserted after every figure, the Rabbis comment: "She was as handsome at one hundred as at the age of twenty; and as sinless at twenty as at seven." (This, according to Luzzatto and Berliner, was the original form of the saying).

2. Kiriath-arba. lit. "the city of four." In Judges I, 10, it is stated that Kiriath-arba was the old name of Hebron, and in that city the Israelites slew three giant chieftains, the sons of a man named Arba (see Josh. XV, 13). Hence the city was named after Arba; or it signified the city of these four giants.

children of Heth. i.e. the Hittites; see on X, 15.

4. stranger and a sojourner. A proverbial phrase describing one whose origin is foreign, and whose period of residence is uncertain (Ryle).

V. CHAYYE SARAH

CHAPTER XXIII

23 1. And the life of Sarah was an hundred and seven and twenty years: these were the years of the life of Sarah. 2. And Sarah died in Kiriath-arba (the same is Hebron), in the land of Canaan: and Abraham came to mourn for Sarah, and to weep for her. 3. And Abraham rose up from before his dead, and spake unto the children of Heth, saying, 4. I am a stranger and a sojourner with you: give me a possession of a burying-place with you, that I may bury my dead out of my sight. 5. And the children of Heth answered Abraham, saying unto him, 6. Hear us, my lord: thou art a mighty prince among us: in the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead; none of out of my sight. Better, "from before me."

This is the first reference in the Bible to burial; and the reverential concern which the Patriarch shows to give honourable sepulchre to his dead has been a distinguishing feature among his descendants. Meth mitzvah, care of the unburied body of a friendless man, takes precedence over all other commandments. Burial is the Jewish method of disposal of the dead. Tacitus (Hist. v, 5) remarked upon the fact that the Jews buried their dead, instead of burning them. Cremation has always been repugnant to Jewish feeling, and is in total variance with the law and custom of Israel.

6–18. The bargaining which follows, with grandiloquent phrases and lavish offers, not to be taken too seriously by the person addressed, is still typically Oriental.

were common in ancient times, and the Hittites gave Abraham permission to select any one of these vaults; but the Patriarch insists on a separate resting-place for his wife. He probably had the intention of being buried there himself. If such was his intention, it was fulfilled ; see XLIX, 29f.

7. people of the land. Heb. Am ha-aretz, which elsewhere means "the people of the land," and in later Hebrew, "an ignorant person," here means the Council of the Hittites in session. Abraham desired to secure a burial place that should forever remain a possession of his family. Such "freehold" purchase was impossible without the assent of the local Hittite national Council. "The expression am ha-aretz occurs 49 times in Scripture. In 42 of these instances it means neither the nation nor an individual boor, but is simply a technical term of Hebrew Politics and signifies what we would call Parliament." Judge Mayer Sulzberger, The Am ha-aretz; the Ancient Hebrew Parliament, Philadelphia, 1910.

9. the cave of Machpelah. It was a common practice to bury in caves. The word which is the name of the cave and of the locality denotes "double"; possibly because it consisted of two storeys.

us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre, but that thou mayest bury thy dead. 7. And Abraham rose up, and bowed himself to the people of the land, even to the children of Heth. 8. And he communed with them, saying, If it be your mind that I should bury my dead out of my sight, hear me, and intreat for me to Ephron the son of Zohar, 9. that he may give me the cave of Machpelah, which he hath, which is in the end of his field; for the full price let him give it to me in the midst of you for a possession of a burying-place. 10. Now Ephron was sitting in the midst of the children of Heth: and Ephron the Hittite answered Abraham in the audience of the children of Heth, even of all that went in at the gate of his city, saying, 11. Nay, my lord, hear me: the field give I thee, and the cave that is therein, I give it thee; in the presence of the sons of my people give I it thee: bury thy dead. 12. And Abraham bowed himself down before the people of the land. 13. And he spake unto Ephron in the audience of the people of the land, saying, But if thou wilt, I pray thee, hear me: I will give the price of the field; take it of me, and I will bury my dead there. 14. And Ephron

15. what is that betwixt me and thee? What can such a sum as that just mentioned matter to persons such as we? In this apparently unconcerned tone, the seller indicates the price he wants. The sum demanded, four hundred shekels of silver, is a very substantial sum, perhaps equivalent in purchasing power to from £1,000 to £2,000 in our time. In the contemporary Code of Hammurabi (see on xiv, 1) the wages of a working-man for a year are fixed at six or eight shekels (Bennett).

16. weighed. There were no coins of standard size and shape; therefore the pieces of silver had to be weighed before their value could be ascertained.

current money with the merchant. The phrase probably denotes that the silver was in convenient-sized pieces, readily usable in business transactions.

17. were made sure. i.e. were assured to Abraham. This verse and the following may well be a citation from the deed of assignment which was drawn up at the purchase. Contracts of this kind, dating from very early Semitic times, have been discovered in large numbers.

answered Abraham, saying unto him, 15. My lord, hearken unto me: a piece of land worth four hundred shekels of silver, what is that betwixt me and thee? bury therefore thy dead. 16. And Abraham hearkened unto Ephron; and Abraham weighed to Ephron the silver, which he had named in the audience of the children of Heth, four hundred shekels of silver, current money with the merchant.* ii 17. So the field of Ephron, which was in Machpelah, which was before Mamre, the field, and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, that were in all the border thereof round about, were made sure
18. unto Abraham for a possession in the presence of the children of Heth, before all that went in at the gate of his city. 19. And after this, Abraham buried Sarah his wife in the cave of the field of Machpelah before Mamre (the same is Hebron), in the land of Canaan. 20. And the field, and the cave that is therein, were made sure unto Abraham for a possession of a burying-place by the children of Heth.

18. in the presence of. The sale was duly witnessed; cf. Jer. xxxii, 12.

For generations, nay centuries, the children of Israel were to have no point of fixity save the sepulchre of the Patriarchs. The Cave of Machpelah is regarded with immense veneration by the Mahommedans, who built a large mosque over it, and until recently altogether excluded both Jews and Christians from viewing it. A visit is still connected with considerable difficulty to a Jew.

put thy hand under my thigh. According to the Biblical idiom, children are said to issue from the "thigh" or "loins" of their father (cf. xlvi, 26). Therefore the formality of placing the hand upon the thigh was taken to signify that if the oath were violated, the children who have issued, or might issue, from the "thigh" would avenge the act of disloyalty.

3. God of heaven. Abraham makes his servant swear in the name of the God he himself worshipped; he had converted his servant to the true Faith (see on xii, 5), evidenced by Eliezer's devout conduct throughout the narrative which follows.

5. The meaning is, If I find a suitable wife for Isaac in Haran but the woman is not willing to leave her home, am I to take Isaac to Haran?

6. On no account is Isaac to return to Haran, lest he abandon the Land of Promise.

7. Abraham felt strongly that Isaac's marriage would be an important factor in the fulfilment of the Divine promise. Hence God would help Eliezer in his mission to find a worthy wife for Isaac.

evidence of a tender heart. Kindness to animals is a virtue upon which Judaism lays stress. The Talmud declares that a man must not sit down to his meal before giving food to his animals. It is noteworthy that Eliezer decided to make beauty of character the criterion in his selection of a wife for Isaac. He anticipated the writer of Prov. XXXI, 30, who declared, "Favour is deceitful and beauty is vain; but a woman that feareth the Lord she shall be praised."

39. Peradventure the woman will not follow me. From this and v. 57 below, it is evident that whatever the preliminary negotiations in the "arrangement" of the marriage, the whole matter was contingent on the consent of the maiden.

40. my kindred. lit. "my family."

43. maiden. A different Hebrew word from that rendered "damsel" in v. 14. It denotes a girl of marriageable age, and is the word which occurs in Isaiah, VII, 14.

my master's wife bare a son to my master when she was old: and unto him hath he given all that he hath. 37. And my master made me swear, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife for my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, in whose land I dwell: 38. but thou shalt go unto my father's house, and to my kindred, and take a wife for my son. 39. And I said unto my master, Peradventure the woman will not follow me. 40. And he said unto me, The Lord, before whom I walk, will send his angel with thee, and prosper thy way; and thou shalt take a wife for my son of my kindred, and of my father's house: 41. then shalt thou be clear from my oath, when thou comest to my kindred; and if they give her not to thee, thou shalt be clear from my oath. 42. And I came this day unto the fountain, and said, O
Lord, the God of my master Abraham, if now thou do prosper my way which I go: 43. behold,
I stand by the fountain of water; and let it come to pass, that the maiden which cometh forth to draw, to whom I shall say, Give me, I pray thee, a little water of thy pitcher to drink; 44. and she shall say to me, Both drink thou, and I will also draw for thy camels: let the same be the woman whom the Lord hath appointed for my master's son. 45. And before I had done speaking in mine heart, behold, Rebekah came forth with her pitcher on her shoulder; and she went down unto the fountain, and drew: and I said unto her, Let me drink, I pray thee. 46. And she made haste, art thou? And she said, The daughter of Bethuel, Nahor's son, whom Milcah bare unto him: and I put the ring upon her nose, and the bracelets upon her hands. 48. And I bowed my head, and worshipped the Lord, and blessed the Lord, the God of my master Abraham, which had led me in the right way to take my master's brother's daughter for his son. 49. And now if ye will deal kindly and truly with my master, tell me: and if not, tell me; that I may turn to the right hand, or to the left. 50. Then Laban and Bethuel answered and said, The thing proceedeth from the Lord: we cannot speak unto thee bad or good. 51. Behold, Rebekah is before thee, take her and go, and let her be thy master's son's wife, as the Lord hath spoken. 52. And it came to pass, that, when Abraham's servant heard their words,

he bowed himself down to the earth unto the Lord.* v 53. And the servant brought forth jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment, and gave them to Rebekah: he gave also to her brother and to her mother precious things. 54. And they did eat and drink, he and the men that were with him, and tarried all night; and they rose up in the morning, and he said, Send me away

a few days, at the least ten. Or, "a full year or ten months." This is the rendering of Onkelos and other ancient Jewish versions and is quite justified by Heb. idiom. Rebekah's mother and relatives were loth suddenly to part from her, as they might never see her again.

57. inquire at her mouth. i.e. consult her, as to the time of her going. The Rabbis take it to mean as to whether she wishes to follow Eliezer, and deduce from this text the rule that a woman cannot legally be given away in marriage without her consent.

59. their sister. Laban had throughout been most prominent in the negotiations.

the Lord hath prospered my way; send me away that I may go to my master. 57. And they said,
We will call the damsel, and inquire at her mouth.
58. And they called Rebekah, and said unto her, Wilt thou go with this man? And she said, I will go. 59. And they sent away Rebekah their sister, and her nurse, and Abraham's servant, and his men. 60. And they blessed Rebekah, and said unto her, Our sister, be thou the mother of thousands of ten thousands, and let thy seed possess the gate of those which hate them. 61. And Rebekah arose, and her damsels, and they rode upon the camels, and followed the man: and the servant took Rebekah, and went his way. 62. And Isaac came from the way of Beer-lahai-roi; for he dwelt in the land of the South. 63. And Isaac

63. to meditate. The Targums and the Rabbis understood the word to mean "pray," and declared that Isaac instituted the Afternoon Service (מנחה), as Abraham had instituted the Morning Service (derived from XIX, 27), and Jacob later on instituted the Evening Service (deduced from XXVIII, 11)

64. lighted off. "She alighted from" (AJ). A mark of respect; cf. Joshua, xv, 18; I Sam. xxv, 23. In the East men and women dismount on the approach of a person of importance.

65. took her veil. Rebekah again acted in accordance with Eastern etiquette. It was not necessary for her to have her face veiled in the presence of Eliezer, since he was only a servant.

67. into his mother Sarah's tent. He installed her as mistress of the household.

The order of the words, He took Rebekah, she became his wife, and he loved her, calls for comment. In modern life we would place "he loved her" first, and write: "He loved Rebekah, he took her, and she became his wife." But, however important it is that love shall precede marriage, it is far more important that it shall continue after marriage. The modern attitude lays all the stress on the romance before marriage; the olden Jewish view emphasises the life-long devotion and affection after marriage (S. R. Hirsch).

comforted. Rebekah filled the gap caused in Isaac's life by the death of his mother. The Rabbis explain that on the death of Sarah the blessings which had attended the household of the Patriarch and the pious customs which distinguished it, came to an end; but when Rebekah was brought to the tent, they were restored. "The Sabbath lamp once more illumined the home of the Patriarch," and Rebekah continued as well all the other religious rites which Sarah had initiated.

Chapter XXV. Death of Abraham and Descendants of Ishmael

1. and Abraham took another wife. It does not necessarily mean that it was not until after the death of Sarah that he married again. It is quite possible that he took this secondary wife (in I Chron. I, 32 Keturah is called a "concubine") during her life-time; and it is only mentioned here in connection with the disposal of the Patriarch's property.

2. The domestic tradition in these verses preserves the recollection of the early relationship between the ancestors of Israel and the tribes of the North Arabian desert (Ryle).

Medan. The "Medanites" are referred to in XXXVII as traders with Egypt.

Midian. The name of a nomad tribe frequently occurring in the Bible.

Shuah. One of Job's friends is described as a Shuhite (Job II, 11).

This chapter concludes the Biblical account of the first of the Patriarchs. It is difficult, indeed, because of our life-long familiarity with the story, rightly to estimate the nobility and grandeur of the personality revealed in these chapters.

He was the pioneer of the monotheistic faith. Undazzled by the heathen splendour of a Nimrod or a Hammurabi, he broke away from the debasing idol-worship of his contemporaries, and devoted his life to the spread of the world-redeeming truth of the One God of Justice and Mercy. He forsook home and family to brave unknown dangers because the Voice of God bade him do so; and, throughout his days, he showed that faith in God must manifest itself in implicit and joyful surrender to the Divine will. He set an example to his children to sacrifice the dearest things in life and, if need be, life itself, in defence of the spiritual heritage entrusted to their care. While he preached renunciation in the service of God, he practised loving-kindness and truth towards his fellowmen. Witness his magnanimity in his treatment of Lot; his fine independence in the refusal to accept any of the spoils won by the men of his household; his benevolence in the reception of strangers; his stand for justice, when pleading for the doomed cities; and his all-embracing human pity which extended even to those who had forfeited all claim to human pity. Finally, the closing stage of his life shows his anxiety that the spiritual treasures he has acquired should be transmitted unimpaired through his son to future generations. Verily, he is the prototype of what the Jew should aim at being. "Look unto the rock whence ye were digged, look unto Abraham, your father," is the Divine exhortation addressed to Israel (Isaiah, LI, 1).

(b) JACOB

Chapters XXV–XXXVI

Chapter XXV 19–34. The Birthright

19. With this verse, a new section of the Book of Genesis commences, which extends to the end of Chapter XXXVI. Therefore, we are given a brief summary of what has gone before, to prepare us for the new events to be described.

VI TOLEDOTH

19. And these are the generations of Isaac, Abraham's son: Abraham begat Isaac: 20. and Isaac was forty years old when he took Rebekah, the daughter of Bethuel the Aramean of Paddan-aram, the sister of Laban the Aramean, to be his wife. 21. And Isaac intreated the Lord for his wife, because she was barren: and the Lord was intreated of him, and Rebekah his wife conceived. 22. And the children struggled together within her; and she said, If it be so, wherefore do I live? And she went to inquire of the Lord. 23. And the Lord said unto her,

Abraham's son. i.e. his son and heir, to distinguish him from the children of Hagar and Keturah.

Abraham begat Isaac. It was not until the Patriarch's name was altered from Abram to Abraham, "father of a multitude of nations" (XVII, 5), that Isaac was born.

20. Paddan-aram. Identical with Aram-Naharaim, or Mesopotamia; cf. XXIV, 10.

21. she was barren. Like Sarah before her (XVI, 1) and Rachel after her (XXX, 31). This sterility may have been intended to emphasise that the children who were eventually born were a gift of grace from God for the fulfilment of His purpose.

22. struggled together. A premonition of the rivalry which was to exist between the brothers and their descendants.

if it be so, wherefore do I live? Life was unbearable for her, and she wished to die (Nachmanides).

to enquire of the Lord. A technical term for seeking an answer from a Divine source. According to the Midrash, she went to the School of Shem, where the knowledge of God was taught. It is very probable that she went to "enquire of the Lord" through Abraham, who was still alive at this time (see on v. 7 above).

shall be separated. Shall be mutually antagonistic from birth.

the elder shall serve the younger. This prophecy was fulfilled when David defeated Edom. See II Sam. VIII, 14.

24. ruddy. Heb. admoni. The Midrash explains the ruddiness as a premonition of his love for hunting and the shedding of blood.

Esau. Some authorities derive it from a Semitic root meaning, "thick-haired."

26. his hand had hold on Esau's heel. As it were to pull him back and prevent him from being the first-born; cf. Hosea XII, 4.

Jacob. That is, "One that takes by the heel" or "supplants."

27. a cunning hunter. lit. "knowing hunting." The word "cunning" is used in its old meaning, "skilful."

plain. lit. "perfect"; i.e. quiet, harmless.

dwelling in tents. i.e. a shepherd. The Midrash explains "tents" to mean "schools of religious study"; cf. on v. 22.

28. now Isaac loved Esau. Although in Rabbinic literature, Esau the roving huntsman is, like Nimrod, depicted as a bad character because of the bloodshed and cruelty

Two nations are in thy womb,
And two peoples shall be separated even from thy bowels:
And the one people shall be stronger than the other people;
And the elder shall serve the younger.

24. And when her days to be delivered were fulfilled behold, there were twins in her womb. 25. And the first came forth ruddy, all over like an hairy garment; and they called his name Esau. 26. And after that came forth his brother, and his hand had hold on Esau's heel; and his name was called Jacob: and Isaac was threescore years old when she bare them. 27. And the boys grew: and Esau was a cunning hunter, a man of the field;
and Jacob was a plain man, dwelling in tents.
28. Now Isaac loved Esau, because he did eat of his venison: and Rebekah loved Jacob. 29. And Jacob sod pottage: and Esau came in from the field, and he was faint: 30. and Esau said to Jacob, Feed me, I pray thee, with that same red pottage; for I am faint: therefore was his name called Edom. 31. And Jacob said, Sell me first and Rebekah loved Jacob. Each parent had a favourite child, which was to lead to the break-up of the household. "Love thy children with an impartial love," is the wise admonition of a medieval Jewish teacher.

30. feed me. "Let me swallow" (AJ). The Heb. word, which does not occur elsewhere in the Bible, implies animal-like voracity.

nation, a standing reminder of the impulsive shortsightedness of its ancestor" (Driver). The term, "mess of pottage," used proverbially of this transaction, does not occur in the Authorised Version of the Bible.

31. sell me first of all thy birthright. At first sight, Jacob's conduct appears indeed reprehensible. On closer examination, however, we learn that the privileges of the birthright so coveted by Jacob were purely spiritual. In primitive times, the head of the clan or the first-born acted as the priest. Esau's general behaviour hardly accorded with what was due from one who was to serve the Supreme God; and Jacob suspected that his brother did not value the dignity and privilege of being the first-born as they should be valued. When, therefore, an opportunity suggested itself, Jacob determined to put his brother to the test. He knew full well that the withholding of the pottage would not have fatal consequences. He would, however, find out what Esau really thought of his birth-right. "As to power and command, Jacob never exercised any over Esau; but on the contrary, humbly and submissively addresses him as my Lord" (Abarbanel).

32. I am at the point to die. The exaggeration of a hungry man of uncontrolled appetite.

34. So Esau despised his birthright. Which he would not have done had it carried with it material advantages. The spiritual inheritance of Abraham, which would normally of all thy birthright. 32. And Esau said, Behold, I am at the point to die: and what profit shall the birthright do to me? 33. And Jacob said, Swear to me first of all; and he sware unto him:

and he sold his birthright unto Jacob. 34. And Jacob gave Esau bread and pottage of lentils;
and he did eat and drink, and rose up, and went his way: so Esau despised his birthright.

CHAPTER XXVI

26 1. And there was a famine in the land, beside the first famine that was in the days of Abraham.
And Isaac went unto Abimelech king of the Philistines unto Gerar. 2. And the Lord appeared have passed into the hands of Esau, was not worth to him as much as a dish of pottage. Like the true sensualist, this fickle and impulsive hunter readily sacrifices to the gratification of the moment that which to a man of nobler build would be of transcendent worth.

Chapter XXVI. Isaac and the Philistines

1. the first famine. Mentioned in xii, 10.

Abimelech. See on xx, 2. Possibly the dynastic name of the Philistine rulers.

Gerar. See on xx, 1.

2. go not down into Egypt. Isaac would naturally resolve to do what his father had done in similar circumstances, as described in xii, 10.

3. sojourn. Stay for the time being; cf. on xii, 10.

laws. Customs and traditional ordinances orally transmitted from generation to generation (תורות). These definitions are given in the Midrash.

this thou hast done unto us? one of the people

a hundredfold. "In the rich lava-soil of Hauran, wheat is said to yield on an average 80 fold, and barley, 100 fold" (Wetzstein).

16. The prosperity of the Patriarch creates envy among his neighbours. Modern anti-Semitism is, likewise, largely dictated by envy, thus illustrating the Rabbinic saying, "What happened to the Patriarchs, repeats itself in the life of their descendants."

17. valley. The Heb. word nahal means a wady or river-bed, which in the winter, or even after a storm, is a rushing stream, but in summer is usually reduced to a mere thread of water, or may even be entirely dry. In the bed of such wadys, water may often be found by digging (Driver).

19. living water. Or, "springing water"; the opposite of stagnant water.

And the man waxed great, and grew more and more until he became very great: 14. and he had possessions of flocks, and possessions of herds, and a great household: and the Philistines envied him. 15. Now all the wells which his father's servants had digged in the days of Abraham his father, the Philistines had stopped them, and filled them with earth. 16. And Abimelech said unto Isaac, Go from us; for thou art much mightier than we. 17. And Isaac departed thence, and encamped in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there. 18. And Isaac digged again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham: and he called their names after the names by which his father had called them. 19. And Isaac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of living water. 20. And the herdmen of Gerar strove with Isaac's herdmen, saying, The water is ours: and he called the name of the well Esek; because they contended with him. 21. And they digged another well, and they strove for that also: and he called the name of it Sitnah. 22. And he removed from thence, and

22. Rehoboth. i.e. "Latitude"; lit. "broad places." In Heb. the word denoting "spaciousness" is used to express comfort and security. Twenty miles S.W. of Beersheba there is a well known as Ruhaibeh.

Basemath. In xxxvi, 2f, we are given the names of more wives of Esau.

35. a bitterness of spirit. Or, "a grief of mind." It was against the family tradition to intermarry with these races; see xxiv, 3; xxvii, 46. The mention of Esau's wives is introduced here to show how faithless he was to the teachings and example of Abraham and Isaac, and therefore unworthy to be regarded as their spiritual heir and to receive his father's blessing.

Chapter XXVII. The Blessing of Isaac

2. I know not the day of my death. "I know not how soon I may die" (Moffat).

called it Shibah: therefore the name of the city is Beer-sheba unto this day.
34. And when Esau was forty years old he took to wife Judith the daughter of Beeri the Hittite,
and Basemath the daughter of Elon the Hittite:
35. and they were a bitterness of spirit unto Isaac and to Rebekah.

CHAPTER XXVII

27 1. And it came to pass, that when Isaac was old, and his eyes were dim, so that he could not see, he called Esau his elder son, and said unto him, My son: and he said unto him, Here am I.
2. And he said, Behold now, I am old, I know not the day of my death. 3. Now therefore take, I pray thee, thy weapons, thy quiver and thy bow,
and go out to the field, and take me venison;
4. and make me savoury meat, such as I love, and bring it to me, that I may eat; that my soul may bless thee before I die. 5. And Rebekah heard when Isaac spake to Esau his son. And Esau went to the field to hunt for venison, and to bring

"I may bless thee;" see on XII, 13. The dying utterance was deemed prophetic.

5. heard. More accurately, "was listening." To understand Rebekah's action, it is necessary to bear in mind what had been stated in XXV, 23. When she had enquired of the Lord about her unborn children, she had been told, "the elder shall serve the younger." This prophecy appeared on the point of being falsified by Isaac's intention to bestow his chief blessing upon Esau. Knowing how attached Isaac was to the elder son, she must have felt that it would be useless to try and dissuade her husband from his intention. She, therefore, in desperation, decided to circumvent him.

which were with her in the house. Though Esau was married and presumably had a home of his own, he would keep some of his clothes at his father's house which he would don during his visits from hunting, after removing his soiled garments.

19. I am Esau thy first-born. These words mislead Isaac, and were spoken with the intention of inducing his father to believe that it was Esau who stood before him. Jacob, having been persuaded to adopt his mother's plan, is forced to play his part to the end (Ibn Ezra).

it. 6. And Rebekah spake unto Jacob her son, saying, Behold, I heard thy father speak unto Esau thy brother, saying, 7. Bring me venison, and make me a savoury meat, that I may eat, and bless thee before the Lord before my death. 8. Now therefore, my son, obey my voice according to that which I command thee. 9. Go now to the flock, and fetch me from thence two good kids of the goats; and I will make them savoury meat for thy father, such as he loveth: 10. and thou shalt bring it to thy father, that he may eat, so that he may bless thee before his death. 11. And Jacob said to Rebekah his mother, Behold, Esau my brother is a hairy man, and I am a smooth man.
12. My father peradventure will feel me, and I shall seem to him as a mocker; and I shall bring a curse upon me, and not a blessing. 13. And his mother said unto him, Upon me be thy curse, my son: only obey my voice, and go fetch me them.
14. And he went, and fetched, and brought them to his mother: and his mother made savoury meat, such as his father loved. 15. And Rebekah took the goodly raiment of Esau her elder son,
which were with her in the house, and put them upon Jacob her younger son: 16. and she put the skins of the kids of the goats upon his hands, and upon the smooth of his neck: 17. and she gave the savoury meat and the bread, which she had prepared, into the hand of her son Jacob.
18. And he came unto his father, and said, My father: and he said, Here am I; who art thou, my son? 19. And Jacob said unto his father, I the Lord thy God sent me good speed. Such words were not of the kind likely to have been spoken by the rough Esau. The name of God was probably rare on his lips. Hence Jacob's statement arouses his father's suspicions, who requires to be assured by the very test which Jacob dreaded, in v. 12.

23. so he blessed him. If that be the meaning of the Hebrew, we should expect the wording of the blessing to follow immediately. We do not, however, have that until v. 28. It is therefore possible that the Hebrew should here be rendered : " he greeted him."

I pray thee, that I may feel thee, my son, whether thou be my very son Esau or not. 22. And Jacob went near unto Isaac his father; and he felt him,
and said, The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau. 23. And he discerned him not because his hands were hairy, as his brother Esau's hands: so he blessed him. 24. And he

I will eat of my son's venison, that my soul may

he did eat: and he brought him wine, and he drank. 26. And his father Isaac said unto him, Come near now, and kiss me, my son. 27. And he came near, and kissed him: and he smelled
the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said,

29. Let peoples serve thee,
And nations bow down to thee:
Be lord over thy brethren,
And let thy mother's sons bow down to thee:
Cursed be every one that curseth thee,
And blessed be every one that blesseth thee.
30. And it came to pass, as soon as Isaac had made an end of blessing Jacob, and Jacob was yet scarce gone out from the presence of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came in from his hunting. 31. And he also made savoury meat, and brought it unto his father; and he said unto his father, Let my father arise, and eat of his son's venison, that thy soul may bless me.

words of his father, he cried with an exceeding great and bitter cry, and said unto his father,

38. wept. "Those tears of Esau, the sensuous, wild impulsive man, almost like the cry of some 'trapped creature,' are among the most pathetic in the Bible" (Davidson). The Rabbis declare that bitter retribution was in later years exacted from Jacob for having caused these tears of Esau.

thou shalt serve thy brother. The promise of lordship made to Jacob could not be recalled; but Isaac foretells that it would be of limited duration. We read of revolts on the part of the Edomites in I Kings XI, 14f, and II Kings VIII, 20f.

41. mourning for my father. It is at least to Esau's credit that he decided to spare his father's feelings, and lord, and all his brethren have I given to him for servants; and with corn and wine have I sustained him: and what then shall I do for thee, my son? 38. And Esau said unto his father Hast thou but one blessing, my father? bless me even me also, O my father. And Esau lifted up his voice, and wept. 39. And Isaac his father answered and said unto him,

Behold, away from the fatness of the earth shall be thy dwelling,
And away from the dew of heaven from above;
40. And by thy sword shalt thou live, and thou shalt serve thy brother;
And it shall come to pass when thou shalt break loose,
That thou shalt shake his yoke from off thy neck.

41. And Esau hated Jacob because of the blessing wherewith his father blessed him: and Esau said in his heart, The days of mourning for my father are at hand; then will I slay my brother Jacob.
42. And the words of Esau her elder son were told to Rebekah; and she sent and called Jacob her younger son, and said unto him, Behold, thy brother Esau, as touching thee, doth comfort himself, purposing to kill thee. 43. Now therefore, my son, obey my voice; and arise, flee thou wait for his death before avenging himself on Jacob (Midrash).

Chapter XXVIII, 10–22. Jacob's Dream

10. went out from Beer-sheba. Why is this mentioned—ask the Rabbis—since it would have been sufficient to state, "Jacob went towards Haran"? They reply that the departure of a righteous man from any place diminishes its importance, and should be keenly felt by its inhabitants.

11. and he lighted. Since the same Heb. word signifies "to entreat," the Talmud deduces from this passage that Jacob prayed there for Divine protection, and thus instituted the Evening Prayer (see on xxiv, 63).

Rebekah, Jacob's and Esau's mother. 6. Now Esau saw that Isaac had blessed Jacob and sent him away to Paddan-aram, to take him a wife from thence; and that as he blessed him he gave him a charge, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan;*m 7. and that Jacob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone to Paddan-aram: 8. and Esau saw that the daughters of Canaan pleased not Isaac his father;
9. and Esau went unto Ishmael, and took unto the wives which he had Mahalath the daughter of Ishmael Abraham's son, the sister of Nebaioth, to be his wife.

10. And Jacob went out from Beer-sheba, and went toward Haran. 11. And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set; and he took one of the stones of the place, and put it under his head, and lay down in that place to sleep. 12. And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the a certain place. lit. "upon the place." The Rabbis stress the definite article in the Heb. idiom, and state that it was Mount Moriah.

12. The description of Jacob's dream is among the most beautiful in literature (Hazlitt). We have here wonderful imagery which, in its symbolism, speaks to each man according to his mental and spiritual outlook. Its message to Jacob is its message to all men in all ages—that the earth is full of the glory of God, that He is not far off in His heavenly abode and heedless of what men do on earth. Every spot on earth may be for man "the gate of heaven."

ascending and descending. It is to be noted that the angels are first mentioned as ascending, as though they had been accompanying the Patriarch on his journey. He may have been without human friends; but, unseen, there had been angels by his side to protect and encourage him.

13. beside him. Or, "above it," i.e. the ladder. The translation "beside him" is supported by many Jewish commentators and is to be preferred.

be blessed. See on XII, 3.

15. I am with thee. Therefore Jacob need have no fear of the threats of Esau.

16. I knew it not. In popular belief the presence of God was restricted to "sacred places." Many people still confine religion to sacred occasions and the sacred locality which is top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it.

13. And, behold, the Lord stood beside him, and said, I am the Lord, the God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed;
14. and thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth,
and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. 15. And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee whithersoever thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of. 16. And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not. 17. And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place!
this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven. 18. And Jacob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put under his head, and set it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it. 19. And he

17. dreadful. "Full of awe" (AJ). The Heb. word nora signifies, inspiring reverential awe.

18. for a pillar. Not intended as an altar or as an act of worship, but to mark the spot where he had had the fateful dream-vision. He hopes, however, at a later time to erect a Sanctuary on the spot (see v. 22).

Luz. The holy place Bethel was outside the old city of Luz. Jacob did not spend the night in Luz but on its outskirts. We learn from Chap. XIX of the dangers which might attend a traveller who entered a strange town at night.

20. vowed. Jacob resolves to devote a part of the prosperity which God had promised him in His service. This is the first mention of a vow in the Bible.

21. then shall the Lord be my God. i.e. in gratitude for His care and protection, I shall dedicate my life to Him.

22. tenth. Cf. XIV, 20. The tithe figures later in the laws of the Israelite people. To this day pious Jews spend a tenth of their earnings in charity.

Chapter XXIX. Jacob and Laban

1. children of the East. A term to denote generally the Arab tribes located E. and N.E. of Palestine.

2. the stone upon the well's mouth. In the East, wells are called the name of that place Beth-el: but the name of the city was Luz at the first. 20. And Jacob vowed a vow, saying, If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on. 21. so that I come again to my father's house in peace, then shall the Lord be my God, 22. and this stone, which I have set up for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee.*ii

CHAPTER XXIX

29 1. Then Jacob went on his journey, and came to the land of the children of the east. 2. And he looked, and behold a well in the field, and, lo, three flocks of sheep lying there by it; for out of that well they watered the flocks: and the stone upon the well's mouth was great. 3. And thither were all the flocks gathered: and they rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth in its place. 4. And Jacob said unto them, My brethren, whence be ye? And they said, Of Haran are we. 5. And he said unto them, Know ye Laban the son of Nahor? And still covered over with a large boulder to prevent the water from becoming polluted.

3. gathered. The verbs are "frequentative," and should be rendered, "All the flocks used to gather together . . . used to roll . . . and water" (Rashi).

4. my brethren. Evidently a common form of address.

5. the son of Nahor. Laban was Nahor's grandson; but see on xx, 12

we know him. There is no word in Biblical Hebrew corresponding to our "yes;" consequently, the answer to a question is a repetition of the word or words in the affirmative or negative.

6. is it well with him? lit. "is there peace to him"? cometh. lit. "is coming."

8. They wait for others to arrive, so that by their combined effort they remove the stone; or, possibly, because it would be unwise to remove the stone until all the flocks were there, lest in the interval the wind blew dust and sand into the well.

9. kept them. "tended them" (AJ). To this day it would not be considered derogatory for an Arab Sheikh's daughter to be his shepherdess.

10. Jacob disregards the local custom, and by a feat of great personal strength, removes the stone. The phrase, "his mother's brother" is used three times in this verse, to denote the joy Jacob felt in meeting and helping a member of his mother's family.

they said, We know him. 6. And he said unto them, Is it well with him? And they said, It is well: and, behold, Rachel his daughter cometh with the sheep. 7. And he said, Lo, it is yet high day, neither is it time that the cattle should be gathered together: water ye the sheep, and go and feed them. 8. And they said, We cannot, until all the flocks be gathered together, and they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep. 9. While he yet spake with them, Rachel came with her father's sheep; for she kept them. 10. And it came to pass, when Jacob saw Rachel the daughter of Laban his mother's brother, and the sheep of Laban his mother's brother, that Jacob went near, and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the flock of Laban his mother's brother. 11. And Jacob kissed Rachel, and lifted up his voice, and wept. 12. And Jacob told Rachel that he was her father's brother, and that he was Rebekah's son: and she ran and told her father. 13. And it came to pass, when Laban heard the tidings of Jacob his sister's son, that he ran to meet him, and embraced him, and kissed him, and brought told her father. Her mother having died (Midrash).

12. her father's brother. i.e. her relative.

13. embraced him. The effusive welcome stands in sharp contrast to Laban's later treatment of Jacob. The Rabbis doubted its genuineness.

all these things. i.e. that Rebekah had sent him because of the wrath of Esau.

14. my bone and my flesh. As his near kinsman, he is welcome to his home.

15. wages. Jacob from the outset seems to have decided not to be indebted to his uncle, and to earn his maintenance.

17. tender. "weak" (AJ)—without brightness or brilliance of lustre. Among Arabs, the chief point of a woman's beauty consists in bright, fiery, black eyes (Dillmann).

18. for Rachel. As explained on XXIV, 53, a wife had to be "purchased" from her father or family. It is still the custom in the East for a man who cannot provide money or cattle, to offer his labour as a substitute.

19. to thee. A relative; it was considered preferable for husband and wife to belong to the same family.

20. and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her. The six Heb. words of which this is the translation condense a world of affection and tenderest love. They are unsurpassed in the whole literature of romantic love.

him to his house. And he told Laban all these things. 14. And Laban said to him, Surely thou art my bone and my flesh. And he abode with him the space of a month. 15. And Laban said unto Jacob, Because thou art my brother, shouldest thou therefore serve me for nought? tell me, what shall thy wages be? 16. And Laban had two daughters: the name of the elder was Leah, and the name of the younger was Rachel. 17. And Leah's eyes were tender; but Rachel was beautiful and well favoured.*iii 18. And Jacob loved Rachel;
and he said, I will serve thee seven years for Rachel thy younger daughter. 19. And Laban said,
It is better that I give her to thee, than that I should give her to another man: abide with me.
20. And Jacob served seven years for Rachel;
and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her. 21. And Jacob said unto Laban, Give me my wife, for my days are fulfilled, that I may go in unto her. 22. And Laban gathered together all the men of the place, and made a feast. 23. And it came to pass in the evening, that he took Leah his daughter, and brought her to him; and he went in unto her.
24. And Laban gave Zilpah his handmaid unto his daughter Leah for an handmaid. 25. And it

26. give the younger. A feigned excuse, since the feast was for the maiden for whom Jacob had served.

27. fulfil the week of this one. i.e. do not repudiate the marriage with Leah. The wedding celebrations usually lasted a week; cf. Judges XIV, 12.

we will give thee. i.e. Laban and his family will give; cf. XXIV, 50.

28. and he gave him Rachel. Eight days after Leah, on the understanding that Jacob was to serve Laban for another seven years. This was before the Giving of the Law at Sinai. The marrying of two sisters was thereafter forbidden.

30. seven other years. The Midrash comments that Jacob served the second term as conscientiously as the first, although he was labouring under a sense of grievance against his uncle.

Chapter XXIX, 31–XXX, 24. The Birth of Jacob's Children

31. hated. The word here only means "less loved"—

came to pass in the morning that, behold, it was Leah: and he said to Laban, What is this thou hast done unto me? did not I serve with thee for Rachel? wherefore then hast thou beguiled me?
26. And Laban said, It is not so done in our place, to give the younger before the firstborn.
27. Fulfil the week of this one, and we will give thee the other also for the service which thou shalt serve with me yet seven other years.
28. And Jacob did so, and fulfilled her week: and he gave him Rachel his daughter to wife.
29. And Laban gave to Rachel his daughter Bilhah his handmaid to be her handmaid.
30. And he went in also unto Rachel, and he loved also Rachel more than Leah, and served with him yet seven other years.

31. And the Lord saw that Leah was hated, and he opened her womb: but Rachel was barren.
32. And Leah conceived, and bare a son, and she called his name Reuben: for she said, Because the Lord hath looked upon my affliction; for now my husband will love me.
33. And she conceived again, and bare a son; and said, Because the Lord hath heard that I am hated, he hath therefore given me this son also: and she called not that Jacob had an aversion to her, but that he preferred Rachel; cf. Deut. XXI, 15.

his name Simeon. 34. And she conceived again, and bare a son; and said, Now this time will my husband be joined unto me, because I have borne him three sons: therefore was his name called Levi. 35. And she conceived again, and bare a son: and she said, This time will I praise the Lord: therefore she called his name Judah; and she left bearing.

CHAPTER XXX

30 1. And when Rachel saw that she bare Jacob no children, Rachel envied her sister; and she said unto Jacob, Give me children, or else I die.
2. And Jacob's anger was kindled against Rachel:
and he said, Am I in God's stead, who hath withheld from thee the fruit of the womb? 3. And she said, Behold my maid Bilhah, go in unto her, that she may bear upon my knees, and I also may obtain children by her. 4. And she gave him Bilhah her handmaid to wife: and Jacob went in unto her. 5. And Bilhah conceived, and bare Jacob a son. 6. And Rachel said, God hath judged me, and hath also heard my voice, and hath given me a son: therefore called she his name Dan. 7. And Bilhah Rachel's handmaid conceived again, and bare Jacob a second son. 8. And Rachel said, With mighty wrestlings have I wrestled with my sister, and have prevailed: and she called his name Naphtali. 9. When Leah saw that she had left bearing, she took Zilpah her

* v. 11. בא גד קרי. v. 16. סבירין ההוא. v. 19. צירי בסמך ובמקף

11. Fortune is come. This is the Heb. text according to its traditional reading, the Kre.

13. Asher. Heb. asher, to call happy.

14. mandrakes. Or, as the RV Margin translates, "love apples." The fruit is of the size of a large plum, quite round, yellow and full of soft pulp. The fruit is still considered in the East as a love-charm. This explains Rachel's anxiety to obtain it.

15. thou hast taken away. By holding first place in his affections.

18. Issachar. Heb. sachar, "to hire."

20. Zebulun. Heb. zabal, "to dwell."

handmaid, and gave her to Jacob to wife. 10. And Zilpah Leah's handmaid bare Jacob a son. 11. And Leah said, Fortune is come! and she called his name Gad. 12. And Zilpah Leah's handmaid bare Jacob a second son. 13. And Leah said, Happy am I! for the daughters will call me happy: and she called his name Asher.* iv 14. And Reuben went in the days of wheat harvest, and found mandrakes in the field, and brought them unto his mother Leah. Then Rachel said to Leah,
Give me, I pray thee, of thy son's mandrakes.
15. And she said unto her, Is it a small matter that thou hast taken away my husband? and wouldest thou take away my son's mandrakes also? And Rachel said, Therefore he shall lie with thee to-night for thy son's mandrakes. 16. And Jacob came from the field in the evening, and Leah went out to meet him, and said, Thou must come in unto me; for I have surely hired thee with my son's mandrakes. And he lay with her that night. 17. And God hearkened unto Leah,
and she conceived, and bare Jacob a fifth son.
18. And Leah said, God hath given me my hire, because I gave my handmaid to my husband:
and she called his name Issachar. 19. And Leah conceived again, and bare a sixth son to Jacob.
20. And Leah said, God hath endowed me with a good dowry; now will my husband dwell with me, because I have borne him six sons: and she called his name Zebulun. 21. And afterwards she bare a daughter, and called her name Dinah.
22. And God remembered Rachel, and God

22. God hearkened. To her prayers.

23. my reproach. Of being left childless. The Heb. name has the double sense of "taking away" (the reproach) and of "adding" (to her another son.)

25–43. Jacob's Wages

25. send me away. It would thus seem that the fourteen years' service terminated shortly after Joseph's birth.

26. give me my wives. As though they had not been Jacob's own until the service was duly finished.

27. found favour in thine eyes. Laban wishes to retain Jacob.

divined. "I have observed the signs" (AJ).

30. whithersoever I turned. lit. "at my foot," i.e. either "at every step I took"; or (so the Midrash), "at my coming" into thy house.

provide for mine own house. His wives and children now

hearkened to her, and opened her womb. 23. And she conceived, and bare a son: and said, God hath taken away my reproach: 24. and she called his name Joseph, saying, The Lord add to me another son.

25. And it came to pass, when Rachel had borne Joseph, that Jacob said unto Laban, Send me away, that I may go unto mine own place, and to my country. 26. Give me my wives and my children for whom I have served thee, and let me go: for thou knowest my service wherewith I have served thee. 27. And Laban said unto him, If now I have found favour in thine eyes, tarry: for I have divined that the Lord hath blessed me for thy sake.* v 28. And he said, Appoint me thy wages, and I will give it. 29. And he said unto him, Thou knowest how I have served thee, and how thy cattle hath fared with me. 30. For it was little which thou hadst before I came, and it hath increased unto a multitude; and the Lord hath blessed thee whithersoever I turned: and now when shall I provide for mine own house also? 31. And he said, What shall I give thee? And Jacob said, Thou shalt not give me aught: if thou wilt do this thing for me, I will again feed thy flock and keep it. 32. I will belong to him, and he feels the responsibility of making provision for their future.

31. Jacob, still feeling sore at the way he had been outwitted by Laban over the matter of Rachel, determines to put to good use his exceptional knowledge and skill as a shepherd.

32. The sheep in Syria are white and the goats black. Jacob asks as his wages the sheep which are not white and the goats which are not black. Laban considers the request fair and, to him, profitable.

of such shall be my hire. These, and the lambs and kids subsequently born with the same peculiarity, should belong to him.

33. righteousness. "In this way my honesty will tell, when you come to cast your eye over my share; any goat in my lot that is not speckled or spotted, any sheep that is not black, you may consider to have been stolen" (Moffat).

The compact is all in Laban's favour; but, crafty, selfish and grasping, he starts to circumvent Jacob, by preventing the increase of any speckled or brown cattle.

36. three days' journey. A phrase denoting a considerable distance; cf. Exod. III, 18.

37. strakes. "Streaks." Jacob devises three plans for the purpose of frustrating Laban. He placed streaked pass through all thy flock to-day, removing from thence every speckled and spotted one, and every black one among the sheep, and the spotted and speckled among the goats: and of such shall be my hire. 33. So shall my righteousness answer for me hereafter, when thou shalt come concerning my hire that is before thee: every one that is not speckled and spotted among the goats, and black among the sheep, that if found with me shall be counted stolen. 34. And Laban said, Behold,

I would it might be according to thy word.
35. And he removed that day the he-goats that were ringstraked and spotted, and all the she-goats that were speckled and spotted, every one that had white in it, and all the black ones among the sheep, and gave them into the hand of his sons; 36. and he set three days' journey betwixt himself and Jacob: and Jacob fed the rest of Laban's flocks. 37. And Jacob took him rods of fresh poplar, and of the almond and of the plane-tree; and peeled white strakes in them, and made the white appear which was in the rods. 38. And he set the rods which he had peeled over against the flocks in the gutters in the watering troughs
where the flocks came to drink; and they conceived when they came to drink. 39. And the flocks conceived before the rods, and the flocks brought forth ringstraked, speckled, and spotted.

rods over against the ewes. The sight of these rods would affect the colouring of the young about to be born. "He did not resort to this device the first year, and thereafter only in connection with his own flock; otherwise it would have been flagrant dishonesty" (Kimchi).

40. The second plan was, Jacob separates the newly born spotted lambs and kids from the rest of the flock, but so arranges them that there should be a further tendency to bear spotted young.

41. He devises to secure for his own share the young of the strongest animals.

CHAPTER XXXI, 1–21. THE FLIGHT OF JACOB

1. Laban's sons. Mentioned in xxx, 35. The natural effect of Jacob's remarkable prosperity was to breed jealousy among his relatives, who felt that he had grown rich at their expense.

2. the countenance of Laban. Laban made no attempt to conceal his feelings.

40. And Jacob separated the lambs, and set the faces of the flocks towards the ringstraked and all the black in the flock of Laban; and he put his own droves apart, and put them not unto Laban's flock. 41. And it came to pass, whensoever the stronger of the flock did conceive, that Jacob laid the rods before the eyes of the flock in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods; 42. but when the flock were feeble, he put them not in: so the feebler were Laban's, and the stronger Jacob's. 43. And the man increased exceedingly, and had large flocks, and maidservants and menservants, and camels and asses.

CHAPTER XXXI

31 1. And he heard the words of Laban's sons, saying, Jacob hath taken away all that was our father's; and of that which was our father's hath he gotten all this wealth. 2. And Jacob beheld the countenance of Laban, and, behold, it was not toward him as beforetime. 3. And the Lord said unto Jacob, Return unto the land of thy fathers, and to thy kindred; and I will be with thee. 4. And Jacob sent and called Rachel and Leah to the field unto his flock, 5. and said unto them, I see your father's countenance, that it

If he said thus, The speckled shall be thy wages; then all the flock bare speckled: and if he said thus, The ringstraked shall be thy wages; then bare all the flock ringstraked. 9. Thus God hath taken away the cattle of your father, and given them to me. 10. And it came to pass at the time that the flock conceived, that I lifted up mine eyes, and saw in a dream, and, behold, the he-goats which leaped upon the flock were ringstraked, speckled, and grisled. 11. And the angel of God said unto me in the dream, Jacob: and I said, Here am I. 12. And he said, Lift up now thine eyes, and see, all the he-goats which leap upon the flock are ringstraked, speckled and grisled: for I have seen all that Laban doeth unto thee. 13. I am the God of Beth-el, where thou anointedst a pillar, where thou vowedst a vow unto me: now arise, get thee out from this land, and return unto the land of thy nativity. 14. And Rachel and Leah answered and said unto him, Is there yet any portion or inheritance for us in our father's house? 15. Are we not counted of him strangers? for he hath sold us, and hath also quite devoured the price paid for us. 16. For which accrued during Jacob's fourteen years of labour for us. Instead, he kept it all to himself, and now begrudges what our husband has gained by his toil.

v. 18. קמץ בז״ק

17. his sons. The word should be rendered here, "his children."

18. the cattle of his getting. i.e. which he had purchased; viz., camels and asses, XXX, 43.

19. gone to shear his sheep. This explains how it was that Jacob was able to get away without the knowledge of Laban. The occasion of sheep-shearing was a time of feasting, and lasted several days.

teraphim. Images kept in the house, perhaps corresponding to the Roman penates, to bring protection and good fortune. Laban calls them "my gods" (v. 30). Why did Rachel carry them off? The Midrash answers, to prevent her father from worshipping them. The motive was, in all probability, to secure the continuation of prosperity to her husband in his new place of abode.

20. stole away unawares to. "Outwitted."

21. passed over the river. Haran was situated N. of the Euphrates.

the mountain of Gilead. Or, "the hill-country of Gilead," the region E. of Jordan.

all the riches which God hath taken away from our father, that is ours and our children's: now
then, whatsoever God hath said unto thee, do.*vi 17. Then Jacob rose up, and set his sons and his wives upon the camels; 18. and he carried away all his cattle, and all his substance which he had gathered, the cattle of his getting which he had gathered in Paddan-aram, for to go to Isaac his father unto the land of Canaan. 19. Now Laban was gone to shear his sheep: and Rachel stole the teraphim that were her father's. 20. And Jacob stole away unawares to Laban the Syrian, in that he told him not that he fled. 21. So he fled with all that he had; and he rose up, and passed over the River, and set his face toward the mountain of Gilead.

22. And it was told Laban on the third day that Jacob was fled. 23. And he took his brethren with him, and pursued after him seven days'
journey; and he overtook him in the mountain of Gilead. 24. And God came to Laban the Syrian in a dream of the night, and said unto him, Take heed to thyself that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad. 25. And Laban came

23. brethren. Men of his clan.

22–54. Laban's Pursuit

24. either good or bad. i.e. anything, as in XXIV, 50. The phrase is the same Heb. phrase and idiom as in II, 17, III, 5 and 22, where it means, "all things." Here it is in negative form and means, "not anything." Laban was neither to entice him by offers of kindness, nor force him to return by threats.

26. as though captives of the sword. Without allowing them an opportunity of taking farewell of their father and brothers. Laban strikes the note of injured innocence.

28. sons. i.e. grandsons (see on xx, 12), and daughters may include Rachel, Leah and Laban's granddaughters.

29. to do you hurt. It would thus seem that Laban was accompanied by a large band which outnumbered Jacob and his servants.

31. This verse answers the first point mentioned by Laban ; viz., the secrecy with which Jacob left him.

32. shall not live. The Patriarch does not mean that he will himself kill the culprit, but the wrong-doer's life will be placed in Laban's hands ; cf. XLIV, 9.

33. Nachmanides explains that Laban's search was in the following order : Jacob, Leah, Rachel, and lastly the handmaids. The narrative, however, reserves the mention up with Jacob. Now Jacob had pitched his tent in the mountain : and Laban with his brethren pitched in the mountain of Gilead. 26. And Laban said to Jacob, What hast thou done, that thou hast stolen away unawares to me, and carried away my daughters as captives of the sword? 27. Wherefore didst thou flee secretly, and steal away from me ; and didst not tell me, that I might have sent thee away with mirth and with songs, with tabret and with harp ; 28. and hast not suffered me to kiss my sons and my daughters? now hast thou done foolishly. 29. It is in the power of my hand to do you hurt : but the God of your father spake unto me yesternight, saying, Take heed to thyself that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad. 30. And now, though thou wouldst needs be gone, because thou sore longedst after thy father's house, yet wherefore hast thou stolen my gods? 31. And Jacob answered and said to Laban, Because I was afraid : for I said, Lest thou shouldest take thy daughters from me by force. 32. With whomsoever thou findest thy gods, he shall not live : before our brethren discern thou what is thine with me, and take it to thee. For Jacob knew not that Rachel had stolen them. 33. And Laban went into Jacob's tent, and into Leah's tent, and into the tent of the two maidservants ; but he found them not. And he went out of Leah's tent, and entered into Rachel's tent.

of Rachel for the last, because it is upon her that interest is centred.

v. 35. מלא ואי״ו

34. furniture. The word is better translated "palanquin"—a sort of compartment, tied on to the saddle, covered with an awning and surrounded with curtains, in which Oriental women travel.

35. rise. A child had to stand up when the father entered the room.

36. wroth. The Patriarch's indignation is aroused when his innocence is established; and he accuses Laban of fabricating the charge of stealing the teraphim as a pretext to search his possessions.

answered. i.e. replied to Laban's accusations.

38. have not cast their young. Due to the skill and assiduity of the shepherd.

39. or by night. In these words lies the bitterness of reproach. A shepherd was entitled to his rest at night, and he could not in justice be held responsible if damage was then done by prowling beasts, provided reasonable precautions had been taken.

According to the Code of Hammurabi, which was the Common Law in Mesopotamia at the time, the shepherd

34. Now Rachel had taken the teraphim, and put them in the camel's furniture, and sat upon them.
And Laban felt about all the tent, but found them not. 35. And she said to her father, Let not my lord be angry that I cannot rise up before thee;
for the manner of women is upon me. And he searched, but found not the teraphim. 36. And Jacob was wroth, and chode with Laban: and Jacob answered and said to Laban, What is my trespass? what is my sin, that thou hast hotly pursued after me? 37. Whereas thou hast felt about all my stuff, what hast thou found of all thy household stuff? Set it here before my brethren and thy brethren, that they may judge betwixt us two. 38. This twenty years have I been with thee; thy ewes and thy she-goats have not cast their young, and the rams of thy flocks have I not eaten. 39. That which was torn of beasts I brought not unto thee; I bare the loss of it; of my hand didst thou require it,
whether stolen by day or stolen by night. 40.
Thus I was; in the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night; and my sleep fled from mine eyes. 41. These twenty years have I been in thy house; I served thee fourteen years
for thy two daughters, and six years for thy flock:

gave a receipt for the animals entrusted to him, and was bound to return them with reasonable increase. He was allowed to use a certain number for food, and was not responsible for those killed by lion or lightning. Any loss due to his carelessness he had to repay tenfold. All this throws wonderful light on the relations between Jacob and Laban.

rebuked thee. See v. 29.

43. Laban is unable to answer Jacob's reproaches, and therefore repeats the claim based on primitive usage, whereby the head of the family is the nominal possessor of all that belonged to its members. He then pretends to be solicitous for the welfare of his daughters and grandchildren.

46. heap. Or, "cairn."

they did eat. viz., Jacob and Laban as the contracting parties. The meal was part of the ceremony of the covenant of friendship. The Arabs still mark the end of a feud by eating together.

47. The names are the Aramaic and Hebrew words for, "the heap of witness."

49. Mizpah. That is, "the watch-tower."

50. Laban still keeps up the pretext that the pact and thou hast changed my wages ten times.

43. And Laban answered and said unto Jacob, The daughters are my daughters, and the children are my children, and the flocks are my flocks, and all that thou seest is mine: and what can I do this day unto these my daughters, or unto their children which they have borne? 44. And now come, let us make a covenant, I and thou; and let it be for a witness between me and thee.
45. And Jacob took a stone, and set it up for a pillar. 46. And Jacob said unto his brethren. Gather stones; and they took stones, and made an heap: and they did eat there by the heap.
47. And Laban called it Jegar-sahadutha: but Jacob called it Galeed. 48. And Laban said, This heap is witness between me and thee this day. Therefore was the name of it called Galeed:
49. and Mizpah, for he said, The Lord watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another. 50. If thou shalt afflict my daughters, and if thou shalt take wives beside my daughters, no man is with us; see, God is witness betwixt me and thee. 51. And Laban said to Jacob, made between him and Jacob is for the protection of his daughters; but he immediately proceeds to set up another heap and pillar to safeguard himself from any aggression on Jacob's part in the future.

53. The Talmud declares that the word "God" before "Nahor" is non-holy. Laban, being a descendant of Nahor (XXII, 20f) calls upon the deity worshipped by his family as well upon the God worshipped by Jacob's family to witness the covenant; but Jacob, who refuses to acknowledge the "god of Nahor," swears only by the "Fear" of Isaac.
God of their father. Each one swears by the God of his father (Nachmanides).

54. offered a sacrifice. Of thanksgiving to God for having intervened on his behalf and saved him from the evil designs of Laban.

CHAPTER XXXII

1. his sons. i.e. his grandchildren.

2. went on his way. to Bethel, whither God had sent him to fulfil his vow. This vision is similar in some respects to that which had cheered him on his outward journey at Bethel. It assured him that God was mindful of His promises.

Behold this heap, and behold the pillar, which I have set betwixt me and thee. 52. This heap be witness, and the pillar be witness, that I will not pass over this heap to thee, and that thou shalt not pass over this heap and this pillar unto me, for harm. 53. The God of Abraham, and the God of Nahor, the God of their father, judge betwixt us. And Jacob sware by the Fear of his father Isaac. 54. And Jacob offered a sacrifice in the mountain, and called his brethren to eat bread: and they did eat bread, and tarried all night in the mountain.*m

CHAPTER XXXII

32 1. And early in the morning Laban rose up, and kissed his sons and his daughters, and blessed them: and Laban departed, and returned unto his place. 2. And Jacob went on his way, and the angels of God met him. 3. And Jacob said when he saw them, This is God's host: and he called the name of that place Mahanaim.

3. Mahanaim. lit. "Two hosts"; or, "two companies"—the company of the angels and Laban's camp. Mahanaim, in later times, was an important Israelite city, E. of the Jordan.

VIII. VAYYISHLACH

(Chapters XXXII, 4–XXXVI)

Chapters XXXII, 4–XXXIII, 17. The Fear of Esau

4. As Jacob approaches his home land, the fear of his brother revives in him. Twenty years had passed, but Esau might still wreak vengeance on Jacob and his dependents. Jacob well knew that some men nurse their anger, so that it should not die down or out.

field. i.e. territory.

5. Jacob frames his message in the most humble and conciliatory words.

I have sojourned. Rashi takes these words to mean: "I have not become a prince but am only a 'sojourner'; therefore thou hast no cause to hate me because of my father's blessing, in which I was promised to be made greater than thee. It has not been fulfilled." Since the letters of the Hebrew word גרתי "I have sojourned" correspond to the numerals denoting "six hundred and thirteen," the number of the Pentateuchal commandments (תרי"ג מצוות), the Midrash comments: "With Laban I sojourned, but the 613 Commandments I observed"—an exhortation to Jacob's descendants to be faithful to the Torah when living in a non-Jewish environment.

VIII. VAYYISHLACH

4. And Jacob sent messengers before him to Esau his brother unto the land of Seir, the field of Edom. 5. And he commanded them, saying, Thus shall ye say unto my lord Esau; Thus saith thy servant Jacob, I have sojourned with Laban, and stayed until now: 6. and I have oxen, and asses and flocks, and menservants and maidservants: and I have sent to tell my lord, that I may find grace in thy sight. 7. And the messengers returned to Jacob, saying, We came to thy brother Esau, and moreover he cometh to meet thee, and four hundred men with him. 8. Then Jacob was greatly afraid and was distressed: and he divided the people that was with him, and the flocks, and the herds, and the camels, into two companies; 9. and he said, If Esau come to the

and was distressed. Even greater anguish possessed him at the thought that he might be compelled to slay (Midrash). He does not, however, give way to despair, but takes all possible steps to safeguard himself and those with him. He adopted three methods for overcoming the evil intentions of his brother. His first defence was prayer to God for His protection (v. 10–13); the second was to turn Esau's hate into good will by gifts (v. 14–22); his third and last resource was to stand his ground and fight.

10. Jacob's prayer, showing his humility and gratitude, is proof that misfortune had developed the nobler impulses of his heart. Twenty years of fixed principle, steadfast purpose and of resolute sacrifice of present for future, purify and ennoble. It proves that even from the first, though ambitious and self-centred, Jacob is yet delicately sensitive to spiritual realities and capable of genuine reformation. And the truly penitent—declare the Rabbis—come nearer unto God than even those who have never stumbled or fallen into sin.

23–33. Jacob becomes Israel

This passage represents the crisis in Jacob's spiritual history. It records his meeting with a Heavenly Being, the change of his name to Israel, the blessing of the Being that wrestled with him, and the consequent transformation of his character. Maimonides is of opinion that the whole incident was a "prophetic vision"; and commentators likewise have in all ages regarded the contest as symbolic, the outward manifestation of the struggle within the Patriarch, as in every mortal, between his baser passions and his nobler ideals. In the dead of night he had sent his wives and sons and all that he had across the river. Jacob was left alone —with God. There, in the darkness, given over to anxious and whither goest thou? and whose are these before thee? 19. then thou shalt say, They be thy servant Jacob's; it is a present sent unto my lord Esau: and, behold, he also is behind us. 20. And he commanded also the second, and the third, and all that followed the droves, saying, On this manner shall ye speak unto Esau, when ye find him; 21. and ye shall say, Moreover, behold, thy servant Jacob is behind us. For he said, I will appease him with the present that goeth before me, and afterward I will see his face; peradventure he will accept me. 22. So the present passed over before him: and he himself lodged that night in the company.

23. And he rose up that night, and took his two wives, and his two handmaids, and his eleven children, and passed over the ford of Jabbok. 24. And he took them, and sent them over the stream, and sent over that he had. 25. And Jacob was left alone; and there wrestled a man with him until the breaking of the day. 26. And when he fears, God's Messenger was wrestling with him who had so often wrestled with men and had won by sheer energy, persistency and superior wit. In the words of the Prophet chosen as the Haftorah for this Sedrah. "He (Jacob) had power over the angel, and prevailed: he (Jacob) wept, and made supplication unto him." That supplication for mercy, forgiveness and Divine protection is heard. Jacob the Supplanter, becomes Israel, Prince of God. "This mysterious encounter of the Patriarch has become the universal human allegory of the struggles and wrestlings on the eve of some dreadful crisis, in the solitude and darkness of some overhanging trial" (Stanley).

23. Jabbok. A tributary of the Jordan, half-way between the Dead Sea and the Sea of Galilee.

26. touched the hollow of his thigh. This is usually interpreted as a final effort of the assailant to overcome Jacob.

27. The opponent's anxiety to escape before "the day breaketh" suggested to the Patriarch's mind that he was a supernatural Being. Jacob, therefore, demanded a blessing as the price of release.

28. what is thy name? A rhetorical question, not seeking information. As explained on xvii, 5, a name in Scripture is more than a label; it possesses significance.

no more Jacob. That is, "the Supplanter," prevailing over opponents by deceit.

29. Israel. That is, "he that prevaileth with God." The name is clearly a title of victory; probably "a champion of God." The children of the Patriarch are Israelites, Champions of God, Contenders for the Divine, conquering by strength from Above.

30. As in Judg. xiii, 17f, the angel refuses to disclose his name, because it was something mysterious.

saw that he prevailed not against him, he touched the hollow of his thigh; and the hollow of Jacob's thigh was strained, as he wrestled with him.
27. And he said, Let me go, for the day breaketh.
And he said, I will not let thee go, except thou bless me. 28. And he said unto him, What is thy name? And he said, Jacob. 29. And he said, Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel:
for thou hast striven with God and with men, and hast prevailed. 30. And Jacob asked him, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, thy name. And he said, Wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? And he blessed him there.* iii 31. And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel: for,
said he, I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved. 32. And the sun rose upon him as he passed over Penuel, and he halted upon his thigh.
33. Therefore the children of Israel eat not the sinew of the hip which is upon the hollow of the thigh, unto this day: because he touched the hollow of Jacob's thigh in the sinew of the hip.

31. I have seen God face to face. The Targum translates, "I have seen angels of God face to face."

my life is preserved. Jacob had seen an angel, a Divine Being, and yet lives; cf. Exod. XXXIII, 20.

32. halted. The struggle left its mark, but Jacob issued from the contest victor, redeemed and transformed by the contest. So it has ever been with the People called by his name.

33. sinew of the hip. "Thigh-vein" (AJ). The sciatic nerve. This, together with other arteries and tendons, must be removed from the slaughtered animal, before that portion of the animal can be ritually prepared for Jewish consumption. This precept is a constant reminder of the Divine Providence to Israel as exemplified in the experience of the Patriarch.

CHAPTER XXXIII. THE MEETING OF JACOB AND ESAU

1. came. Or, "was coming."

2. hindermost. Placing those he loved best in as secure a position as possible.

3. passed over before them. To conciliate his brother if possible, or to bear the brunt of the attack, and thus help his wives and children to escape.

seven times. In ancient inscriptions, the phrase, "at the feet of my lord, seven times and seven times I fall," frequently occurs.

4. kissed him. Esau proved both good-natured and forgiving. He fell on Jacob's neck, kissed Jacob and they wept with the strong emotion of Orientals. Yet, the word for "and kissed him" וישקהו is marked in the Heb. text with dots on every letter. The Rabbis doubted whether the kiss of Esau was genuine or not. Esau's conduct is certainly strange. If his intentions were friendly from the first, why was he accompanied by so considerable

CHAPTER XXXIII

33 1. And Jacob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, Esau came, and with him four hundred men. And he divided the children unto Leah,
and unto Rachel, and unto the two handmaids.
2. And he put the handmaids and their children foremost, and Leah and her children after, and Rachel and Joseph hindermost. 3. And he himself passed over before them, and bowed himself to the ground seven times, until he came near to his brother. 4. And Esau ran to meet him, and embraced him, and fell on his neck, and kissed him : and they wept. 5. And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children ; and said,
Who are these with thee ? And he said, The children which God hath graciously given thy servant.* iv 6. Then the handmaids came near, they and their children, and they bowed themselves.
7. And Leah also and her children came near, and bowed themselves : and after came Joseph near and Rachel, and they bowed themselves. 8. And he said, What meanest thou by all this company a force as four hundred armed men ? And if he had started out with a resolve to injure his brother, how account for the warm greeting immediately on coming face to face with him ? This was in answer to Jacob's prayer, the Rabbis say. God had turned Esau's hate to love. Be that as it may, we have here another instance of the splendid impartiality of Scripture. The ancestor of Israel's hereditary enemy, the Edomites, is presented as chivalrous and dignified, full of magnanimity and generosity.

8. company. i.e. droves sent ahead as a gift to Esau. See XXXII, 17.

9. I have enough. lit. "I have much." Esau's reluctance to accept the gift was probably only another illustration of Oriental courtesy; see Chap. XXIII.

10. seen thy face. The phrase, "to see the face," expresses the idea of being favourably received. Jacob accordingly meant, "I have been graciously pardoned by you, as I would have received forgiveness from God, had I appeared before Him in the humble spirit and with the tokens of contrition wherewith I appoach you. Regard, then, my gift as a minchah, an offering."

11. my gift. lit. "my blessing," the gift being the outward manifestation of the goodwill in the giver's heart.

I have all. Esau has "much"; therefore, he is quite willing to have "more." Jacob has "all" now that the danger of being slain by a brother, or of slaying a brother, is over; see on XXXII, 8.

12. I will go before thee. Esau offers him his armed men.

13. Jacob, knowing the unstable character of Esau, is anxious that they should part company as quickly as possible.

tender. i.e. unequal to the fatigues of travel.

which I met? And he said, To find grace in the sight of my lord. 9. And Esau said, I have enough; my brother, let that thou hast be thine. 10. And Jacob said, Nay, I pray thee, if now I have found grace in thy sight, then receive my present at my hand: forasmuch as I have seen thy face, as one seeth the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me. 11. Take, I pray thee, my gift that is brought to thee; because God hath dealt graciously with me, and because I have all. And he urged him, and he took it. 12. And he said, Let us take our journey, and let us go, and I will go before thee. 13. And he said unto him, My lord knoweth that the children are tender, and that the flocks and herds with me give suck: and if they overdrive them one day, all the flocks will die. 14. Let my lord, I pray thee, pass over before his servant: and I will lead on softly, according to the pace of the cattle that is before me and according to the pace of the children, until I come unto my lord unto Seir. 15. And Esau said, Let me now leave with thee some of the folk that are with me. And he said, What needeth it? let me find grace in the sight of my lord. 16. So Esau returned that day on his way unto Seir. 17. And unto Seir. There is no record that Jacob went to Seir to see his brother. But, add the Rabbis, Jacob will yet visit Esau in the day of the Messiah when the reconciliation between Israel and Edom will be complete.

14. the cattle. lit. "the work"; cf. the use of the word in Gen. II, 2, where it refers to, among other things, the creatures that God had made. The Heb. word for "work" might here also mean "property," as in Exod. XXII, 7, 10.

15. Jacob prudently declines the offer.

of the place is called Succoth.

there an altar, and called it El-elohe-Israel.* v

34 1. And Dinah the daughter of Leah, which she bare unto Jacob, went out to see the daughters of the land. 2. And Shechem the son of Hamor the Hivite, the prince of the land, saw her; and he took her, and lay with her, and humbled her.
3. And his soul clave unto Dinah the daughter of Jacob, and he loved the damsel, and spake kindly

Chapter XXXIV. Dinah

This chapter is an exception to the series of peaceful scenes from Patriarchal life and character—a tale of dishonour, wild revenge and indiscriminate slaughter.

1. to see. "and be seen," is added in the Samaritan text. The Heb. idiom "to see, to look upon," means "to make friendship with." It was wrong of Jacob to suffer his daughter alone and unprotected to visit the daughters of the land (Adam Clarke).

2. humbled. i.e. dishonoured; the Heb. implies by force.

3. kindly. lit. "spoke to the heart," of the damsel; cf. Isaiah XL, 2. He tried to console her by his words of love, and his declared wish to make her his wife.

4. Get me this damsel. It was the parent's duty to secure a wife for the son; cf. XXI, 21.

7. folly. "A vile deed" (AJ). The Heb. word translated by "folly" means, senseless wickedness, total insensibility to moral distinctions.

in Israel. Since the word means "the people of Israel," it is strictly an anachronism because the nation was not yet in existence. The latter part of this sentence must therefore be regarded not as spoken by Jacob's sons, but as the reflection of Scripture on the incident, wherein it points out that in the homes of the Patriarchs high conceptions of morality were entertained, and the defilement of a daughter was looked upon as an outrage against family honour and morality that demanded stern retribution.

10. The cordiality of Hamor's invitation is to be contrasted with what he told his townsmen in v. 23. To induce them unto the damsel.

4. And Shechem spake unto his father Hamor, saying, Get me this damsel to wife.
5. Now Jacob heard that he had defiled Dinah his daughter; and his sons were with his cattle in the field: and Jacob held his peace until they came.
6. And Hamor the father of Shechem went out unto Jacob to commune with him.
7. And the sons of Jacob came in from the field when they heard it: and the men were grieved, and they were very wroth, because he had wrought folly in Israel in lying with Jacob's daughter; which thing ought not to be done.
8. And Hamor communed with them, saying, The soul of my son Shechem longeth for your daughter: I pray you give her unto him to wife.
9. And make ye marriages with us; give your daughters unto us, and take our daughters unto you.
10. And ye shall dwell with us: and the land shall be before you; dwell and trade ye therein, and get you possessions therein.
11. And Shechem said unto her father and unto her brethren, Let me find grace in your eyes, and what ye shall say unto me I will give.
12. Ask me never so much dowry and gift and I will give according as ye shall say unto me: but give me the damsel to wife.
13. And the sons of Jacob answered Shechem and Hamor his father to adopt his suggestion, he promises that it would be profitable to them, and they would gradually absorb the rich possessions of Jacob's household.

12. dowry. The purchase price, mohar, given to the father and brothers of the bride; see on XXIV 53, XXIX, 18.

13. with guile. Knowing that they were outnumbered by the citizens of Shechem, Jacob's sons resort to devious methods to carry out their determination to avenge their sister's dishonour. Their proposal would, if adopted, render the male population weak and helpless for a time; and this would give them the opportunity of making a successful attack. But why should all the men of the city suffer for the misdeed of one of their number? The sons of Jacob certainly acted in a treacherous and godless manner. Jacob did not forgive them to his dying day; see XLIX, 7.

14. reproach. Cf. Josh. v, 9.

with guile, and spake, because he had defiled Dinah their sister, and said unto them, 14. We cannot do this thing, to give our sister to one that is uncircumcised; for that were a reproach unto us: 15. only on this condition will we consent unto you: if ye will be as we be, that every male of you be circumcised; 16. then will we give our daughters unto you, and we will take your daughters to us, and we will dwell with you, and we will become one people. 17. But if ye will not hearken unto us, to be circumcised; then will we take our daughter, and we will be gone. 18. And their words pleased Hamor, and Shechem Hamor's son. 19. And the young man deferred not to do the thing, because he had delight in Jacob's daughter: and he was honoured above all the house of his father. 20. And Hamor and Shechem his son came unto the gate of their city, and communed with the men of their city, saying, 21. These men are peaceable with us; therefore let them dwell in the land, and trade therein; for, behold, the land is large enough for them; let us take their daughters to us for wives, and let us give them our daughters. 22. Only on this condition will the men consent unto us to dwell with us, to become one people, if every male among us be circumcised, as they are circumcised. 23. Shall not their cattle and their substance and all their beasts be ours? only let us consent unto them, and they will dwell with us. 24. And unto

23. be ours. This argument proves Hamor's disingenuousness.

24. all that went out of the gate. Cf. on XXIII, 10. Probably the able-bodied men, to the exclusion of the old men and boys who would not be affected by the proposal of inter-marriage.

25. Dinah's brethren. These words are added to emphasise that Simeon, Levi and Dinah were children of the same mother, and therefore they felt the more acutely the insult and the desire for revenge.

30. Jacob has been criticised for merely rebuking his sons because their action might cause him personal danger, and not pointing out the heinous crime they had done in taking advantage of the helplessness of men with whom they had made a pact of friendship. Scripture, however, often lets facts speak for themselves, and does not always append the moral or the warning to a tale. Moreover, this chapter is supplemented by Jacob's Blessing in XLIX, 5f. In reference to Simeon and Levi, the dying Patriarch there exclaims: "Simeon and Levi are brethren; weapons of violence are their swords. Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce, and their wrath, for it was cruel."

Hamor and unto Shechem his son hearkened all that went out of the gate of his city; and every male was circumcised, all that went out of the gate of his city.
25. And it came to pass on the third day, when they were sore, that two of the sons of Jacob, Simeon and Levi, Dinah's brethen, took each man his sword, and came upon the city unawares, and slew all the males.
26. And they slew Hamor and Shechem his son with the edge of the sword, and took Dinah out of Shechem's house, and went forth.
27. The sons of Jacob came upon the slain, and spoiled the city, because they had defiled their sister.
28. They took their flocks and their herds and their asses, and that which was in the city, and that which was in the field;
29. and all their wealth, and all their little ones and their wives, took they captive and spoiled, even all that was in the house.
30. And Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, Ye have troubled me, to make me to stink among the inhabitants of the land, among the Canaanites and the Perizzites: and, I being few in number, they will gather themselves together against me and smite me; and I shall be destroyed, I and my house.
31. And they said, Should he deal with our sister as with an harlot?

31. Jacob's sons reply that the dishonour of their sister had to be avenged, and there was only one course of action to follow. High-spirited and martial men have among all nations and throughout history often yielded to blind cruelty when dealing with an outrage of this nature.

CHAPTER XXXV

35 1. And God said unto Jacob, Arise, go up to Beth-el, and dwell there: and make there an altar unto God, who appeared unto thee when thou fleddest from the face of Esau thy brother. 2. Then Jacob said unto his household, and to all that were with him, Put away the strange gods that are among you, and purify yourselves, and change your garments: 3. and let us arise, and go up to Beth-el; and I will make there an altar unto God, who answered me in the day of my distress, and was with me in the way which I went. 4. And they gave unto Jacob all the strange gods which were in their hand, and the rings which were in their ears; and Jacob hid them under the terebinth which was by Shechem. 5. And they journeyed: and a great terror was upon the cities that were round about them, and they did not pursue after the sons of Jacob. 6. So Jacob came to Luz, which is in the land of Canaan (the same is Beth-el), he and all the people that were with him. 7. And he built there an altar, and called the place El-beth-el: because there God was revealed unto him, when he fled from

18. Ben-oni. i.e. "the son of my sorrow."

Benjamin. i.e. "the son of the right hand." The right hand was regarded as the symbol of strength and the position of honour. Jacob disapproved of the name of ill-omen given to Benjamin by his dying mother.

19. Rachel died. Nothing is said of Jacob's grief. Another instance of the marvellous reserve of the Scriptural narrative. His grief for her, on whose behalf he rendered patient service for fourteen years, is indicated by a pathetic reference in XLVIII, 7.

20. pillar. The Heb. word מצבה is that which was in later use for "tombstone." Rachel's Tomb is one of the Jewish "Holy Places" in Palestine.

21. tower of Eder. The site has not been identified.

22. Reuben. The Talmud attempts to explain the verse in such a manner as to remove the gravity of Reuben's offence. But the memory of this repulsive incident lingered in the Patriarch's mind; it influenced the "blessing" which on his death-bed he imparted to his eldest son (XLIX, 4).

20. And Jacob set up a pillar upon her grave: the same is the Pillar of Rachel's grave unto this day.
21. And Israel journeyed, and spread his tent beyond the tower of Eder.
22. And it came to pass, while Israel dwelt in that land, that Reuben went and lay with Bilhah his father's concubine: and Israel heard of it.

Now the sons of Jacob were twelve:
23. the sons of Leah; Reuben, Jacob's firstborn, and Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Zebulun:
24. the sons of Rachel; Joseph and Benjamin:
25. and the sons of Bilhah, Rachel's handmaid; Dan and Naphtali:
26. and the sons of Zilpah, Leah's handmaid; Gad and Asher: these are the sons of Jacob, which were born to him in Paddan-aram.
27. And Jacob came unto Isaac his father to Mamre, to Kiriath-arba (the same is Hebron), where Abraham and Israel heard of it. "Of it," is not represented in the Hebrew. The ancient editors of the Hebrew text, the Massoretes, indicated, "A pause in the middle of a verse." This means that the subject is abruptly dropped, it being too distasteful to continue so revolting a theme. The narrative proceeds at once to give a list of Jacob's sons.

26. born to him in Paddan-aram. A generalisation, disregarding the one exception, Benjamin, who was born in Canaan.

27. Mamre. See on XIII, 18.

Kiriath-arba. See on XXIII, 2. Since Rebekah is not mentioned here, we may infer that she died before Jacob's return.

Esau and Jacob. Similarly Isaac and Ishmael had jointly performed the last rites for Abraham (xxv, 8) Isaac is a less active character than either Abraham or Jacob. "Abraham was an epoch-maker; his life, therefore, was an eventful one. Jacob closes the Patriarchal period, and his life was both rough and eventful. Not so Isaac. He inherits the true belief in God; his is merely the task of loyally transmitting it. No wonder that we hear little of him, and that he repeats some of his father's experiences" (Hoffmann). "Isaac, a patient, meditative man, strong in affection and love, typical of the domestic virtues for which his descendants have throughout the ages been remarkable. He stands as a type of the passive virtues, which have a strength of their own." (The Study Bible).

31. This verse raises an obvious difficulty. Ibn Ezra understands the "king" to refer to Moses, the ruler of the Children of Israel. A more satisfactory explanation of the verse is the following. In the last chapter (xxxv, 11) there had been an emphatic promise from God Almighty to Jacob that "kings shall come out of thy loins." The Israelites, no doubt, cherished a constant hope of such a kingdom and such a kingly race. Moses himself (Deut. xxviii, 36) prophesied concerning the king whom the Israelites would set over them; and hence it was not un-should go out of its way to reassure the Israelites that their history was not yet complete. The words in the Hebrew are, "before the reigning of a king to the sons of Israel"; and might be rendered "whilst as yet the Children of Israel have no king"; there being nothing in the words expressive of past tense, or indicating that, before they were written, a king had reigned in Israel.

(CHAPTERS XXXVII–XL)

(c) JOSEPH AND HIS BRETHREN

CHAPTER XXXVII. JOSEPH'S DREAMS

1. After a brief enumeration of Esau's descendants, without giving their history, Scripture resumes the account of the fortunes of Jacob and his sons.

2. the generations. Joseph alone is mentioned because he is the centre of the narrative which fills the remainder of Genesis, and forms its notable climax.

The stories of Genesis, and especially the story of Joseph, have at all times called forth the admiration of mankind. Dealing with the profoundest thoughts in terms of everyday life, a child can grasp the outline of the story; the profoundest thinkers are continually finding in it fresh depths of unexpected meaning (Ryle). Like summer and the starry skies, like joy and childhood, these stories touch and enthral the human soul with their sublime simplicity, high seriousness and marvellous beauty. And they are absolutely irreplaceable in the moral and religious training of children. The fact that, after having been repeated for three thousand years and longer, these stories still possess an eternal freshness to children of all races and climes, proves that there is in them something of imperishable worth. There is no other literature in the world which offers that something. This is recognised even in educational circles that are far removed not only from the Traditional attitude towards the Bible, but even from the religious outlook. The uniqueness of these stories consists in the fact that there is in them a

IX. VAYYESHEV

CHAPTER XXXVII

37 1. And Jacob dwelt in the land of his father's sojournings, in the land of Canaan. 2. These are the generations of Jacob. Joseph, being seventeen years old, was feeding the flock with his brethren; and he was a lad with the sons of Bilhah, and with the sons of Zilpah, his father's wives; and Joseph brought the evil report of them unto their father. 3. Now Israel loved sense of an overruling Divine Providence realising its purpose through the complex interaction of human motives. They are saturated with the moral spirit. Duty, guilt and its punishment, the conflict of conscience with inclination, the triumph of moral and spiritual forces amidst the vicissitudes of human affairs—are the leading themes. And what is pre-eminently true of Genesis, applies to the whole of Bible history. Not by means of abstract formulae is there the message of God and duty brought to the soul of man, but by means of lives of human beings who feel and fail, who stumble and sin as we do; yet who in their darkest groping, remain conscious of the one true way—and rise again. Witness the conduct of the brothers of Joseph when they had fully grasped the enormity of their crime. "By the study of what other book," asked the greatest agnostic of the nineteenth century, "could children be so much humanised and made to feel that each figure in the vast procession of history fills, like themselves, but a momentary space in the interval between the Eternities; and earns the blessings or the curses of all time according to its effort to do good and hate evil?"

feeding. Or, "supervising." The picture of Joseph doing the same work as his brothers is out of accord with what is told in the next verse. Ehrlich therefore translates: "Joseph, being seventeen years old, used to supervise—although only a lad—his brethren, viz., the sons of Bilhah and the sons of Zilpah (when they were) with the sheep." Joseph would thus be placed in charge of only the sons of the handmaids.

evil report of them. Probably, their inattention to duty.

coat of many colours. This translation is based on the Septuagint, Targum Jonathan and Kimchi. People have often wondered why a trifle like this gaudy garment should have provoked the murderous hatred of all the brethren. We now know from the painted Tombs of the Bene Hassein in Egypt that, in the Patriarchal age, Semitic chiefs wore coats of many colours as insignia of rulership. Joseph had got himself disliked by his brothers for reporting on them; and Jacob, in giving him a coat of many colours, marked him for the chieftainship of the tribes at his father's death. Add to this the lad's vanity in telling his dreams, and the rage of the brethren becomes intelligible. This sign of rulership and royalty was still in use in the household of King David, as is seen from II Sam. XIII, 18, though the chronicler must explain this strange fashion in dress. The fact that in the Joseph story no such explanatory gloss is

Joseph more than all his children, because he was the son of his old age: and he made him a coat of many colours. 4. And his brethren saw that their father loved him more than all his brethren;
and they hated him, and could not speak peaceably unto him. 5. And Joseph dreamed a dream, and he told it to his brethren: and they hated him yet the more. 6. And he said unto them, Hear, I pray you, this dream which I have dreamed: 7. for, behold, we were binding sheaves in the field, and, lo, my sheaf arose, and also stood upright; and, behold, your sheaves came round about, and made obeisance to my sheaf.
8. And his brethren said unto him, Shalt thou indeed reign over us? or shalt thou indeed have dominion over us? And they hated him yet the more for his dreams, and for his words. 9. And he dreamed yet another dream, and told it to his brethren, and said, Behold, I have dreamed yet a dream; and, behold, the sun and the moon and eleven stars made obeisance to me. 10. And he told it to his father, and to his brethren; and his father rebuked him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? Shall I and thy mother and thy brethren indeed come to given is proof of the antiquity of the narrative. When it was first written its implications were perfectly intelligible (Kyle).

10. to his father. The first dream had no reference to his father. In the second, Jacob was included; and in his boyish enthusiasm Joseph narrates it to him also.

11. envied. The repetition of the dream was a sign to them that it was more than a dream. They envied him his assured greatness. And now that envy was added to hatred, they were in a mental state to do him violence. One of the hardest things to learn is to recognise without envy the superiority of a younger brother.

kept the saying in mind. He noted with satisfaction that his designation of Joseph as the future ruler of the family seemed to have the Divine approval.

12. in Shechem. Meaning in the region of Shechem, which was a fertile plain. It would appear hazardous for Jacob's sons to venture thither after what is narrated in Chap. XXXIV. But we are expressly told in XXXV, 5, that God inspired fear in the peoples, which caused Jacob to be unmolested.

14. Hebron. The residence of Jacob, XXXV, 27. The city lies low down on the sloping sides of a narrow valley of its mountainous setting.

12. And his brethren went to feed their father's flock in Shechem. 13. And Israel said unto Joseph,
Do not thy brethren feed the flock in Shechem?
come, and I will send thee unto them. And he said to him, Here am I. 14. And he said to him, Go now, see whether it be well with thy brethren, and well with the flock; and bring me word again.
So he sent him out of the vale of Hebron, and he came to Shechem. 15. And a certain man found him, and, behold, he was wandering in the field: and the man asked him, saying, What seekest thou? 16. And he said, I seek my brethren: tell me, I pray thee, where they are feeding the flock. 17. And the man said, They are departed hence: for I heard them say, Let us go to Dothan. And Joseph went after his brethren, and found them in Dothan. 18. And they saw him afar off, and before he came near unto them, they conspired against him to slay him.
19. And they said one to another, Behold, this dreamer cometh. 20. Come now therefore, and let us slay him, and cast him into one of the pits

17. Dothan. The name modern Tel-Dothan. It has a rich pasturage.

19. dreamer. lit. "master of dreams"; this is only the Heb. idiom for "dreamer."

The brothers speak of him with a bitter derision which bodes ill for him.

20. pits. Or, "cisterns," where water was stored; these are still in common use in the East. The opening is narrow, and we shall see. The Midrash regards these words as the comment of God upon the brothers' declaration, "let us slay him." The Divine reply is to the effect: We shall see whose counsel will stand, Mine or theirs. The Midrash furthermore states that it was Simeon who first made the fratricidal proposal. This explains Joseph's procedure later in XLII, 24.

21. shed no blood. Reuben's first appeal of "No murder" fell on deaf ears (see XLII, 22); he then hopes to outwit them by a stratagem. He appeals to them that at least they need not shed any blood, hoping later to rescue Joseph and bring him back to Jacob, against whom he had grievously so grievously sinned. (Nachmanides, Abarbanel).

23. stript. Tore off with violence. What Joseph's words were in connection with this unnatural conduct of his brethren, we only indirectly know from XLII, 21; just as we are left to gather Jacob's feelings at the death of Rachel from the pathetic reference in XLVIII, 7. The reserve of the Scripture narrative in this chapter, as in XXII, represents the acme of literary art (Steinthal).

24. no water in it. But it did contain serpents and scorpions (Rashi).

and we will say, An evil beast hath devoured him: and we shall see what will become of his dreams. 21. And Reuben heard it, and delivered him out of their hand; and said, Let us not take his life. 22. And Reuben said unto them, Shed no blood; cast him into this pit that is in the wilderness, but lay no hand upon him: that he might deliver him out of their hand, to restore him to his father.* iii 23. And it came to pass, when Joseph was come unto his brethren, that they stript Joseph of his coat, the coat of many colours that was on him; 24. and they took him, and cast him into the pit: and the pit was empty, there was no water in it. 25. And they sat down to eat bread: and they lifted up their eyes and looked, and, behold, a travelling company of Ishmaelites came from Gilead, with their camels bearing spicery and balm and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt. 26. And Judah said unto his brethren, What profit is it if we slay our brother and conceal his blood? 27. Come, and let us sell him to the Ishmaelites, and let travelling company. Such a caravan would in the clear air of Palestine be seen many miles away. It might take two or three hours before it came up to the brothers. Dothan lay on the trade-route from Gilead, the country east of the Jordan, across the Valley of Jezreel, along the Philistine coast to Egypt.

27. hearkened unto him. The horror of their contemplated murder by starvation dawns upon them; they agree to a less violent scheme. Reuben keeps his counsel.

28. Midianites. In the meantime, while the brethren were at the meal, some Midianite merchants, casually passing by and hearing human cries from the pit near the roadside, carry off Joseph and sell him to the caravan going to Egypt. The brothers did not thus actually sell Joseph. He was "stolen away," as he himself says in XL, 15 (Rashbam, Luzzatto).

29. Reuben who, it seems, did not participate in the meal, v. 25, had intended to remove Joseph from the pit and bring him back to his father. He finds the pit empty and no trace of Joseph. Some wild beast, he thinks, has carried him off.

30. whither shall I go? As the first-born, the father would hold him morally responsible. "Whither shall I flee from my father's woe" (Rashi).

31. they took. The brothers, however, were not displeased to be rid of Joseph.

28. And there passed by Midianites, merchantmen;
and they drew and lifted up Joseph out of the pieces of silver. And they brought Joseph into Egypt. 29. And Reuben returned unto the pit;

and, behold, Joseph was not in the pit; and he rent his clothes. 30. And he returned unto his brethren, and said, The child is not; and I, whither shall I go? 31. And they took Joseph's coat, and killed a he-goat, and dipped the coat sackcloth upon his loins, and mourned for his son many days. 35. And all his sons and all his daughters rose up to comfort him; but he refused

Chapter XXXVIII. Judah and Tamar

In the history of Jacob's family the two central persons are Judah and Joseph. The former became the leader of his brethren and the ancestor of David; the latter, from his noble character and personal influence in the future destinies of Jacob's children, is regarded as next in importance. Before recounting Joseph's fortunes in Egypt, Scripture records the following incident in the life of Judah, so as to draw a contrast between his conduct and that of Joseph in the hour of temptation.

to be comforted; and he said, For I will go down to the grave to my son mourning. And his father wept for him. 36. And the Midianites sold him into Egypt unto Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh's, the captain of the guard.* iv

CHAPTER XXXVIII

38 1. And it came to pass at that time, that Judah went down from his brethren, and turned in to a certain Adullamite, whose name was Hirah. 2. And Judah saw there a daughter of a certain Canaanite whose name was Shua; and he took her, and went in unto her. 3. And she conceived, and bare a son; and he called his name Er. 4. And she conceived again, and bare a son; and she called his name Onan. 5. And she yet again bare a son, and called his name Shelah: and he was at Chezib, when she bare him. 6. And Judah took a wife for Er his firstborn, and her name was Tamar. 7. And Er, Judah's firstborn, went down. From the rocky hills around Hebron to Adullam, in the Lowland, 17 miles S.W. of Jerusalem.

2. Canaanite. Following Esau's evil example, (cf. xxvi, 34f), and reaping an abundant harvest of sin and shame. Many commentators, however, take the word in the sense used in Zech. xiv, 21, and translate "merchant" (Targum, Rashi, Mendelssohn).

6. Judah took. Such was the custom for the parent to select the son's bride.

Tamar. lit. "a date palm." The name occurs later in the family of David.

7. slew him. lit. "caused him to die."

8. perform the duty of a husband's brother. This refers to the custom of the levirate marriage by which a surviving brother-in-law (in Latin, levir) marries the childless widow, see Deut. xxv, 5 and cf. Ruth iv, 5f. The eldest son of such marriage inherited the name and property of the deceased.

9. would not be his. i.e. would not bear his name.

11. daughter-in-law. Tamar. The childless widow went back to her father's house. Judah believed that the deaths of Er and Onan were due to Tamar. He, therefore, fears to have Shelah perform the levirate duty.

12. Shuah's daughter. Her own name is not known. Some time after the death, Judah found it becoming to attend the Canaanite festivities in connection with the sheep-shearing.

Timnah. A few miles S. of Hebron.

14. garments of her widowhood. To prevent detection by Judah. She resorts to a disguise and stratagem that must have appeared quite honourable in her Canaanite eyes. She assumes the veil of a votary of Astarte. Her intention was to force Judah himself perform the levirate duty.

was wicked in the sight of the Lord; and the Lord slew him. 8. And Judah said unto Onan, Go in unto thy brother's wife, and perform the duty of an husband's brother unto her, and raise up seed to thy brother. 9. And Onan knew that the seed should not be his; and it came to pass, when he went in unto his brother's wife, that he spilled it on the ground, lest he should give seed to his brother. 10. And the thing which he did was evil in the sight of the Lord: and he slew him also. 11. Then said Judah to Tamar his daughter in law, Remain a widow in thy father's house, till Shelah my son be grown up: for he said, Lest he also die, like his brethren. And Tamar went and dwelt in her father's house. 12. And in process of time Shua's daughter, the wife of Judah, died; and Judah was comforted, and went up unto his sheepshearers to Timnah, he and his friend Hirah the Adullamite. 13. And it was told Tamar, saying, Behold, thy father in law goeth up to Timnah to shear his sheep. 14. And she put off from her the garments of her widowhood, and covered herself with her veil, and wrapped herself, and sat in the gate of Enaim, which is by the way to Timnah; for she saw that Shelah was grown up, and she was not given unto him to wife. 15. When Judah saw her, he thought her to be an harlot; for she had

In pre-Mosaic times, it seems, every member of the late husband's family was under that obligation.

15. harlot. In v. 21 she is described as a kedeshah; that is, a woman dedicated to impure heathen worship.

This repulsive custom was common in ancient Phoenicia and Babylonia and survives in many forms of Hindu worship. No kedeshah was permitted in Israel, see Deut. XXIII, 17.

covered her face. 16. And he turned unto her by the way, and said, Go to, I pray thee, let me come in unto thee: for he knew not that she was his daughter in law. And she said, What wilt thou give me, that thou mayest come in unto me? 17. And he said, I will send thee a kid of the goats from the flock. And she said, Wilt thou give me a pledge, till thou send it? 18. And he said, What pledge shall I give thee? And she said, Thy signet and thy cord, and thy staff that is in thine hand. And he gave them to her, and came in unto her, and she conceived by him. 19. And she arose, and went away, and put off her veil from her, and put on the garments of her widowhood. 20. And Judah sent the kid of the goats by the hand of his friend the Adullamite, to receive the pledge from the woman's hand: but he found her not. 21. Then he asked the men of her place, saying, Where is the harlot, that was at Enaim by the way side? And they said, There hath been no harlot here. 22. And he returned to Judah, and said, I have not found her; and also the men of the place said, There hath been no harlot here. 23. And Judah said, Let her take it to her, lest we be put to shame: behold, I sent this kid, and thou hast not found her. 24. And it came to pass about three months after, that it was told Judah, saying, Tamar thy daughter in law hath played the harlot; and moreover, behold, she is with child by whoredom.

CHAPTER XXXIX. POTIPHAR'S WIFE

The story of Joseph is resumed in this chapter. Amid the new and trying circumstances of his new existence, Joseph's innate nobility of character is revealed. He wins the confidence of his master and emerges unscathed from insidious temptation.

And Judah said, Bring her forth, and let her be burnt. 25. When she was brought forth, she sent to her father in law, saying, By the man, whose these are, am I with child: and she said, Discern, I pray thee, whose are these, the signet, and the cords, and the staff. 26. And Judah acknowledged them, and said, She is more righteous than I; forasmuch as I gave her not to Shelah my son. And he knew her again no more. 27. And it came to pass in the time of her travail, that, behold, twins were in her womb. 28. And it came to pass, when she travailed, that one put out a hand: and the midwife took and bound upon his hand a scarlet thread, saying, This came out first. 29. And it came to pass, as he drew back his hand, that, behold, his brother came out: and she said, Wherefore hast thou made a breach for thyself? therefore his name was called Perez. 30. And afterward came out his brother, that had the scarlet thread upon his hand: and his name was called Zerah.* v

CHAPTER XXXIX

39 1. And Joseph was brought down to Egypt; and Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh's, the captain of the guard, an Egyptian, bought him of the hand of the Ishmaelites, which had brought him down thither.

an Egyptian. The story of Joseph took place during the reign of the Hyksos kings, the Bedouin conquerors of Egypt. Exceptionally, "an Egyptian" was entrusted with a high Government post.

2. And the Lord was with Joseph, and he was a prosperous man; and he was in the house of his master the Egyptian. 3. And his master saw that the Lord was with him, and that the Lord made all that he did to prosper in his hand. 4.
And Joseph found grace in his sight, and he ministered unto him: and he made him overseer over his house, and all that he had he put into

that he made him overseer in his house, and over all that he had, that the Lord blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake; and the blessing of the Lord was upon all that he had, in the house and in the field. 6. And he left all that he had in Joseph's hand; and with him he knew not aught that was with him, save the bread which he did master's wife cast her eyes upon Joseph; and knoweth not with me what is in the house, and he hath put all that he hath into my hand; 9. he is not greater in this house than I; neither hath

11. about this time. On a certain day.

12. and fled. Some sins can only be avoided by flight. Ecclesiasticus XXI, 2. "Flee from sin, as from the face of a serpent; for if thou come too near it will bite thee: the teeth thereof are as the teeth of a lion, slaying the souls of men." The Rabbis say, "At the moment of temptation, his father's image appeared to him and gave him strength to resist."

work ; and there was none of the men of the house there within. 12. And she caught him by his garment, saying, Lie with me : and he left his garment in her hand, and fled, and got him out.
13. And it came to pass, when she saw that he had left his garment in her hand, and was fled forth, 14. that she called unto the men of her house, and spake unto them, saying, See, he hath brought in an Hebrew unto us to mock us ; he came in unto me to lie with me, and I cried with a loud voice : 15. and it came to pass, when he heard that I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment by me, and fled, and got him out. 16. And she laid up his garment by her, until his master came home. 17. And she spake unto him according to these words, saying, The Hebrew servant, which thou hast brought unto us, came in unto me to mock me : 18. and it came to pass, as I lifted up my voice and cried,
that he left his garment by me, and fled out.
19. And it came to pass, when his master heard the words of his wife, which she spake unto him, saying, After this manner did thy servant to me ;
that his wrath was kindled. 20. And Joseph's master took him, and put him into the prison,

20. the prison. The Heb. word occurs only here, and seems to be Egyptian. The Midrash explains that Potiphar had doubt some as to the truth of the accusation against Joseph ; otherwise he would have put him to death, instead of putting

Until the time that His word came to pass,
The word of the Lord tested him."

And the keeper of the prison committed to Joseph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison; and whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it. 23. The keeper of the prison looked not to any thing that was under his hand, because the Lord was with him; and that which he did, the Lord made it to prosper.* vii

Joseph interprets the dreams of Pharaoh's two officers. The scene faithfully reflects Egyptian conditions in the age of Joseph.

1. after these things. Recounted in the preceding chapter.

2. the butler . . . the baker. The Egyptian court had a "scribe of the sideboard" and a "superintendent of the bakehouse" (Erman). These officers had to taste the food for the king before the royal meal began. The word for butler may also be rendered, "cup-bearer."

4. And the captain of the guard charged Joseph with them, and he ministered unto them: and they continued a season in ward. 5. And they dreamed a dream both of them, each man his dream, in one night, each man according to the interpretation of his dream, the butler and the

them in the morning, and saw them, and, behold,

its blossoms shot forth; and the clusters thereof brought forth ripe grapes: 11. and Pharaoh's cup was in my hand; and I took the grapes, and pressed them into Pharaoh's cup, and I gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand. 12. And Joseph said unto him, This is the interpretation of it:
the three branches are three days; 13. within yet three days shall Pharaoh lift up thine head,

But have me in thy remembrance when it shall be well with thee, and shew kindness, I pray thee, unto me, and make mention of me unto Pharaoh, and bring me out of this house: 15. for indeed I was stolen away out of the land of the Hebrews: and here also have I done nothing that they should put me into the dungeon. 16. When the chief baker saw that the interpretation was good, he said unto Joseph, I also was in my dream, and, behold, three baskets of white bread were on my head: 17. and in the uppermost basket there was of all manner of bakemeats for Pharaoh; and the birds did eat them out of the basket upon my head. 18. And Joseph answered and said, This is the interpretation thereof: the three baskets are three days; 19. within yet three days shall Pharaoh lift up thy head from off thee, and shall hang thee on a tree; and the birds shall eat thy flesh from off thee.* m 20. And it came to pass the third day, which was Pharaoh's birthday, that he made a feast unto all his servants: and he lifted up the head of the chief butler and the head of the

The chief butler's forgetfulness, in the enjoyment of his own good fortune, is sadly natural. Nothing alas is more common than ingratitude. Man forgets; but God does not forget his own. And when the night is darkest, the dawn is near.

CHAPTER XLI

41 1. And it came to pass at the end of two full years, that Pharaoh dreamed : and, behold, he stood by the river. 2. And, behold, there came up out of the river seven kine, well favoured and fatfleshed ; and they fed in the reed-grass.
3. And, behold, seven other kine came up after them out of the river, ill favoured and leanfleshed ; and stood by the other kine upon the brink of the river. 4. And the ill favoured and leanfleshed kine did eat up the seven well favoured and fat kine. So Pharaoh awoke. 5. And he slept and dreamed a second time : and, behold, seven ears of corn came up upon one stalk, rank and good. 6. And, behold, seven ears, thin and blasted with the east wind, sprung up after

and he sent and called for all the magicians

Pharaoh told them his dream; but there was none that could interpret them unto Pharaoh.
9. Then spake the chief butler unto Pharaoh, saying, I will make mention of my faults this day: 10. Pharaoh was wrath with his servants, and put me in ward in the house of the captain of the guard, me and the chief baker: 11. and we dreamed a dream in one night, I and he; we dreamed each man according to the interpretation of his dream. 12. And there was with us there a young man, an Hebrew, servant to the captain of the guard; and we told him, and he interpreted to us our dreams; to each man according to his dream he did interpret. 13. And it came to pass, as he interpreted to us, so it was;
I was restored unto mine office, and he was hanged.
14. Then Pharaoh sent and called Joseph, and they brought him hastily out of the dungeon:
and he shaved himself, and changed his raiment,
and came in unto Pharaoh.* ii a 15. And Pharaoh

17. And Pharaoh spake unto Joseph, In my river seven kine, fatfleshed and well favoured;

and they fed in the reed-grass: 19. and, behold,

never saw in all the land of Egypt for badness:
20. and the lean and ill favoured kine did eat up the first seven fat kine: 21. and when they had eaten them up, it could not be known that they

33–36. Joseph explains how God gives Pharaoh the answer of peace (v. 16). The interpretation of the dream is supplemented by the practical advice as to how the coming crisis should be met. Joseph the dreamer and saint proves himself in an eminent degree a man of practical affairs.

spake unto Pharaoh: what God is about to do
he hath shewed unto Pharaoh. 29. Behold, there come seven years of great plenty throughout all the land of Egypt: 30. and there shall arise after them seven years of famine; and all the plenty shall be forgotten in the land of Egypt; and the famine shall consume the land; 31. and the plenty shall not be known in the land by reason of that famine which followeth; for it shall be very grievous. 32. And for that the dream was doubled unto Pharaoh twice, it is because the thing is established by God, and God will shortly bring it to pass. 33. Now therefore let Pharaoh look out a man discreet and wise, and set him over the land of Egypt. 34. Let Pharaoh do this,
and let him appoint overseers over the land,
and take up the fifth part of the land of Egypt
in the seven plenteous years. 35. And let them gather all the food of these good years that come, and lay up corn under the hand of Pharaoh
for food in the cities, and let them keep it. 36.
And the food shall be for a store to the land against the seven years of famine, which shall be in the land of Egypt; that the land perish not through the famine. 37. And the thing was good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants. 38. And Pharaoh said unto his servants, Can we find such a one as this, a man in whom the spirit of God is?* iii 39.
And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Forasmuch as God hath shewed thee all this, there is none so a gold chain. The gold collar appertaining to the office of Grand Vizier. This is another instance of the remarkable historical exactness of the Joseph narrative. "No ancient civilisation was more distinct and unique than that of Egypt. Her customs, her language, and her system of writing were shared by no other people; and yet, at every point, the narrative reveals a thorough familiarity with Egyptian life. Peculiar Egyptian customs are also reflected in the stories; as, for example, the giving of the much-prized golden collar, which was bestowed upon a public servant for distinguished achievement" (F. C. Kent).

my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou. 41. And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, See, I have set thee over all the land of Egypt. 42. And Pharaoh took off his signet ring from his hand, and put it upon Joseph's hand, and arrayed him in vestures of fine linen, and put a gold chain about his neck; 43. and he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had; and they cried before him, Bow the knee: and he set him over all the land of Egypt. 44. And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I am Pharaoh, and without thee shall no man lift up his hand or his foot in all the land of Egypt. 45. And Pharaoh called Joseph's name Zaphenath-paneah; and he gave him to wife Asenath the daughter of Poti-phera priest of On. And Joseph went out over the land of Egypt. 46. And Joseph was thirty years old when he stood before Pharaoh king of Egypt. And Joseph went out

45. Zaphenath-paneah. Joseph receives a new name on his state appointment. This is both an Egyptian and a Hebrew custom, e.g. Num. XIII, 16. Egyptologists explain that Zaphenath means "food-man," and paneah, "of the life," i.e. the Chief Steward in the realm in face of Famine (Kyle). The importance of the change of name in the story lies in the fact that it helps to conceal the identity of Joseph when his brethren come to Egypt.

Poti-phera. To be distinguished from Potiphar, the former master of Joseph.

On. Later known as Heliopolis, near Cairo. On was the centre of Sun worship in Egypt. Cleopatra's Needle on the Thames Embankment originally stood in On.

46. thirty years old. He had spent about twelve years in prison.

47. by handfuls. "In heaps" (AJ). The produce was most abundant. Some Jewish commentators render, "for the storehouses."

51. Manasseh. That is, "making to forget."

all my toil and all my father's house. His position had made him forget his toil as a bondman, and the ill-will of his brethren which was the cause of that bondage. Or, the phrase can be viewed as the Heb. idiom for "all the suffering caused to me by my father's house," i.e. my brethren (Wogue).

52. Ephraim. From a Heb. root signifying, "to be fruitful."

54. all lands. All the neighbouring lands.

from the presence of Pharaoh, and went throughout all the land of Egypt. 47. And in the seven plenteous years the earth brought forth by handfuls. 48. And he gathered up all the food of the seven years which were in the land of Egypt, and laid up the food in the cities: the food of the field, which was round about every city, laid he up in the same. 49. And Joseph laid up corn as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering; for it was without number.
50. And unto Joseph were born two sons before the year of famine came, which Asenath the daughter of Poti-phera priest of On bare unto him.
51. And Joseph called the name of the firstborn Manasseh: For, said he, God hath made me forget all my toil, and all my father's house. 52. And the name of the second call he Ephraim: For God hath made me fruitful in the land of my affliction.*iv 53. And the seven years of plenty, that was in the land of Egypt, came to an end. 54. And the seven years of famine began to come, according as Joseph had said: and there was famine in all lands; but in all the land of Egypt there was bread. 55. And when all the land of Egypt was famished, the people cried to Pharaoh for bread:
and Pharaoh said unto all the Egyptians, Go unto Joseph; what he saith to you do. 56. And the famine was over all the face of the earth: and Joseph opened all the storehouses, and sold unto the Egyptians; and the famine was sore in the

56. opened all the storehouses. All the granaries in which there was corn.

CHAPTER XLII. JOSEPH'S BRETHREN IN EGYPT

1. saw. He had probably seen the corn brought by caravans.
why do ye look one upon another? Paralysed by doubt and helplessness (Luzzatto).

2. get you down. Cf. XII, 10.

4. mischief. Harm. Jacob would not expose Benjamin to any risk.

6. he it was that sold. He superintended the sales, and foreign purchasers would be brought to him to be interrogated. His dreams were being fulfilled, see XXXVII, 7–10. The brothers "bowed themselves down before him."

land of Egypt. 57. And all countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn; because the famine was sore in all the earth.

CHAPTER XLII

42 1. Now Jacob saw that there was corn in Egypt, and Jacob said unto his sons, Why do ye look one upon another? 2. And he said, Behold, I have heard that there is corn in Egypt: get you down thither, and buy for us from thence; that we may live, and not die. 3. And Joseph's ten brethren went down to buy corn from Egypt.
4. But Benjamin, Joseph's brother, Jacob sent not with his brethren; for he said, Lest peradventure mischief befall him. 5. And the sons of Israel came to buy among those that came:
for the famine was in the land of Canaan. 6.
And Joseph was the governor over the land;
he it was that sold to all the people of the land:
and Joseph's brethren came, and bowed down
themselves to him with their faces to the earth.
7. And Joseph saw his brethren, and he knew them, but made himself strange unto them, and spake roughly with them; and he said unto them, Whence come ye? And they said, From

7. spake roughly with them. The brother who had been shamefully and pitilessly sold into slavery now had his opportunity for revenge. The greatness of Joseph lies in the fact that for all time he showed men a better way. He tests his brethren, holding his own natural feelings in check until convinced of their filial piety to their father, their love for Benjamin, and their sincere contrition for their crime towards him. Then he forgives them freely, fully and lovingly.

8. but they knew not him. Before them stood the Grand Vizier in dress, name, language and bearing, an Egyptian.

9. and Joseph remembered the dreams. Not in a spirit of pride and hatred, but as the revealed will of the good God whose ways are inscrutable.

ye are spies. The most natural accusation to bring against strangers in Egypt, or anywhere.

the nakedness of the land. The weak spots in the line of defence along the border. The North-East of Egypt was its weak side, and strangers entering from this direction were jealously watched.

11. we are all one man's sons. A sufficient answer to the charge of being spies, for no man would risk the lives of ten sons in so dangerous an undertaking.

12. nay. Joseph repeats his accusation. This throws them off their guard, and they seek to disarm his suspicions by volunteering information about their father and youngest brother, of which Joseph at once takes advantage.

13. one is not. Refers of course to Joseph. They did the land of Canaan to buy food. 8. And Joseph knew his brethren, but they knew not him.

9. And Joseph remembered the dreams which he dreamed of them, and said unto them, Ye are spies; to see the nakedness of the land ye are come. 10. And they said unto him, Nay, my lord, but to buy food are thy servants come.
11. We are all one man's sons; we are true men, thy servants are no spies. 12. And he said unto them, Nay, but to see the nakedness of the land ye are come. 13. And they said, We thy servants are twelve brethren, the sons of one man in the land of Canaan; and, behold, the youngest is this day with our father, and one is not. 14. And Joseph said unto them, That is it that I spake unto you, saying, Ye are spies:
15. hereby ye shall be proved: by the life of Pharaoh ye shall not go forth hence, except your youngest brother come hither. 16. Send one of you, and let him fetch your brother, and ye shall be bound, that your words may be proved,
whether there be truth in you: or else by the life of Pharaoh surely ye are spies. 17. And he put them all together into ward three days.

not say that he was dead, because they did not really know what became of him.

15. ye shall be proved. Their story is improbable. It must be verified. Let them bring Benjamin down to Egypt. In this way, Joseph would test their loyalty to their youngest brother. Did they also hate Benjamin as they had hated him? He delicately refrains from cross-questioning them about the brother who "is not."

by the life of Pharaoh. A form of oath, or strong asseveration. The oath by the life of the king is found in an Egyptian inscription of the 20th pre-Christian century.

18. this do and live. Better, "This do in order that ye may live." The brethren claimed to be upright, honest men. Profession was not enough. Let them bring the youngest brother, "So shall your words be verified and ye shall not die" (v. 20).

for I fear God. And so am unwilling to treat you with unnecessary severity on mere suspicion. I will keep one of you as a hostage, the rest shall convey food for your families. "Fear of God is the universal element in religion which humanizes our dealings with 'foreigners,' even when national interests are involved" (Procksch); cf. xx, 11.

21. we are verily guilty. Joseph had at last awakened remorse in their hearts. They had been blind to the distress of their brother, and deaf to his entreaties. They were guilty, and their misfortune was a just retribution for their cruelty. It is only now, in the mirror of their repentance, that we see reflected the agonising scene when the lad was thrown into the pit many years before. See on xxxvii, 23. With broken and contrite hearts, they now recall their inhuman callousness—all in the hearing of Joseph.

18. And Joseph said unto them the third day, This do, and live; for I fear God;* 19. if ye be true men, let one of your brethren be bound in your prison house; but go ye, carry corn for the famine of your houses: 20. and bring your youngest brother unto me; so shall your words be verified, and ye shall not die. And they did so. 21. And they said one to another, We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the distress of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; therefore is this distress come upon us. 22. And Reuben answered them, saying, Spake I not unto you, saying, Do not sin against the child; and ye would not hear? therefore also, behold, his blood is required. 23. And they knew not that Joseph understood them; for there was an interpreter between them. 24. And he turned himself about from them, and wept; and he returned to them, and spake to them, and took Simeon from among them, and bound him before their eyes. 25. Then Joseph commanded to fill their vessels with corn, and

22. his blood is required. Reuben assumes that Joseph's death, whatever form it took, was due to them. They were morally guilty of his life. His blood is "required," i.e. is now being avenged (see IX, 5).

23. interpreter. Joseph throughout spoke to them as the Viceroy, in Egyptian and through an interpreter.

24. and wept. He is touched to tears by their penitence and contrition.

Simeon. As the next in age to Reuben, who as the eldest was to report to Jacob. According to Rabbinic tradition, it was Simeon who had counselled that Joseph be slain.

27. lodging place. Wayside shelter.

28. they turned trembling. They wonder what such an unusual occurrence may portend. Will they be accused of theft ?

29-34. They recount their experience to their father.

30. the lord of. The Heb. often employs a plural form to express power or greatness.

33. corn for the famine. The words, " corn for " must be supplied from the context.

34. traffic in the land. Joseph did not say this, but " and ye shall not die " (v. 20). This could only be by allowing the brethren to come to Egypt and buy corn.

35. they were afraid. i.e. Jacob and his sons. They looked upon it as a deliberate act on the part of the Egyptian lord to bring a charge of theft against them.

to restore every man's money into his sack, and to give them provision for the way: and thus was it done unto them. 26. And they laded their asses with their corn, and departed thence.
27. And as one of them opened his sack to give his ass provender in the lodging place, he espied his money; and, behold, it was in the mouth of his sack. 28. And he said unto his brethren, My money is restored; and, lo, it is even in my sack:
and their heart failed them, and they turned trembling one to another, saying, What is this that God hath done unto us? 29. And they came unto Jacob their father unto the land of Canaan, and told him all that had befallen them;
saying, 30. The man, the lord of the land, spake country. 31. And we said unto him, We are and go your way: 34. and bring your youngest deliver you your brother, and ye shall traffick emptied their sacks, that, behold, every man's bundle of money was in his sack: and when they and their father saw their bundles of money,

36. all these things are upon me. The point of the reproach is that it is his children, not their own, that they are endangering : to which Reuben's offer is the rejoinder.

37. slay my two sons. The impetuous nature of Reuben is seen here. Nevertheless, it was a generous spirit that moved Reuben. He mentions two sons, one for Benjamin and one for Joseph—of whose death he feels that he shares the guilt with his brothers.

CHAPTER XLIII. THE SECOND VISIT OF JOSEPH'S BRETHREN TO EGYPT

1–14. Judah prevails upon Jacob to allow Benjamin to accompany the brethren on their journey to Egypt. Judah now takes the lead in the place of Reuben, in whom his father had little confidence.

they were afraid. 36. And Jacob their father said unto them, Me have ye bereaved of my children: Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away: all these things are upon me. 37. And Reuben spake unto his father, saying, Slay my two sons, if I bring him not to thee: deliver him into my hand, and I will bring him to thee again. 38. And he said, My son shall not go down with you; for his brother is dead, and he only is left: if mischief befall him by the way in the which ye go, then shall ye bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

CHAPTER XLIII

43 1. And the famine was sore in the land. 2. And it came to pass, when they had eaten up the corn which they had brought out of Egypt,
their father said unto them, Go again, buy us a little food. 3. And Judah spake unto him, saying,
The man did solemnly protest unto us, saying,
Ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you. 4. If thou wilt send our brother with us, we will go down and buy thee food: 5. but if thou wilt not send him, we will not go down:
for the man said unto us, Ye shall not see my

2. when they had eaten up the corn. Not in its entirety; they must have left sufficient for their father and the household during their absence in Egypt.

3. did solemnly protest. Better, "did earnestly forewarn us"; (AJ); referring to the oath, XLII, 15, 16.

5. we will not go down. Judah's decisive language has the desired effect with Jacob.

And they came near to the steward of Joseph's house, and they spake unto him at the door of the house, 20. and said, Oh my lord, we came indeed down at the first time to buy food: 21. and it came to pass, when we came to the lodging place, that we opened our sacks, and, behold, every man's money was in the mouth of his sack, our money in full weight: and we have

23. I had your money. Doubtless on the instruction of Joseph, the steward reassures them that what they found in their sacks was God's gift.

25. against Joseph came. Here means " so as to be ready when Joseph arrived." This is the old use of " against," in the sense of, " in readiness for the time when."

your money. And he brought Simeon out unto them. 24. And the man brought the men into Joseph's house, and gave them water, and they washed their feet; and he gave their asses pro-vender. 25. And they made ready the present against Joseph came at noon: for they heard that they should eat bread there. 26. And when Joseph came home, they brought him the present which was in their hand into the house, and bowed down themselves to him to the earth. 27. And he asked them of their welfare, and said, Is your father well, the old man of whom ye spake? Is he yet alive?
28. And they said, Thy servant our father is well, he is yet alive. And they bowed the head, and made obeisance. 29. And he lifted up his eyes, and saw Benjamin his brother, his mother's son,
and said, Is this your youngest brother, of whom ye spake unto me? and he said, God be gracious unto thee, my son.* vii 30. And Joseph made haste; for his bowels did yearn upon his brother:
and he sought where to weep; and he entered into his chamber, and wept there. 31. And he his bowels did yearn upon. "His heart yearned toward" (AJ). Seeing his own mother's son, he felt unable to restrain his tears. In Heb. psychology the bowels were the seat of emotion. Hence the phrase, "the bowels of compassion."

31. set on bread. i.e. let the food be served.

32. for him by himself. As an Egyptian noble he would have his food apart from his retinue, and, of course, apart from the Hebrews, who were foreigners in the eyes of the Egyptians. The Hyksos conquerors soon adopted the old Egyptian exclusiveness in intercourse with foreigners.

33. the men marvelled. How could the Egyptian know their ages ? They looked at one another in astonishment.

34. messes. Portions.

were merry. lit. "drank largely." Joseph wishes to divert their attention from his table, whence his goblet was about to be removed. The extra portion given to Benjamin was a special mark of respect.

Chapter XLIV

The chapter sets forth Joseph's device to test still further the sincerity and loyalty of his brethren.

1–17. The Divining Cup

1. as much as they can carry. More than they were entitled to by their purchase. This act of kindness on Joseph's part washed his face, and came out; and he refrained himself, and said, Set on bread. 32. And they set on for him by himself, and for them by themselves, and for the Egyptians, which did eat with them, by themselves: because the Egyptians might not eat bread with the Hebrews;

for that is an abomination unto the Egyptians.
33. And they sat before him, the firstborn according to his birthright, and the youngest according to his youth: and the men marvelled one with another. 34. And messes were taken unto them from before him: but Benjamin's mess was five times so much as any of theirs. And they drank, and were merry with him.

CHAPTER XLIV

44 1. And he commanded the steward of his house, saying, Fill the men's sacks with food, as much as they can carry, and put every man's money in his sack's mouth. 2. And put my cup, the silver cup, in the sack's mouth of the youngest,

was intentional, so as to increase the apparent baseness of their conduct; see v. 4.

put every man's money. This was done to prevent the brethren from suspecting Benjamin of having really stolen the goblet. When they again found their money returned, they could not but believe that the goblet had in the selfsame unaccountable manner come into Benjamin's sack (Abarbanel).

2. the silver cup. Or, "goblet." Divining goblets were much used in Egypt. Pieces of gold or silver were thrown in the water or liquid in the goblet and caused movements, which were supposed to represent coming events.

4. wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good? Joseph's steward assumes that they are aware of the theft of this valuable and wonderful goblet.

5. and whereby he indeed divineth. The cup is a sacred one, by which their host obtains oracles.

8. how then should we steal. Their argument is sound. They had brought back from Canaan the money which they found in their sacks. Would they then think of robbing the Egyptian lord, who had treated them with so much consideration.

9. let him die. Convinced of their absolute innocence, they propose the penalty of death as the punishment to be inflicted on the thief. They add to this, slavery for all the other brothers.

and his corn money. And he did according to the word that Joseph had spoken. 3. As soon as the morning was light, the men were sent away, they and their asses. 4. And when they were gone out of the city, and were not yet far off, Joseph said unto his steward, Up, follow after the men; and when thou dost overtake them, say unto them, Wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good? 5. Is not this it in which my lord drinketh, and whereby he indeed divineth? ye have done evil in so doing. 6. And he overtook them, and he spake unto them these words. 7. And they said unto him, Wherefore speaketh my lord such words as these? God forbid that thy servants should do such a thing. 8. Behold, the money, which we found in our sacks' mouths, we brought again unto thee out of the land of Canaan: how then should we steal out of thy lord's house silver or gold? 9. With whomsoever of thy servants it be found, let him die, and we also will be my lord's bondmen. 10. And he said, Now also let it be according unto your words: he with whom it is found shall be my bondman; and ye shall be blameless. 11. Then they hasted, and took down every man his sack to the ground, and opened every man his sack. 12. And he searched, and

10. The steward asks only for the guilty one to be his bondman. According to Rashi the verse means: "Verily it should be as ye have said (for ye are all accessories, and, therefore, all guilty; but I will be more lenient) he alone with whom it is found shall be my bondman."

11. Then they hasted. This agitated zeal wonderfully depicts their confident innocence (Procksch).

God hath found out the iniquity. The exclamation does not imply admission of that particular sin : it is the wrong done to their father and to Joseph in the olden days which is behind Judah's confession. The work of the moral regeneration of the brothers is complete.

as for you, get you up in peace unto your father.

XI. VAYYIGGASH

(Chapters XLIV, 18–XLVII, 27)

Chapter XLIV

18–34. The pathos and beauty of Judah's plea on behalf of Benjamin have retained their appeal to man's heart throughout the ages. Sir Walter Scott called it "the most complete pattern of genuine natural eloquence extant in any language. When we read this generous speech, we forgive Judah all the past, and cannot refuse to say 'Thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise.'" The spirit of self-sacrifice which Judah's speech reveals, offering to remain as a slave in Benjamin's place, has its parallel in the life-story of Moses, who besought God to blot out his name from the Book of Life, unless his people, Israel, is saved with him (Exod. xxxii, 32).

speak a word. He asks pardon for venturing to continue the conversation after Joseph had decided their case. Just because Joseph is like Pharaoh in authority, it behoves him to listen to the appeal which Judah is about to make.

19. my lord asked. See XLIII, 7. Judah wishes to divert the sympathy of Joseph towards the unhappy position of the old father bereft of his youngest son, whom Judah refers to as "a child of his old age, a little one."

20. his brother is dead. Joseph is now spoken of before his eleven brethren as dead. Dead, but still remembered by father and brothers.

18. Then Judah came near unto him, and said,
Oh my lord, let thy servant, I pray thee, speak
a word in my lord's ears, and let not thine anger burn against thy servant: for thou art even as Pharaoh. 19. My lord asked his servants, saying,
Have ye a father, or a brother? 20. And we said unto my lord, We have a father, an old man, and a child of his old age, a little one; and his brother is dead, and he alone is left of his mother, and his father loveth him. 21. And thou saidst unto thy servants, Bring him down unto me, that I may set mine eyes upon him. 22. And we said unto my lord, The lad cannot leave his father: for if he should leave his father, his father would die.
23. And thou saidst unto thy servants, Except your youngest brother come down with you, ye shall see my face no more. 24. And it came to pass when we came up unto thy servant my father, we told him the words of my lord. 25. And our father said, Go again, buy us a little food. 26.
And we said, We cannot go down: if our youngest brother be with us, then will we go down: for we may not see the man's face, except our youngest brother be with us. 27. And thy servant my father said unto us, Ye know that my wife bare me two sons: 28. and the one went out from me, and I said, Surely he is torn in pieces; and I have not seen him since: 29. and if ye take this one

The wonder of it seems to urge the question from Joseph's lips as the first word in revealing himself to his brethren. The thought of his father is uppermost in his mind. He does not wait for an answer.

And now be not grieved, nor angry with yourselves, that ye sold me hither: for God did send me before you to preserve life. 6. for the good things of all the land of Egypt are yours. Thus Jacob and his family came to Egypt at the express invitation of the king. There was even a promise of good treatment to the immigrants as guests of the State, which one of their family had saved. As free men they were subsequently entitled to return at their pleasure to their old home in Canaan.

the good of all the land of Egypt is yours. 21. And the sons of Israel did so: and Joseph gave them wagons, according to the commandment of Pharaoh, and gave them provision for the way.
22. To all of them he gave each man changes of raiment; but to Benjamin he gave three hundred pieces of silver, and five changes of raiment.
23. And to his father he sent after this manner;
ten asses laden with the good things of Egypt, and ten she-asses laden with corn and bread and victual for his father by the way. 24. So he sent his brethren away, and they departed: and he said unto them, See that ye fall not out by the way. 25. And they went up out of Egypt, and came into the land of Canaan unto Jacob their father. 26. And they told him, saying, Joseph is

We should feel with the Patriarch that we are at the turning-point of his history, which we to-day may well call a turning-point in the history of mankind. It was in Egypt that Israel's greatest religious genius was to arise " (Procksch).

4. I will go down with thee. God's words here imply His promise to protect Jacob in Egypt and to achieve the Divine will concerning him and his offspring (cf. xxviii, 15).

CHAPTER XLVI

46 1. And Israel took his journey with all that he had, and came to Beer-sheba, and offered sacrifices unto the God of his father Isaac. 2. And God spake unto Israel in the visions of the night, and said, Jacob, Jacob. And he said, Here am I. 3. And he said, I am God, the God of thy father: fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will there make of thee a great nation: 4. I will go down with thee into Egypt; and I will also surely bring thee up again: and Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes. 5. And Jacob rose up from Beer-sheba: and the sons of Israel carried Jacob their father, and their little ones, and their wives, in the wagons which Pharaoh had sent to carry him. 6. And they took their cattle, and their goods, which they had gotten in the land of Canaan, and came into Egypt, Jacob, and all his seed with him: 7. his sons, and his sons' sons with him, his daughters, and his sons' daughters, and all his seed brought he with him into Egypt.

28. to shew the way. For Joseph to direct Judah as to the place where Jacob should dwell. The Midrash explains the Heb. phrase literally, "to establish a house of teaching." Such has remained the first care of Jews whenever migrating to a new land—to provide for the religious teaching of their children.

CHAPTER XLVII. v. 1–10. JACOB AND HIS SONS BEFORE PHARAOH

This is the crucial test of Joseph's character. For the Viceroy of Egypt to acknowledge as his own brothers the rude Canaanite shepherds (and "every shepherd was an abomination to the Egyptians"), who had besides given him every reason for repudiating them, called for the highest loyalty and devotion. "Many men resist the temptations of youth, and attain to positions of eminence, and then fail to pay the debt which they owe to their own humble kinsmen who have helped them to success. With Joseph the debt, if any, was small. There was also no absolute necessity of revealing his identity, much less of inviting his

47 1. Then Joseph went in and told Pharaoh, and said, My father and my brethren, and their flocks; and their herds, and all that they have, are come out of the land of Canaan; and, behold, they are in the land of Goshen. 2. And from among his brethren he took five men, and presented them unto Pharaoh. 3. And Pharaoh said unto his brethren, What is your occupation? And they said unto Pharaoh, Thy servants are shepherds, both we, and our fathers. 4. And they said unto Pharaoh, To sojourn in the land are we come; for there is no pasture for thy servants' flocks; for the famine is sore in the land of Canaan: now, therefore, we pray thee, let thy servants dwell in the land of Goshen. 5. And Pharaoh spake unto Joseph, saying, Thy father and thy brethren are come unto thee: 6. the land of Egypt is before thee; in the best of the land

5. the best of the land. Is to be placed at their disposal. This was Pharaoh's gratitude to Joseph for his eminent services to Egypt.

22. only the land of the priests. The priests had a fixed portion from the royal granaries ; so there was no occasion for them to sell their lands.

be not desolate. 20. So Joseph bought all the land of Egypt for Pharaoh; for the Egyptians sold every man his field, because the famine was sore upon them: and the land became Pharaoh's. 21. And as for the people, he removed them to the cities from one end of the border of Egypt even to the other end thereof. 22. Only the land of the priests bought he not: for the priests had a portion from Pharaoh, and did eat their portion which Pharaoh gave them;
wherefore they sold not their land. 23. Then Joseph said unto the people, Behold, I have bought you this day and your land for Pharaoh; lo, here is seed for you, and ye shall sow the land. 24.
And it shall come to pass at the ingatherings, that ye shall give a fifth unto Pharaoh, and four parts shall be your own, for seed of the field,
and for your food, and for them of your households, and for food for your little ones.* m 25.
And they said, Thou hast saved our lives: let us find grace in the sight of my lord, and we will be Pharaoh's servants. 26. And Joseph made it a statute concerning the land of Egypt unto this day, that Pharaoh should have the fifth;
only the land of the priests alone became not Pharaoh's. 27. And Israel dwelt in the land of Egypt, in the land of Goshen; and they gat them possessions therein, and were fruitful, and multiplied exceedingly.

Chapter XLVII

In this concluding Sedrah of Genesis, we see the sunset of Jacob's career. We behold this storm-tossed soul on his death-bed, blessing his children. He is not afraid to die: "I will sleep with my fathers," he says. He is at peace with God. "For thy salvation do I hope, O Lord," are among the last words he utters. He knows that he can never travel beyond God's care. He is at peace with man. Esau, Dinah, Joseph—what a world of strife and suffering and anguish, did each of these tragedies bring him—and yet he dies blessing. Though starting as "a plain man dwelling in tents," his is no cloistered virtue, and he certainly is no sinless being. But he possesses the rare art of extracting good from every buffeting of Destiny. He errs and he stumbles, but he ever rises again; and on the anvil of affliction his soul is forged.

28. And Jacob lived. Heb. ויחי יעקב. Of how few men, asks a famous modern Jewish preacher, can we repeat a phrase like, "And Jacob lived." When many a man dies, a death-notice appears in the Press. In reality, it is a life-notice; because but for it, the world would never have known that that man had ever been alive. Only he who has been a force for human goodness and abides in bury me not, I pray thee, in Egypt. His one thought, oftentimes repeated, was that his bones should not rest in that strange land; not in pyramid or painted chamber, but in the cell that he had digged for himself in the primitive sepulchre of his fathers (Stanley).

30. but when I sleep with my fathers. Better, "so that I sleep with my fathers." His burial in Canaan would keep alive the wish of his descendants to return to the Promised Land.

CHAPTER XLVIII

48 1. And it came to pass after these things, that one said to Joseph, Behold, thy father is sick:
and he took with him his two sons, Manasseh
and Ephraim. 2. And one told Jacob, and said, Behold, thy son Joseph cometh unto thee: and Israel strengthened himself, and sat upon the bed. 3. And Jacob said unto Joseph, God Almighty appeared unto me at Luz in the land of Canaan, and blessed me, 4. and said unto me, Behold, I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make of thee a company of peoples; and will give this land to thy seed after thee for an everlasting possession. 5. And now thy two sons, which were born unto thee in the land of Egypt before I came unto thee into Egypt are mine; Ephraim and Manasseh, even as Reuben and Simeon, shall be mine. 6. And thy an everlasting possession. In spite of temporary loss, the children of Israel have an inalienable right to the Land of Promise.

5. and now. Jacob adopts the two sons of Joseph, Ephraim and Manasseh, born before he came to Egypt, thus making them equal to any of his other sons. By giving him a double portion of his inheritance, he transferred to Joseph the rights of the true first-born.

6. they shall be called after the name of their brethren. They will be included in the tribe of Ephraim or in the tribe of Manasseh.

7. Rachel. These words, it seems, Jacob spoke to himself; otherwise he would have said, "thy mother." It was to honour Rachel, the sorrow of whose loss haunts him all his life, that Jacob adopts her grandchildren as his own sons. Instead of being the mother of only two tribes, she will now be accounted the ancestress of four, her honour and esteem increasing accordingly (Herxheimer, S. R. Hirsch).

to my sorrow. lit. "upon me"; cf. XXXIII, 13.

8. beheld. He is on his death-bed with eyes dimmed by the mist that would soon close them forever. He does not know his grandchildren who accompany their father. He discerned faintly the figures of the young men, but could not distinguish their features; see v. 10.

10. could not see. Clearly; hence his question when seeing Joseph's sons, "Who are these"?

11. I had not thought. I had not hoped.

12. from between his knees. To place a child upon the issue, which thou begettest after them, shall be thine; they shall be called after the name of their brethren in their inheritance. 7. And as for me, when I came from Paddan, Rachel died, to my sorrow in the land of Canaan in the way, when there was still some way to come unto Ephrath:

and I buried her there in the way to Ephrath (the same is Beth-lehem). 8. And Israel beheld Joseph's sons, and said, Who are these? 9.
And Joseph said unto his father, They are my sons, whom God hath given me here. And he said, Bring them, I pray thee, unto me, and I will bless them.* ii 10. Now the eyes of Israel were dim for age, so that he could not see. And he brought them near unto him; and he kissed them, and embraced them. 11. And Israel said unto Joseph, I had not thought to see thy face:
and, lo, God hath let me see thy seed also. 12.
And Joseph brought them out from between his knees; and he bowed himself with his face to the earth. 13. And Joseph took them both, Ephraim in his right hand towards Israel's left hand, and Manasseh in his left hand toward Israel's right hand, and brought them near unto him. 14. And Israel stretched out his right hand, and laid it upon Ephraim's head, who was the younger, and knees was the symbol of adoption. Joseph's sons had thus been placed upon or between the knees of Jacob. This having been done, Joseph removes them.

bowed himself. In gratitude to his father.

13. Jacob was now to bless the lads. Joseph places Manasseh, the first-born, opposite to Jacob's right hand. This position was the station of honour.

This verse forms an introduction to the main theme of the chapter. Jacob demands their earnest attention because of the fateful message he has to convey to them.

3–4. Reuben

3. my firstborn. Reuben's natural rights have been forfeited. He has birth, dignity, opportunity; but no strength of character. In the Scripture narrative, he appears as a man who begins good actions, but does not complete them. Thus, he plans to save Joseph and he actually stops the murder, but Joseph is sold nevertheless. Jewish history remain true to ancestral type. When Deborah unfurled the banner of Israelitish independence in the days of the Judges, the tribes rallied round her. In the camp of Reuben, however, there were great deliberations and mighty searchings of heart, but no action; see Judges V, 15. Subsequently, the tribe of Reuben is rarely mentioned in Israel's history.

the excellency of dignity. A Hebraism for "superior in dignity." Superiority in dignity and power belonged to the firstborn. Onkelos renders, "For thee it was provided to receive three portions, the right of firstborn, the priesthood and the kingdom." The firstborn-right was given to Joseph, I Chron. V, 1; the priesthood was given to Levi, Num. III, 41; the kingly power or headship was allotted to Judah, see v. 8.

4. unstable as water. Any breeze can ruffle its surface. Or, "bubbling over like water," in uncontrolled vehemence of passion. Reuben's cardinal sin, says Jacob, was weakness of will, lack of self-control and firmness of purpose. The Heb. word for "unstable," pachaz, means recklessness; the same root in Aramaic means, "to be lascivious."

have not thou the excellency. i.e. "thou shalt forfeit thy privileges" as the firstborn. None of the descendants of Reuben ever became judge, prophet or leader. Here Scripture stresses the idea that moral character is a more important factor than hereditary right.

he went up to my couch. The sudden change from the second to the third person is due to Jacob's loathing at the mere memory of Reuben's offence; see XXV, 22.

The excellency of dignity, and the excellency of power.
4. Unstable as water, have not thou the excellency;
Because thou wentest up to thy father's bed:
Then defiledst thou it: he went up to my couch.
5. Simeon and Levi are brethren;
Weapons of violence are their swords.
6. O my soul, come not thou into their council;
Unto their assembly, my glory, be not thou united;
For in their anger they slew men
And in their selfwill they houghed oxen.

5–7. Simon and Levi

5. Simeon and Levi are brethren. In violence. See XXXIV, 26f. Moffat translates: "Simeon and Levi are a pair."

weapons of violence are their swords. Or, "compacts." The phrase is also rendered, "instruments of cruelty are in their habitations" (Onkelos, Kimchi and AV). The reference is evidently to their dealings in Shechem; see XXXIV.

6. council. Or, "secret"; i.e. secret confederacy.

my glory. i.e. my soul; as in Psalm XVI, 9. What lofty conception of both glory and soul, to make them synonymous as the Heb. language does!

men. The Heb. is in the singular, the word being used collectively.

they houghed oxen. A figure of vindictive destructiveness such as is recounted in XXXIV, 28, 29. To "hough" is to sever certain sinews which render the animal helpless. The mutilation of animals is not recorded in that chapter. Many Versions therefore render, "they digged down a wall," referring to the distruction of Shechem. The Heb. words for "ox" and "wall" differ only in one dot—שׁוֹר and שׁוּר.

v. 8. בראש עמוד סימן ב״ה שמ״ו. v. 10. ק׳ דגושה

7. cursed be their anger. Jacob does not curse them but their sin, of which he could not have given a stronger condemnation. It is characteristic of the untrustworthiness of the Samaritan text that instead of the reading ארור, "Cursed be their anger," it has אדיר, "How splendid is their anger"!

I will divide them in Jacob. Fulfilled by the intermingling of the Simeonites in the inheritance of Judah (see Josh. xix, 1); and by the dispersion of the tribe of Levi among the other tribes of Israel.

8–12. Judah

Contrast the characterisation of Reuben with Jacob's jubilant praise of Judah. Unlike Reuben, Judah has neither birthright nor the dignity or opportunity of the firstborn, but he has both strength and consistency of purpose. He knows his enemy, and—whether it be a person, an evil or a cause—his hand is upon that enemy's neck. Capable indeed of falling into grievous error and sin, he is yet true at heart. Judah's character fits him to take the lead and rule. He is the worthy ancestor of David, Isaiah and Nehemiah, the father of the royal tribe that led in the conquest of the Promised Land.

8. Judah, thee shall thy brethren praise. Foretells Judah's military glory in subduing the enemies of his brethren, the Philistines and Edomites, resulting in the acknowledgment of Judah as the national leader, or king.

9. lion's whelp. According to the Midrash, the emblem of the tribe of Judah was a lion. The metaphor suggests the vigour and nobility of Judah and his offspring; and the habitual swiftness and force of their military movements.

7. Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce;
And their wrath, for it was cruel:
I will divide them in Jacob,
And scatter them in Israel.
8. Judah, thee shall thy brethren praise:
Thy hand shall be on the neck of thine enemies;
Thy father's sons shall bow down before thee.
9. Judah is a lion's whelp;
From the prey, my son, thou art gone up:
He stooped down, he couched as a lion,
And as a lioness; who shall rouse him up?
10. The sceptre shall not depart from Judah,
Nor the ruler's staff from between his feet,
Until that which is his shall come;
And unto him shall the obedience of the peoples be.

thou art gone up. To the security of the Judean hills, after the victorious conflicts in the Plain below.

10. the sceptre. The emblem of kingship.

from between his feet. The figure is that of an Oriental king sitting, with the ruler's staff between his knees; as can be seen on Assyrian and Persian monuments.

until that which is his shall come. Heb. ad ki yabo shiloh; lit. "until Shiloh come"; or, "As long as men come to Shiloh." According to our translation, Judah's rule shall continue till he comes to his own, and the obedience of all the tribes is his. This translation may also mean that when the tribe of Judah has come into its own, the sceptre shall be taken out of its hands.

The explanation of this verse, especially of the Hebrew words עַד כִּי יָבֹא שִׁילֹה, is very difficult. Some Jewish commentators have given it a Messianic meaning, while in the Church it has been held to refer to the Founder of Christianity. See the Additional Note at the end of the chapter, p. 418.

v. 11. עירו ק׳ ibid. סותו ק׳

11. Instead of the translation, "Binding his foal unto the vine" (AV, RV and AJ), which would make Judah out to be a fool, render:

"Harnessing his foal for (the produce of) one vine,
"And his ass's colt for (the produce of) one choice vine"—which brings out in a striking figure the fruitfulness of Judah's land: one ass is required to carry away the produce of one vine; and even one choice vine yields enough fruit for the load of an ass's colt. This translation, founded on the interpretation of the Rabbis, is plainly indicated in Rashi and Rashbam; yet it has been overlooked by subsequent commentators (Marcus Jastrow).

choice vine. Heb. sorek, produced sweet grapes of superior quality. Grapes are to be so abundant that the people of Judah might wash their garments in them.

he hath washed. Better, "he washeth," denoting habitual action.

12. his eyes shall be red with wine. This rendering is absurd. According to it, Judah's eyes are red from excessive drinking, and Jacob's blessing is that Judah should be a drunkard! The word rendered "red," however, means "sparkling" (Septuagint, Gunkel, Gressmann); and the correct translation of the verse is: "His eyes are more sparkling than wine." his teeth white with milk. Does drinking milk produce white teeth? The correct translation (Septuagint, Vulgate, Saadyah, Jastrow) is, "His teeth are whiter than milk."

13. Zebulun

13. The favourable geographical position of Zebulun's territory is described.

11. Binding his foal unto the vine,
And his ass's colt unto the choice vine;
He hath washed his garments in wine,
And his vesture in the blood of grapes:
12. His eyes shall be red with wine,
And his teeth white with milk.
13. Zebulun shall dwell at the beach of the sea:
And he shall be for an haven of ships;
And his border shall be upon Zidon.
14. Issachar is a strong ass,
Couching down between the sheepfolds;
15. And he saw rest that it was good,
And the land that it was pleasant;
And he bowed his shoulder to bear,
And became a servant under taskwork.
16. Dan shall judge his people,
As one of the tribes of Israel.

an haven of ships. To which they may come in safety.

Zidon. The actual territory of Zebulun stretched from the Sea of Galilee to Mt. Carmel, close under Tyre and Zidon.

14–15. ISSACHAR

14. strong ass. Indicating great physical power.

15. rest. As opposed to the wandering life of nomads (Ryle).

task-work. Or, "tribute." Issachar, possessed of rich territory, preferred rather to submit to tribute than to leave his ploughshare and take up the sword. See Deut. XXXIII, 18. Zunz translates, "and yieldeth himself to the service of the labourer."

16–18. DAN

16. shall judge. Or, "shall defend," or, "avenge." Onkelos understood this to refer to the tribe of Dan in the days of Samson (Judg. XV, 20).

his people. The tribe of Dan.

17. an horned snake. Is small, but highly venomous; it coils itself in the sand and, if disturbed, darts out upon any passing animal. Dan will prove dangerous to his foes by ambuscades and guerilla warfare.

18. I have waited for thy salvation. Is probably intended as part of the blessing bestowed upon Dan, who was in the most exposed position among all the tribes of Israel.

thy salvation. i.e. deliverance wrought by thee.

19. Gad

19. a troop shall press. There is here, as in previous verses, a play upon the name. Perhaps the translation should be "a raiding band raids him, but he will band himself against their heel."

Gad succeeded in repelling the Ammonites, Moabites and Aramaeans, who were constantly raiding his borders. Jephthah was of this tribe.

20. Asher

20. Asher. "As for Asher" (AJ). The name Asher means, "happy or fortunate" (see xxx, 13); and this meaning is reflected in the blessing bestowed upon him. The land of Asher was prosperous or happy; cf. Arabia Felix.

But he shall press upon their heel.

who giveth goodly words. Refers to the tribe's reputation for eloquence, and the great victory of Barak, a Naphtalite, which was followed by the glorious Song of Deborah(Kimchi). Another translation is, "Naphtali is a slender terebinth, which putteth forth goodly branches." Joseph too (next verse) is compared to a vine.

22–26. Joseph

Jacob reserves his softest and most loving accents for Joseph, who united whatever is best and noblest in both Reuben and Judah. He is the man of vision, the man of dreams ; but to this he joins moral and spiritual strength in all the vicissitudes of life. He is the ideal son, the ideal brother, the ideal servant, the ideal administrator. His character and story have from of old been held to be typical of the character and story of Israel. Like Joseph, the Jew has been the dreamer of the ages, dreaming Israel's dream of universal justice and peace and brotherhood. Like Joseph, he has everywhere been the helpless victim of the hatred of his step-brethren, hatred that drove him from home and doomed him to Exile. In that Exile, he has, like Joseph, times without number resisted the Great Temptation of disloyalty to the God of his fathers. In the dreams of Joseph, the sun, moon and eleven stars bowed down to him. It is the stars that bow to him, and not he to the stars. This is characteristic

An Israelite should be ashamed to blame his star, his environment or any outward circumstance for his moral downfall or his religious apostasy. Man is captain of his own soul; and wherever there is a will to Judaism, there is a way to lead the Jewish life.

26. have prevailed. "Are mighty beyond" (AJ); are of greater excellence. The verse states that the blessings received by Jacob surpass the blessings vouchsafed to Jacob's fathers. Jacob now bestows these enhanced blessings upon Joseph, thereby making him the heir both of himself and of his ancestors.

and was gathered unto his people.

Additional Note G. Alleged Christological References in Scripture

The first of these references is alleged to be in the words often translated by "Until Shiloh come," in v. 10 of this chapter. Most of the ancient and modern explanations of this verse turn upon the Heb. word rendered by Shiloh.

I. It is a strange circumstance that the older Jewish versions and commentators (Septuagint, Targums, Saadyah and Rashi) read this word without a yod; as if written שֶׁלֹּה, the archaic form for "his"; or as if it were a poetic form for "peace."

(a) The translation adopted in this edition of the Pentateuch, "Until that which is his shall come," is that of the RV Margin, and is derived from the Septuagint. Its meaning is, The sceptre shall not depart from Judah till all that is reserved for him shall have been fulfilled.

(b) "Till he come whose it (the kingdom) is" (Onkelos and Jerusalem Targum, Saadyah, Rashi and other Jewish commentators).

(c) "Till peace cometh" (M. Friedlander).

II. Most commentators, however, take the word שילה as the name of a place or person.

(a) "As long as men come to Shiloh" (to worship). This is the translation of the American Jewish Version. Shiloh was the location of the sanctuary in the days of the Prophet Samuel, before Jerusalem became the centre of Jewish worship. As the outstanding superiority of the tribe of Judah only began after the Temple was built at Jerusalem, this interpretation is unsatisfactory.

(b) "Till he of Shiloh cometh," and the obedience of the peoples be turned to him. Mendelssohn and Zunz see in the verse a prediction of the event described in I Kings, xi, 29f. Ahijah, the Prophet of Shiloh, foretold to Jeroboam that a part of the Kingdom would be taken from Solomon and transferred to him; that ten tribes of Israel (here called "peoples," see Gen. xlviii, 4) would break away from the House of David, and submit to his rule. This ingenious explanation fails to satisfy for various reasons. "He of Shiloh" would be in Heb. not שילה, but השילוני; the tribes were not turned to the Prophet of Shiloh but to Jeroboam; and the utterance would have been quite unintelligible to Judah.

Authorised Version, and assumes that Shiloh is a personal name or a Messianic title. Although this assumption finds support in Rabbinic literature, it is there only a homiletic comment without official and binding authority. Despite the fact that nowhere in Scripture is that term applied to the Messiah, Christian theologians assume that Shiloh is a name of the Founder of Christianity. In this sense, "Till Shiloh come" is a favourite text of Christian missionaries in attempting to convert illiterate Jews or those ignorant of Scripture. It is noteworthy that this translation only dates from the year 1534, and is found for the first time in the German Bible of Sebastian Munster. Although it is retained in the text of the Revised Version, it is now rejected by all those who have a scholarly acquaintance with the subject. Even a loyal Bishop of the Church of England, the late Dean of Westminster, wrote, "The improbability of this later interpretation is so great that it may be dismissed from consideration" (Ryle).

Such likewise is the judgment which must be passed on the translations of all the other alleged Christological passages which missionaries to the Jews are fond of quoting. Christian scholars of repute are gradually giving up such partisan interpretations. Thus Psalm II, 12 is translated in the Authorised Version as, "Kiss the Son," with the obvious Christian reference. In the Revised Version text, however, this is softened to "Kiss the son"; while the Margin gives, "Worship in purity." The latter is in agreement with Jewish authorities.

Similarly, in connection with Isaiah VII, 14, "A virgin shall conceive," Christian scholars to-day admit that "virgin" is a mistranslation for the Heb. word almah, in that verse. A "maid" or unmarried woman is expressed in Hebrew by bethulah. The word almah in Isaiah VII, 14 means no more than a young woman of age to be a mother, whether she be married or not.

The most famous passage of this class is the Fifty-third chapter of Isaiah. For eighteen hundred years Christian theologians have passionately maintained that it is a Prophetic anticipation of the life of the Founder of their Faith. An impartial examination of the chapter, however, shows that the Prophet is speaking of a past historical fact, and is describing one who had already been smitten to death. Consequently, a reference to an event which is said to have happened many centuries later is excluded.

These three instances may be taken as typical. Modern

CHAPTER L. JACOB'S BURIAL. THE DEATH OF JOSEPH

1. and Joseph. This does not imply that the other children of Jacob did not do even as Joseph did.

2. to embalm his father. Not in imitation of the custom of the Egyptians who took care to preserve the body after death and keep it ready for occupation by the soul. Joseph's purpose was merely to preserve it from dissolution before it reached the Cave of Machpelah.

3. the Egyptians wept for him. Out of respect for Joseph. Probably the forty days of embalming formed part of the seventy days (Rashi).

4. unto the house of Pharaoh. Joseph, as a mourner, would not approach the king in person.

CHAPTER L

50 1. And Joseph fell upon his father's face, and wept upon him, and kissed him. 2. And Joseph commanded his servants the physicians to embalm
his father: and the physicians embalmed Israel.
3. And forty days were fulfilled for him; for so are fulfilled the days of embalming: and the Egyptians wept for him threescore and ten days.
4. And when the days of weeping for him were past, Joseph spake unto the house of Pharaoh, saying, If now I have found grace in your eyes,
speak, I pray you, in the ears of Pharaoh, saying,
5. My father made me swear, saying, Lo, I die:
in my grave which I have digged for me in the land of Canaan, there shalt thou bury me. Now therefore let me go up, I pray thee, and bury my father, and I will come again. 6. And Pharaoh said, Go up, and bury thy father, according as he made thee swear. 7. And Joseph went up to bury his father: and with him went up all the servants of Pharaoh, the elders of his house, and all the elders of the land of Egypt, 8, and all the house of Joseph, and his brethren, and his father's and I will come back. Joseph assures Pharaoh that he intends to return to Egypt.

7. all the elders. The respect shown to Jacob is evidently due to the great position occupied by Joseph in Egypt. Such processions as described in our text are frequently represented on Egyptian tombs.

beyond Jordan. This cannot mean east of the Jordan, as it is unthinkable that in going to the cave of Machpelah at Hebron the company would take the circuitous route round the Dead Sea. All difficulties disappear when we remember that to Moses and the Israelites in the land of Moab, the words " beyond Jordan " meant west of Jordan. This phrase therefore is another incidental confirmation of the Mosaic authorship of Genesis (W. H. Green).

house: only their little ones, and their flocks,
and their herds, they left in the land of Goshen.
9. And there went up with him both chariots and horsemen: and it was a very great company.
10. And they came to the threshing-floor of Atad, which is beyond Jordan, and there they lamented with a very great and sore lamentation: and he made a mourning for his father seven days. 11.
And when the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, saw the mourning in the floor of Atad, they said, This is a grievous mourning to the Egyptians:
wherefore the name of it was called Abel-Mizraim, which is beyond Jordan. 12. And his sons did and buried him in the cave of the field of Mach-

a possession of a buryingplace, of Ephron the Hittite, before Mamre.

14. And Joseph returned into Egypt, he, and his brethren, and all that went up with him to bury his father, after he had buried his father. 15.
And when Joseph's brethren saw that their father was dead, they said, It may be that Joseph will hate us, and will fully requite us all the evil which we did unto him. 16. And they sent a message unto Joseph, saying, Thy father did command before he died, saying, 17. So shall ye become a living embodiment of the Moral Law. The Rabbis tell: The nations wondered why the Children of Israel in their wanderings through the desert, carried with them the bones of Joseph in a similar ark and in the same reverential manner as they did the Tables of the Covenant. "He whose remains are preserved in the one ark," they answered, "loyally obeyed the Divine commands enshrined in the other."

in Egypt. These last words prepare the mind for the new era that awaits Israel in Egypt, and for the eventful story of the Exodus.

According to Jewish custom, the completion of any of the Five Books of the Torah is marked in the Synagogue by the congregation exclaiming, חזק חזק ונתחזק, "Be strong, be strong, and let us strengthen one another"—an echo of the words of the ancient warrior, "Be of good courage, and let us play the men, for our people and the cities of our God." (II Samuel, x, 12). Be strong. i.e. to carry out the teaching contained in the Book just completed.

The Massoretic Note states the number of verses in Genesis to be 1534; its Sedrahs (parshiyyoth) 12; its Sedarim, smaller divisions according to the Triennial Cycle, 43; and its Chapters 50.

THE HAFTORAHS

FOR

THE BOOK OF GENESIS

Before reading the Lesson from the Prophets, the following is said by the Maftir:—

בָּרוּךְ אַתָּה יְיָ אֱלֹהֵינוּ מֶלֶךְ הָעוֹלָם אֲשֶׁר בָּחַר בִּנְבִיאִים טוֹבִים וְרָצָה בְדִבְרֵיהֶם הַנֶּאֱמָרִים בֶּאֱמֶת בָּרוּךְ אַתָּה יְיָ הַבּוֹחֵר בַּתּוֹרָה וּבְמשֶׁה עַבְדּוֹ וּבְיִשְׂרָאֵל עַמּוֹ וּבִנְבִיאֵי הָאֱמֶת וָצֶדֶק:

[Sephardim conclude each Haftorah with the words:—

גֹּאֲלֵנוּ יְיָ צְבָאוֹת שְׁמוֹ קְדוֹשׁ יִשְׂרָאֵל:

After the Lesson from the Prophets, the Maftir says the following:—

בָּרוּךְ אַתָּה יְיָ אֱלֹהֵינוּ מֶלֶךְ הָעוֹלָם צוּר כָּל־הָעוֹלָמִים צַדִּיק בְּכָל־הַדּוֹרוֹת הָאֵל הַנֶּאֱמָן הָאוֹמֵר וְעוֹשֶׂה הַמְדַבֵּר וּמְקַיֵּם שֶׁכָּל־דְּבָרָיו אֱמֶת וָצֶדֶק: נֶאֱמָן אַתָּה הוּא יְיָ אֱלֹהֵינוּ וְנֶאֱמָנִים דְּבָרֶיךָ וְדָבָר אֶחָד מִדְּבָרֶיךָ אָחוֹר לֹא־יָשׁוּב רֵיקָם כִּי אֵל מֶלֶךְ נֶאֱמָן וְרַחֲמָן אָתָּה· בָּרוּךְ אַתָּה יְיָ הָאֵל הַנֶּאֱמָן בְּכָל־דְּבָרָיו:

Before reading the Lesson from the Prophets, the following is said by the Maftir :—

Blessed art thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, who hast chosen good prophets, and hast found pleasure in their words which were spoken in truth.

Blessed art thou, O Lord, who hast chosen the Law, and Moses thy servant, and Israel thy people, and prophets of truth and righteousness.

Our Redeemer! The Lord of Hosts is his name, the Holy One of Israel.]

After the Lesson from the Prophets, the Maftir says the following :—

Blessed art thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, Rock of all worlds, righteous through all generations, O faithful God, who sayest and doest, who speakest and fulfillest, all whose words are truth and righteousness. Faithful art thou, O Lord our God, and faithful are thy words, and not one of thy words shall return void, for thou art a faithful and merciful God and King. Blessed art thou, O Lord, God, who art faithful in all thy words.

Have mercy upon Zion, for it is the home of our life, and save her that is grieved in spirit speedily, even in our days. Blessed art thou, O Lord, who makest Zion joyful through her children.

Gladden us, O Lord our God, with Elijah the prophet, thy servant, and with the kingdom of the house of David, thine anointed. Soon may he come and rejoice our hearts. Suffer not a stranger to sit upon his throne, nor let others any longer inherit his glory ; for by thy holy name thou didst swear unto him, that his light should not be quenched for ever. Blessed art thou, O Lord, the Shield of David.

For the Law, for the divine service, for the prophets, and for this Sabbath day, which thou, O Lord our God, hast given us for holiness and for rest, for honour and for glory,—for all these we thank and bless thee, O Lord our God, blessed be thy name by the mouth of every living being continually and for ever. Blessed art thou, O Lord, who sanctifiest the Sabbath.

The Haftorah (the Heb. term is haphtarah, " conclusion "), is the Lesson from the Prophets recited immediately after the Reading of the Law. Long before the destruction of the Second Temple, the custom had grown up of concluding the Reading of the Torah on Sabbaths, Fasts and Festivals with a selection from the " Earlier Prophets " (Joshua, Judges, Samuel and Kings) or from the " Later Prophets " (Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and the Book of the Twelve Prophets). We possess no historical data concerning the institution of these Lessons. A medieval author on the Liturgy states that a little more than two thousand years ago (168 B.C.E.), Antiochus Epiphanes, king of Syria and Palestine, forbade the reading of the Torah under penalty of death. The Scribes, thereupon, substituted a chapter of the Prophets cognate to the portion of the Law that ought to have been read. But whatever be the exact origin of the Haftorah there is always some similarity between the Sedrah and the Prophetic selection. Even when the latter does not contain an explicit reference to the events of the Sedrah, it reinforces the teaching of the weekly Reading upon the mind of the worshipper by a Prophetic message of consolation and hope.

Isaiah XLII, 5–XLIII, 10

Thus saith God the Lord, he that created the heavens, and stretched them forth; he that spread abroad the earth and that which cometh out of it; he that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein: 6.

BERESHITH

Isaiah XLII, 5–XLIII, 10. Israel's Destiny

The connection between the Sedrah and the Prophetical Lesson is found in the opening words of the Haftorah (v. 5) which speak of God as the Creator of Heaven and Earth. The first chapters of Genesis, after describing the Creation, recount the growth of sin and violence among the children of men. The Prophet, likewise, proclaims the omnipotence and sovereignity of the Creator of the Universe, and proceeds to declare unto Israel its mission to rescue the world from moral degeneracy.

These chapters are taken from the second portion of the Book of Isaiah. This part of the Book of Isaiah is sometimes called "The Prophecy of Restoration." It is addressed to the Jews in Babylon who had been deported from Judaea, after the first destruction of Jerusalem in the year 586 B.C.E., and who were longing for the day when they would be free to return to the Holy Land and Holy City. During the years of weary waiting, the Prophet consoles his suffering brethren by setting before them the sublime mission of Israel: God had called Israel to be His witness before all peoples, to be "a light unto the nations," and to point the way of righteousness and salvation to all the children of men.

5–9. God promises Israel, the "Servant of the Lord," Divine aid in the achievement of his sacred task.

a covenant of the people. Or, "a covenant to mankind." The knowledge of God and practice of righteousness which it is Israel's mission to spread will, when consummated, bind all peoples together in a covenant of peace (Kimchi). All the Prophets preach the moral unity of mankind.

a light of the nations. Better, "unto the nations."

7. to open the blind eyes. To enlighten those who are blind to the truth, to free those who are in spiritual bondage.

8. my name. The name Adonay conveys the unique reality, and the power to confer reality, of the Divine Being. This "glory" would be forfeited if His predictions should fail (Cheyne).

9. former things are come to pass. Former events, like the victories of Cyrus, have taken place in accordance with the utterances of the Prophets. Now, as surely, these new prophecies of the exaltation of the Servant of the Lord, through these victories, shall likewise come to pass.

Cyrus, the creator of the Persian Empire, is one of the great men is history. Whether as king, general or statesman, he has no superior among the rulers of the Orient. To the Greeks he appeared the ideal king; and in Israel the Prophets hailed him as God's Anointed, as the chosen Agent for the ending of idolatry and tyranny among the nations. In the year 549, before the Common Era, he became king of the Medes, and when in 538 he conquered Babylon, he was master of Western Asia. Cyrus perceived the value of the prisoners from the dungeon, and them that the Lord; that is my name: and my glory will I not give to another, neither my praise unto graven images. 9. Behold, the former things are come to pass, and new things do I declare: before they spring forth I tell you of them.

10. Sing unto the Lord a new song, and his

the inhabitants thereof. 11. Let the wilderness that Kedar doth inhabit; let the inhabitants of Sela sing, let them shout from the top of the mountains. 12. Let them give glory unto the Jewish gratitude and loyalty, and one of his first acts was a proclamation to the Jewish exiles in Babylon, granting them the right to return to Jerusalem and rebuild the Temple. This "Cyrus Declaration" is preserved in the last verse of the last book of the Hebrew Bible, II Chronicles, XXXVI, 23.

10–13. Hymn of Praise to God, because of the restoration of Israel, which the Prophet foretells (Ibn Ezra); also because of the glad tidings that a Servant-People has been Divinely chosen to carry God's message to mankind. Therefore, all peoples will unite in this song—even all Nature is here figuratively represented as sharing in the rejoicing at the glorious news (Kimchi).

10. new song. "A song of a kind which has not before been heard, concerning new events of a kind never before displayed" (R. Levy).

11. ashamed. Put to shame.

22–25. How is the pitiable plight of Israel, the homelessness and bondage of the Exile, to be reconciled with the assertion of God's power? Israel's sufferings are due to disobedience and rebellion. He rebukes Israel's insensibility to God's message, and urges a better understanding of the significance of God's dealings with Israel. Israel's disasters are a moral discipline leading to the purification and deliverance of His chastened People.

Chapter XLIII, 1–10. Israel, God's Witness

1. I have redeemed. The perfect tense of the verbs is used to express the certainty of this future event. This is called the "Prophetic perfect"; the Prophet is so confident that the Divine promise will be fulfilled, that he describes the future event as if it had already been seen or heard by him. Thus, the Prophet does not say, "Babylon will fall," but, "Fallen is Babylon"—he sees it as a heap of ruins, righteousness' sake, to make the teaching great and glorious. (Sephardim conclude here.)

22. But this is a people robbed and spoiled; they are all of them snared in holes, and they are hid in prison houses: they are for a prey, and none delivereth; for a spoil, and none saith, Restore.
23. Who is there among you that will give ear to this? that will hearken and hear for the time to come? 24. Who gave Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers? did not the Lord? he against whom we have sinned, and in whose ways they would not walk, neither were they obedient unto his law. 25. Therefore he poured upon him the fury of his anger, and the strength of battle; and it set him on fire round about, yet he knew not; and it burned him, yet he laid it not to heart.

43 1. But now thus saith the Lord that created thee, O Jacob, and he that formed thee, O Israel: Fear not, for I have redeemed thee; I have called thee by thy name, thou art mine. 2. When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee. 3. For I am the Lord thy God, the Holy One of Israel, thy saviour; I have

4. men. Israel's ransom is paid not in gold, but in whole nations.

5–7. The Jewish Dispersion is now known to have been more wide-spread than was formerly believed. Israel's scattered sons shall, however, not be lost, but shall be in-gathered from all parts of the earth.

8–10. The nations and the Servant are summoned to God's judgment throne.

8. bring forth. Even if many are unaware of the full significance of their history, Israel is nevertheless a competent witness to the bare external facts; it has heard the predictions and seen them fulfilled (Skinner).

9. former things. i.e. past events in Israel's history which had been announced by Prophets before they occurred. If foreign nations can make such claims, let them bring forth their witnesses to support ("justify") them. They cannot; but Israel can testify to God's rule in history, and His sovereignty over the world. Therefore once again, bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the end of the earth; 7. every one that is called by my name, and whom I have created for my glory; I have formed him; yea, I have made him.

8. Bring forth the blind people that have eyes, and the deaf that have ears. 9. Let all the nations be gathered together, and let the peoples be assembled: who among them can declare this,
and shew us former things? let them bring their witnesses that they may be justified: or let them hear, and say, It is truth. 10. Ye are my witnesses,

10. Ye are my witnesses. Israel's high vocation as God's witnesses, to the end that every succeeding generation shall "know, understand and believe" in Him as the One Creator of the Universe and only Saviour of men and nations.

"Israel's 'Heroic History,' as Manasseh ben Israel called it, is in truth never-ending. Each Jew and each Jewess is making his or her mark, or his or her stain, upon the wonderful unfinished history of the Jews, the history which Herder called the greatest poem of all time. Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord. Loyal and steadfast witnesses is it, or self-seeking and suborned ones? A witness of some sort every Jew born is bound to be. He must fulfil his mission, and through good report and through evil report, he must add his item of evidence to the record" (Katie Magnus).

NOACH

Isaiah LIV–LV, 5

The Haftorah, like the preceding one, forms a portion of the glowing prophetic Rhapsody, "Israel Redeemed," which is the main theme of the second half of the Book of Isaiah.

The reference in v. 9 to "the waters of Noah," provides a literal connection with the Sedrah. But the connection is deeper. The Flood was apparently an act of destruction; yet, by wiping out a corrupt world, it paved the way for a new humanity. So Israel's Exile. From its suffering, declares the Prophet, Israel is issuing stronger in loyalty to God and in the conception of his vocation. Again, God's covenant with Noah ("I will establish My covenant with you . . . neither shall there be any more flood to destroy the earth") is paralleled by the "Covenant of Peace" into which, in God's everlasting mercy, Israel now enters.

break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child: for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the Lord. 2. Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations; spare not: lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes. 3. For thou shalt spread abroad on the right hand and on the left; and thy seed shall possess the nations,
and make the desolate cities to be inhabited.

4. the shame of thy youth. The defeats and humiliations in Israel's earlier history.

thy widowhood. i.e. the Exile, when God, "Zion's husband," seemed to have withdrawn from her. "Widowhood" has a wider significance than in ordinary English, being used to denote a woman abandoned by her husband.

13. all thy children shall be taught of the Lord. Or, "disciples of the Lord"; or, "shall study the law of the Lord" (Gaster). Zion's peace will be based not on armed force, but on the God-fearing lives of all its inhabitants. In some ancient manuscripts it seems the second word for "thy children" (banayich) in this verse was read as bonayich, "thy builders." In other words, the children of a knowledge of Judaism and trained for a life of beneficence for Israel and humanity. This verse ("All thy children shall be taught of the Lord,") is an important landmark in the history of civilisation. In obedience to it, Israel led the way in universal education. Thus, in his History of the World H. G. Wells records, " The Jewish religion, because it was a literature-sustained religion, led to the first efforts to provide elementary instruction for all the children of the community."

CHAPTER LV. THE RETURN TO ZION SHOULD ALSO BE A RETURN TO GOD

1. A call to rich and poor alike to participate in the blessings of the new era, by coming to the source whence the knowledge of duty springs—the word of God. The cry is like that of the water-carrier in Eastern cities, and blessings are expressed in Oriental imagery, in terms of quickening water, nourishing milk, and gladdening wine. " One cannot fail to perceive the note of wistfulness in the appeal, suggestive of the dread of an unspeakable disappointment " (Elmslie and Skinner).

The Sedrah opens with the call of Abraham, and the Divine bidding, "Be thou a blessing" unto all the families of the earth. Such likewise declares the great Prophet of Consolation is the Divine charge to the Children of Abraham. Israel, suffering in Exile, might well despair of the fulfilment fatness. 3. Incline your ear, and come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live: and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David. 4. Behold, I have given him for a witness to the peoples, a leader and commander to the peoples. 5. Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knowest not, and a nation that knew not thee shall run unto thee, because of the Lord thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee.

III. LECH LECHA

Isaiah XL, 27–XLI, 16

27. Why sayest thou, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel, my way is hid from the Lord, and my judgement is passed away from my God? 28. Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard? the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the

of that Divine promise, nay, even of God's remembrance of that promise. The Prophet here stills such questionings. In God, Israel has the source of inexhaustible strength. The everlasting God will not fail to carry through His great purposes for mankind through Israel His servant, the child of "Abraham, My friend."

27. my way is hid. "My lot is unnoticed by God. He passes over my right to be protected from intolerable oppression," such is the despairing complaint of many in the Exile. Israel fears that it is forgotten by God.

28. Gives the answer of the Prophet.

30. even the youths. "And though youths." (AJ).

31. they that wait. They who hope in the Lord are borne aloft on wings of faith above all earthly cares. The phrases "mount up with wings as eagles," "run," and "walk" do not form an anti-climax. Under a wave of enthusiasm we are all capable of an isolated act of heroism, i.e. to "soar" or "to run" for a time. It is far harder to follow the monotonous round of everyday duty when the vision has faded and the splendour seems gone, undeterred by trials and hindrances, meeting them in the spirit of faith and conquering them by steadfastness. This is the achievement of those who "wait upon the Lord." Day by day, they shall renew their strength.

youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall: 31. but they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run,
and not be weary; they shall walk, and not faint.

41 1. Keep silence before me, O islands; and let the peoples renew their strength: let them come near; then let them speak: let us come near together to judgement. 2. Who hath raised up generations from the beginning" (AJ), i.e. He who from the first knew all future times and events, and summons each to appear at its right moment. This verse is one of the sublimest in the Bible: "Human history is the thought of God," the "counsel" of the Almighty. God is "the First and the Last," initiating all movements—calling the generations from the beginning—and bringing them to a close. Prediction and fulfilment are thus manifestations of His universal Wisdom and Power (Davidson).

These shall be reduced to powder and scattered by the whirlwind, and Israel shall rejoice in the vindication of his faith in God against the world.

VAYYERA

II Kings IV, 1–37

The parallel between the Sedrah and Haftorah is clear. The Prophet Elisha, like Abraham, seeks every opportunity to practise lovingkindness and bring relief and blessing wherever he went in the course of his ministrations. Even more so does the story of the Shunammite and her child recall the story of Sarah. Both occurences were "Providential" happenings. The Haftorah teaches that there is Divine control of human conditions, and that many humanly unaccountable things happen in life.

Behold, I will make thee a new sharp threshing instrument having teeth: thou shalt thresh the mountains, and beat them small, and shalt make the hills as chaff. 16. Thou shalt fan them, and the wind shall carry them away, and the whirlwind shall scatter them: and thou shalt rejoice in the Lord, thou shalt glory in the Holy One of Israel.

children to be bondmen. 2. And Elisha said unto her, What shall I do for thee? tell me; what hast thou in the house? And she said, Thine hand-

1–7. The Widow's Pot of Oil

This story is one of a cycle of miraculous tales that relate the activities of Elisha, the disciple of the great Prophet Elijah.

1. a certain woman. According to tradition, she was the widow of Obadiah (I Kings, XVII, 3) the god-fearing minister of king Ahab, who fed and sheltered the Prophets when Jezebel persecuted them. Was her poverty due to the burden of debt with which Obadiah had loaded himself in order to save the Prophets of the Lord from the hands of the murderous Jezebel?

So she went from him, and shut the door upon her and upon her sons; they brought the vessels to her, and she poured out. 6. And it came to pass, when the vessels were full, that she said unto her son, Bring me yet a vessel. And he said unto her, There is not a vessel more. And the oil stayed. 7. Then she came and told the man of God. And he said, Go, sell the oil, and pay thy debt, and live thou and thy sons of the rest.

8. And it fell on a day that Elisha passed to Shunem, where was a great woman; and she constrained him to eat bread. And so it was, that as oft as he passed by, he turned in thither to eat bread. 9. And she said unto her husband, Behold now, I perceive that this is an holy man of God, which passeth by us continually. 10. Is it still a Jewish home, a sanctuary ? Is it well with the child? In the Sedrah, Abraham and Isaac are called upon to tread the path of supreme sacrifice ; yet, Scripture records of father and son, " And they walked both of them together." Is there similar unity of heart and soul between you and your child ? Education is the shibboleth of the hour ; but in Judaism the word for " education ". And she answered, It is well. 27. And when she came to the man of God to the hill, she caught hold of his feet. And Gehazi came near to thrust her away; but the man of God said, Let her alone: for her soul is bitter within her; and the Lord hath hid it from me, and hath not told me. 28. Then she said, Did I desire a son of my lord? did I not say, Do not deceive me? 29. Then he said to Gehazi, Gird up thy loins, and take my staff in thine hand, and go thy way: if thou meet any man, salute him not; and if any salute thee, answer him not again: and lay my staff upon the face of the child. 30. And the mother of the child said, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And he arose, and followed her. 31. And Gehazi passed on before them,

"The object of education is not merely to enable our children to gain their daily bread and to acquire pleasant means of recreation, but that they should know God and serve Him with earnestness and devotion. Are you thus training your children? Is it your care that they be educated as Jews and Jewesses?" (Hermann Adler).

31. voice nor hearing. No sign of life.

We may find deep suggestion in the restoration of the Shunammite's child to life. The child was revived by contact with the living warmth of the Prophet's body. Thus has Israel throughout the ages survived a thousand deaths, because his soul was ever quickened into life by direct contact with Divine teachings of Israel's Lawgiver, Prophets and Sages.

CHAYYE SARAH

I Kings i, 1–31

The connection between Sedrah and Haphtorah is readily seen. The one portrays Abraham's old age, and the other David's ; the one depicts Abraham's solicitude for the piety of his house, and David's for the right succession in his.

There is contrast in the character of the two sons. Isaac allows himself to be guided by his father in a great decision, in spite of his forty years ; Adonijah in the Haftorah cannot and laid the staff upon the face of the child;

but there was neither voice, nor hearing. Wherefore he returned to meet him, and told him, saying,
The child is not awaked.

32. And when Elisha was come into the house, behold, the child was dead, and laid upon his bed. 33. He went in therefore, and shut the door upon them twain, and prayed unto the Lord. 34. And he went up, and lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands: and he stretched himself upon him;
and the flesh of the child waxed warm. 35. Then he returned, and walked in the house once to and fro; and went up, and stretched himself upon him:
and the child sneezed seven times, and the child opened his eyes. 36. And he called Gehazi, and said, Call this Shunammite. So he called said, Take up thy son. 37. Then she went in, and fell at his feet, and bowed herself to the ground

and she took up her son, and went out.

1 1. Now king David was old and stricken in years; and they covered him with clothes, but he gat no heat. 2. Wherefore his servants said unto him, Let there be sought for my lord the king a young virgin: and let her stand before the king, and cherish him; and let her lie in thy bosom, that my lord the king may get heat.
3. So they sought for a fair damsel throughout all the coasts of Israel, and found Abishag the Shunammite, and brought her to the king. 4. And the damsel was very fair; and she cherished the king and ministered to him; but the king knew her not.

5. Then Adonijah the son of Haggith exalted himself, saying, I will be king: and he prepared him chariots and horsemen, and fifty men to run before him. 6. And his father had not displeased him at any time in saying, Why hast thou done so? and he was also a very goodly man; and he was born after Absalom. 7. And he conferred with Joab the son of Zeruiah, and with Abiathar the priest: and they following Adonijah helped him. 8. But Zadok the priest, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and Nathan the prophet, and Shimei, and Rei, and the mighty men which belonged to David, were not with Adonijah. 9. And Adonijah sacrificed sheep and oxen and fatlings by the stone of Zoheleth, which

TOLDOTH

MALACHI I–II, 7

Malachi was the last of the Prophets. Nothing is known of his life, except what can be gathered from his prophecies, which seem to have been spoken sometime about the year 450 before the Common Era.

The Second Temple had been rebuilt, but the high hopes of the returned exiles had not been fulfilled. The lamp of religious enthusiasm burned but dimly in that age, and both priest and people treated sacred things with a weary indifference. Though from the rising of the sun until the going down of the same, God's name was revered among the nations, it was Israel that began to doubt whether there was a righteous Governor of the universe, and was losing Israel's belief in Israel. "I have loved you, saith the Lord. Yet ye say, 'Wherein hast Thou loved us?' Your words have been stout against Me. Ye have said, 'It is vain to serve God, and what profit is it that we have kept His charge?'"

It is to such a generation that Malachi brings his "burden," i.e. utterance, message. He reaffirms and boldly proclaims the Divine election and the deathlessness of Israel. Confronted by sordid irreligion and cruel selfishness, he preaches the reality of the Unseen, and gives eternal expression to the brotherhood of man. "Have we not all one father, hath

VI. TOLDOTH,

Malachi I–II, 7

1 1. The burden of the word of the Lord to Israel
by Malachi.

2. I have loved you, saith the Lord. Yet ye say, Wherein hast thou loved us? Was not Esau Jacob's brother? saith the Lord: yet I loved Jacob; 3. but Esau I hated, and made his mountains a desolation, and gave his heritage to the jackals of the wilderness. 4. Though Edom say, We are beaten down, but we will return and build the waste places; thus saith the Lord of hosts, They shall build, but I will throw down: and men shall call them The border of wickedness, not one God created us all. Why, then, do we deal faithlessly every man against his brother?" he asks. These words alone should forever endear him to every human heart.

The connection with the Sedrah lies chiefly in the opening verses.

The difference in the treatment of the two nations descended from Jacob and Esau is due to the difference in the character and life of these nations. The Edomites were a fierce and cruel people. Josephus describes the Edomites of his day as a turbulent and unruly race, always hovering on the verge of revolution, always rejoicing in changes, rushing to battle as if going to a feast. In the Rabbinical writings, Edom became the name, the veiled name for tyrannous Imperial Rome, and in later times for the persecuting Christian Church. "It was by a sure instinct that Esau or Edom was ever regarded as representative of that heathendom against which Israel had to realise its destiny in the world, as God's own nation" (G. A. Smith).

4. Some disaster has recently befallen the Edomites; but for them, there is no hope of restoration such as Israel has enjoyed.

6. A son honoureth his father, and a servant his master: if then I be a father, where is mine honour? and if I be a master, where is my fear? saith the Lord of hosts unto you, O priests, that despise my name. And ye say, Wherein have we despised thy name? 7. Ye offer polluted bread upon mine altar. And ye say, Wherein have we polluted thee? In that ye say, The table of the Lord is contemptible. 8. And when ye offer the blind for sacrifice, it is no evil! and when ye offer the lame and sick, it is no evil! Present it now unto thy governor; will he be pleased with thee? or will he accept thy person? saith the Lord of hosts. 9. And now, I pray you, intreat the favour of God, that he may be gracious unto us: this hath been from your hand: will he accept any of your persons? said the Lord of hosts. 10. Oh that there were one among you that would shut the doors, that ye might not kindle fire on mine altar in vain! I have no pleasure in you, saith the Lord of hosts, neither will I accept an offering at your hand. 11. For from the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same my name is great among the nations; and in every place incense is offered unto my name, and a pure

VII. VAYYETZE—(FOR ASHKENAZIM)

Hosea XII, 13—XIV, 10

Like his older contemporary, Amos, Hosea is the Prophet of the Decline and Fall of the Northern Israel.

The reign of Jeroboam II—a time of prosperity, luxury and idolatry in Northern Israel—closed in the year 740, before the Common Era. And very soon thereafter came "the begining of the end." A succession of usurpers and adventurers occupied the throne, and the land was swiftly drifting towards social and political disintegration. Instead saith the Lord of hosts. 5. My covenant was with him of life and peace; and I gave them

to him that he might fear, and he feared me, and stood in awe of my name. 6. The law of truth was in his mouth, and uprighteousness was not found in his lips: he walked with me in peace and uprightness, and did turn many away from iniquity. 7. For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law
at his mouth: for he is the messenger of the Lord of hosts.

of obeying the law of God, Israel amused itself with international intrigues, and imitated the morals and idolatries of her allies. But the world-power of Assyria had appeared on the horizon, and was soon destined to engulf everything. "Let Israel come back to God, and call upon Him in their anguish. Let Israel seek the Lord, it is still time," such is the burden of Hosea. "His sensitive soul is full of sympathy and love for his people; and his keen perception of the destruction towards which they are hastening produces a conflict of emotions which is reflected in the pathos, and force, and artless rhythm of sighs and sobs which characterise his prophecy" (Driver).

13. Jacob fled. The Prophet takes the people back to their beginnings, to their ancestor of Jacob. (This connects the Sedrah with the Haftorah). Did not the Patriarch, in his hard life, find God his support, guide and Redeemer? And Israel in Egypt was freed by Divine power, just as later he was "guarded" (and guided) by God's chosen Prophet (Moses) whose successors the people were now disregarding and despising. Hosea bids the people remember that God is their only Saviour, even as His hand is manifest in all their history.

15. Ephraim. The Northern Kingdom is so called from the name of its most prominent tribe.

CHAPTER XIII. THE LAST JUDGMENT OF EPHRAIM

1. when Ephraim spake. A rapid resume of the history of the Northern Kingdom. At first Ephraim's power was great, and he was feared by surrounding tribes. Jeroboam, the first king of the Ten Tribes, was an Ephraimite. "He sinned and led Israel to sin," through the calf-worship which he had set up at Dan and Beersheba.

sheep. 14. And by a prophet the Lord brought Israel up out of Egypt, and by a prophet was he kept. 15. Ephraim hath provoked to anger most bitterly: therefore shall his blood be left upon him, and his reproach shall his Lord return unto him.
13 1. When Ephraim spake, there was trembling;
he exalted himself in Israel: but when he became guilty in Baal, he died. 2. And now they sin more and more, and have made them molten images of their silver, even idols according to their own understanding, all of them the work of the craftsmen: they say of them, Let the men that sacrifice kiss the calves. 3. Therefore they shall be as the morning cloud, and as the dew that passeth early away, as the chaff that is driven with the whirlwind out of the threshing-floor, and as the smoke out of the chimney. 4. Yet
I am the Lord thy God from the land of Egypt;
and thou knowest no god but me, and beside me there is no saviour. 5. I did know thee in the wilderness, in the land of great drought. 6. According to their pasture, so were they filled;
they were filled, and their heart was exalted:
therefore have they forgotten me. 7. Therefore

2. kiss the calves. See I Kings XIX, 18. Kissing an idol as an act of religious homage!

3. morning cloud. Figures of speech to represent the swift and complete extinction of the Northern Kingdom. The morning cloud which passes as one observes it, the chaff scattered by the whirlwind, the smoke of the chimney—all leave no trace behind. So shall it be with the Kingdom of Israel. The prophecy was fulfilled within 20 years.

2–10. A Desperate Call to Repentance

2. return unto the Lord. God's love and mercy are unending. Even after the pronouncement of doom, there is Hope and Forgiveness to repentant Israel.

3. take with you words. God does not require gifts or sacrifices, but sincere confession and penitent words expressing the resolve to amend (Midrash).

4. Asshur shall not save us. The people will no longer put their trust in alliances with foreign idol-worshipping nations—Assyria or Egypt.

will not ride upon horses. A reference to the help looked for from Egypt. (See I Kings x, 28 ; Isaiah xxx and xxxi).

5–7. God's gracious and loving reply to those words of repentance and faith. The blessings that will follow Israel's spiritual regeneration.

6. blossom as the lily. Israel shall be as the lily, a symbol of beauty and fruitfulness ; but his roots shall be deep and unmovable as Lebanon.

7. his smell as Lebanon. On the lower slopes of Lebanon are aromatic shrubs, lavender and myrtle (Song of Songs, iv, 4).

8. shall return; they shall revive as the corn. Better, " They shall again make corn to grow " (AJ).

2. O Israel, return unto the Lord thy God;
for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity. 3. Take with you words, and return unto the Lord: say unto him, Take away all iniquity, and accept that which is good: so will we render as bullocks
the offering of our lips. 4. Asshur shall not save us; we will not ride upon horses: neither will we say any more to the work of our hands, Ye are our gods: for in thee the fatherless findeth mercy. 5. I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely: for mine anger is turned away from him. 6. I will be as the dew unto Israel: he shall blossom as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon. 7. His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon. 8. They that dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the corn, and blossom as the vine: the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon. 9. Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols? I have answered, and will regard him: I am like a green fir tree; from me is thy fruit found.
10. Who is wise, and he shall understand these things? prudent, and he shall know them? for the ways of the Lord are right, and the just shall walk in them; but transgressors shall fall therein.

Chapter XIV, 2–10, is appropriately enough the Haftorah for the Sabbath of Penitence, שבת שובה, lit. "The Sabbath of O Israel, return unto the Lord." The very term, Teshubah, i.e. "a turning away from sin and a turning towards God," is taken from the word שובה in its opening verse. The doctrine of Repentance which is founded on it, is of fundamental importance in Judaism.

VAYYETZE (FOR SEPHARDIM) | VAYYISHLACH (FOR ASHKENAZIM)

Hosea XI, 7–XII, 12

Hosea's is the message of the unwearying love of God to Israel which reached its fullest expression in the cry "O Israel, return unto the Lord thy God." In this Haftorah, he interweaves incidents from the life of Jacob in the Sedrah in order to recall what Israel was intended to be, in contrast with the degeneracy of contemporary Israel. The Prophet's whole soul goes out in sympathy for his People;

10. God's message shall stir the hearts of Israel. The figure of the lion, roaring to call his young, represents God calling His people out of captivity.

trembling. With contrition and joy.

11. as a dove. Noted for its swiftness, which shall characterise Israel's return.

Chapter XII

From this vision of a happier future the Prophet returns to the sad conditions of the present.

2. feedeth on wind. "Striveth after wind" (AJ). Vain and fruitless efforts, resulting in "lies and desolation"; a telling summary of the results of the foreign alliances.

oil. Representing the wealth which the last King, Hoshea, sent to Egypt for help against Assyria.

4. In order to move them to repentance, the Prophet reminds the people of the wrestling in prayer of their ancestor Jacob, and of God's acceptance of him.

with God. Better, "With a godlike being" (AJ); an angel, as is evident from the very next verse.

of thee: and I will not come in wrath. 10. They shall walk after the Lord, who shall roar like a lion: for he shall roar, and the children shall come trembling from the west. 11. They shall come trembling as a bird out of Egypt, and as a dove out of the land of Assyria: and I will make them to dwell in their houses, saith the Lord.
12 1. Ephraim compasseth me about with falsehood, and the house of Israel with deceit: and Judah is yet unstedfast with God, and with the Holy One who is faithful. 2. Ephraim feedeth on wind, and followeth after the east wind: he continually multiplieth lies and desolation; and they make a covenant with Assyria, and oil is carried into Egypt. 3. The Lord hath also a controversy with Judah, and will punish Jacob according to his ways; according to his doings will he recompense him. 4. In the womb he took his brother by the heel; and in his manhood he strove with God: 5. yea, he had power over the angel, and prevailed: he wept, and made supplication unto him: he found him at Beth-el, and there he spake with us; 6. for the Lord is the God of hosts; the Lord is his memorial. 7.
Therefore turn thou to thy God: keep mercy

5. he wept. The subject is Jacob.

spake with us. In speaking to Jacob, God as it were spake also to his descendants.

6. the Lord is his memorial. i.e. His Name. The same now as then. As He received Jacob, so will He receive Israel; therefore, "turn to thy God."

7. keep mercy and judgement. This sums up the teaching

8 וּמִשְׁפָּט שְׁמֹר וְקַוֵּה אֶל־אֱלֹהֶיךָ תָּמִיד׃ כְּנַעַן בְּיָדוֹ מֹאזְנֵי
9 מִרְמָה לַעֲשֹׁק אָהֵב׃ וַיֹּאמֶר אֶפְרַיִם אַךְ עָשַׁרְתִּי מָצָאתִי

of Hosea. "Justice" (judgement) alone is not sufficient. Mercy, loving sympathy towards our fellowmen, must go with it; and mercy must precede it.

8. trafficker. lit. "Canaanite." From the call to repentance, the Prophet again returns to the evil-doing of his day. Israel's ideal is now Canaan's—to get rich. "Canaanite" had become a synonym for "trafficker," from the low repute of the Phoenician (Canaanitish) merchant for honesty.

9. Ephraim's answer. He boasts of his wealth, and callously maintains it has been obtained honestly—or that any trifling lapses in his methods cannot be accounted as sins. He does not perceive that, apart from his methods of acquisition, his reliance on material possessions and absorption in amassing them, have blinded the moral and spiritual sense within him. Israel has become Canaan, and yet was quite unconscious of it!

10. to dwell in tents. "The tent-life of the wilderness was a trial and pain for which the settlement in the Promised Land was readily exchanged. But it was also a blessing and a revelation, a walking in mystery and wonder, the Divine Presence always felt and often manifest. The Feast of Tabernacles was the yearly remembrance of this wonderful pilgrim experience" (Horton). Israel must go back to captivity and begin his discipline over again, as when he came out of Egypt.

11. In vain did the Prophets convey the Divine will in visions and similitudes. They failed to bring Israel to repentance.

and judgement, and wait on thy God continually.
8. He is a trafficker, the balances of deceit are in his hand: he loveth to oppress. 9. And Eph-raim said, Surely I am become rich, I have found me wealth: in all my labours they shall find in me none iniquity that were sin. 10. But I am the Lord thy God from the land of Egypt;
I will yet again make thee to dwell in tents, as in the days of the solemn feast. 11. I have also spoken unto the prophets, and I have multiplied visions; and by the ministry of the prophets have I used similitudes. 12. Is Gilead iniquity? they are altogether vanity; in Gilgal they sacrifice bullocks: yea, their altars shall be as heaps in the furrows of the field.

12. References to the heathen practices at Gilgal, following the ill example of neighbouring Gilead on the other side of the Jordan. The meaning seems to be: "In Gilead there are iniquity and falsehood; they sacrifice to demons in Gilgal; their altars shall become stone-heaps in the furrows of the fields." They that make the idols become like unto them.

VAYYISHLACH (FOR SEPHARDIM)

The Book of Obadiah

The prophecy of Obadiah is directed against Edom, the nation descended from Esau. It thus connects with the Sedrah, reflecting the opposition between the two brothers in the story of Jacob and Esau. The bitter enmity of the Edomites to Israel was particularly inexcusable, because of their common descent. The Prophet instances the cruelty of the Edomites in the day of Israel's ruin. Apart, however, from the denunciation of unbrotherliness wherever exhibited, the book has a wider application. Other nations in later times played the cruel role of Edom towards Israel. Against these too, according to our commentators, Obadiah prophetically inveighs and predicts Israel's triumph over them. The forces of evil will never destroy Israel, because Israel's Faith, and the Truth enshrined in it, are eternal.

1. we have heard. "We," i.e. other Prophets, who also denounced Edom; see especially Jer. XLIX, 7–12.

3. the pride of thine heart hath deceived thee. Their previous

THE BOOK OF OBADIAH

1. The vision of Obadiah.

Thus saith the Lord God concerning Edom: We have heard tidings from the Lord, and an ambassador is sent among the nations, saying, Arise ye, and let us rise up against her in battle.
2. Behold, I have made thee small among the nations; thou art greatly despised. 3. The pride of thine heart hath deceived thee, O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, whose habitation is high; that saith in his heart, Who shall bring me down to the ground? 4. Though thou mount on high as the eagle, and though thy nest be set among the stars, I will bring thee down from thence, saith the Lord. 5. If thieves came to thee, if robbers by night, (how art thou cut off!) would they not steal till they had enough? if grapegatherers came to thee, would they not leave some gleaning grapes? 6. How are the things of Esau searched out! how are his hidden treasures sought up! 7. All the men of thy confederacy have driven thee out on thy way, even to the successes, and their belief that they could not be dislodged from their invulnerable position.

clefts of the rock. Edom occupied a mountainous strip to the South of Palestine. Its rocky valleys were fertile and difficult of access to outsiders. The ruins of its capital, Petra, the mysterious, secluded city with its thousand caves, have come down to our day.

4. Their pride defies God. So does all pride.

5. The meaning is that ordinary thieves and grape-gleaners will leave something behind. Not so those who will fall upon Edom. They will destroy everything.

7. Not merely enemies—but their own familiar friends shall be against them.

8. wise men of Edom. Edom's reputation for wisdom and shrewdness was proverbial. The story of Job was enacted in Edom.

9. Teman. Probably the north part of Edom; used for Edom as a whole.

10–15. The crowning cruelty of Edom to his brother Jacob, his malice when Jerusalem fell. Instead of helping his brother, or at least standing aside, Edom took part in the looting, and in the slaughter of the inhabitants (Ps. cxxxvii, 3).

Shall I not in that day, saith the Lord, destroy the wise men out of Edom, and understanding out of the mount of Esau? 9. And thy mighty men, O Teman, shall be dismayed, to the end that every one may be cut off from the mount of Esau by slaughter. 10. For the violence done to thy brother Jacob shame shall cover thee, and thou shalt be cut off for ever. 11. In the day that thou stoodest aloof in the day that strangers carried away his substance, and foreigners entered into his gates, and cast lots upon Jerusalem, even thou wast as one of them. 12. But look not thou on the day of thy brother in the day of his disaster, and rejoice not over the children of Judah in the day of their destruction; neither speak proudly in the day of distress. 13. Enter not into the gate of my people in the day of their calamity; yea, look not thou on their affliction in the day of their calamity, neither lay ye hands on their substance in the day of their calamity. 14. And stand thou not in the crossway, to cut off those of his that escape; and deliver not up those of his that remain in the day of distress.

disaster. lit. "strange, unwonted fortune."

16. ye have drunk. i.e. the Israelites, have drunk of the cup of suffering.

shall be as though they had not been. This verse is an indictment of the "gospel of hate" wherever held, whether by nations or individuals. They who nourish and practise it are in the end self-destroyers.

17. possess their possessions. The house of Jacob shall not finally lack anything which is rightly theirs. The Heb. word for "possessions" is rare; the national and religious values of Israel are singularly precious.

19–20. Generally meaning that the returning exiles shall occupy a territory enlarged on all sides.

20. Sepharad. Some locality in Babylonia or Asia Minor. Targum Jonathan, however, and all subsequent Jewish writers, understand by that name, Spain; hence Jews hailing from the Iberian Peninsula are called Sephardim.

21. saviours. A wider sweep here than even Israel's

15. For the day of the Lord is near upon all the nations: as thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee; thy dealing shall return upon thine own head.
16. For as ye have drunk upon my holy mountain,
so shall all the nations drink continually, yea,
they shall drink, and swallow down, and shall be as though they had not been. 17. But in mount Zion there shall be those that escape, and it shall be holy; and the house of Jacob shall possess their possessions. 18. And the house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau for stubble, and they shall burn among them, and devour them; and there shall not be any remaining to the house of Esau; for the Lord hath spoken it. 19. And they of the South shall possess the mount of Esau; and they of the lowland the Philistines:
and they shall possess the field of Ephraim, and the field of Samaria: and Benjamin shall possess Gilead. 20. And the captivity of this host of the children of Israel, which are among the Canaanites, shall possess even unto Zarephath; and the captivity of Jerusalem, which is in Sepharad, shall possess the cities of the South. 21. And saviours shall come up on mount Zion to judge the mount of Esau; and the kingdom shall be the Lord's.

triumphant vindication. For it is not merely Israel's supremacy that the Prophet sees in his vision of saviours climbing Mount Zion but the supremacy of God. There shall be no more causeless enmity (שנאת חנם) between nation and nation, between man and man. Such causeless enmity Edom stands for. It shall cease. And then humanity will be nearer the time when "the kingdom shall be the Lord's."

VAYYESHEV

Amos II, 6–III, 8

Amos, a herdsman and dresser of sycamore trees, felt the stirring of the spirit of the Lord while pursuing his lonely calling amid the hills of Judea. He is an older contemporary of Hosea, and is the first of the literary Prophets. The master-word of existence to Amos is Righteousness; which to him, as to his successors, means holiness of life in the individual and the triumph of right in the world. Righteousness is the basis of national as of individual life. Without it, all else crumbles to ruin. For God is righteousness. He is the God of all families of the earth; and all of them alike He judges according to their humane dealings towards their fellowmen. Man's inhumanity to man, Amos proclaims to be the cardinal sin. As to Israel, it is God's chosen people; but this great privilege carried no immunity against Divine punishment for wrong-doing. On the contrary. Just because Israel is God's people the higher must be its standard of life; and the greater its guilt and punishment, if and when it falls away from righteousness.

After pronouncing judgment on the surrounding peoples for their violation of the dictates of universal morality and their participation in barbarous practices, Amos turns to the Northern Kingdom of Israel, judging its inhabitants with the same standard and in the very same words as he did the heathens.

IX. VAYYESHEV

Amos II, 6–III, 8

6. Thus saith the Lord : For three transgressions of Israel, yea, for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof ; because they have sold the righteous for silver, and the needy for a pair of shoes : 7. that pant after the dust of the earth on the head of the poor, and turn aside the way of the meek : and a man and his father will

6–8. Israel's crimes are no less heinous. It sins against justice, mercy and purity.

6. For three transgressions of Israel, yea, for four, I will not turn away the punishment. Three or four—a phrase signifying an indefinite number, and illustrating the mercy of God. For the first, second, and even third transgression, He holds His hand, waiting for the transgressor to cease wrong-doing. It is not till the fourth sin, that His long-suffering is at an end (Kimchi).

because they have sold the righteous. Better, "because they sell the righteous." The innocent are declared guilty for a bribe ; and rich men sell into slavery poor honest people whose only crime was that they were in debt to them, sometimes only to the value of a pair of shoes. This sale of the innocent man (צדיק) gives the connection with the story of Joseph, spoken of by the Rabbis as הצדיק , the innocent victim of hatred and slander.

7. that pant. So great is the cupidity of the rich and powerful that they covet the most insignificant possession still left to the poor, even the dust on the poor man's head sprinkled there as a sign of mourning—ironically adds the Prophet.

turn aside the way of the meek. "Humble souls they harry" (Moffat). The word "way" here means the right. They pervert the justice of those who are too weak to defend themselves against their cunning.

11. Nazirites. True and inspired men are among a nation's most precious possessions. The Nazirite, who vowed to refrain from wine (Numbers VI, 2–21), stood for self-control, and by his very existence rebuked the intemperance of the day. So he was basely urged to break his vow.

go unto the same maid, to profane my holy name: 8. and they lay themselves down beside every altar upon clothes taken in pledge, and in the house of their God they drink the wine of such as have been fined. 9. Yet destroyed I the Amorite before them, whose height was like the height of the cedars, and he was strong as the oaks; yet I destroyed his fruit from above, and his roots from beneath. 10. Also I brought you up out of the land of Egypt, and led you forty years in the wilderness, to possess the land of the Amorite. 11. And I raised up of your sons for prophets, and of your young men for Nazirites. Is it not even thus, O ye children of Israel? saith the Lord. 12. But ye gave the Nazirites wine to drink; and commanded the prophets, saying, Prophesy not. 13. Behold, I will press you in your place, as a cart presseth that is full of sheaves. 14. And flight shall perish from the swift, and the strong shall not strengthen his force, neither shall the mighty deliver himself: 15. neither shall he stand that handleth the bow; and he that is swift of foot shall not deliver himself: neither shall he that rideth the horse deliver himself: 16. and he that is courageous among the mighty shall flee away naked in that day, saith the Lord.

12. prophesy not. The experience of Amos himself, VIII, 13.

13. As a cart overloaded with its harvest creaks under the weight; so a people overladen with sin cannot escape the consequences of its sins. The prophecy was fulfilled by the invasion of Assyria.

v. 8. קמץ בלא אס״ף

Chapter III

2. therefore. The most famous "therefore" in history. Israel is the chosen of God. Therefore, God demands higher, not lower, standards of goodness from Israel, and will punish lapses more severely. The higher the privilege, the graver the responsibility. The greater the opportunity, the most inexcusable the failure to use it.

3–8. These verses give the ground on which Amos claims to be heard.

3. A declaration of the Prophet's Divine authority. The Prophet has spoken, only because God has inspired him. God and the Prophet are met on this sad task.

4–6. Figures of speech illustrating the cause and effect stated in the previous verse, drawn from experiences in the Prophet's earlier calling as herdsman. If the roar of the lion is heard in the desert, it is because he has seized his prey. The bird has fallen because the snare has caught it. The tocsin is sounded in the city because the enemy is at the gate. So likewise disaster does not overwhelm a people without a cause.

3 1. Hear this word that the Lord hath spoken against you, O children of Israel, against the whole family which I brought up out of the land of Egypt, saying, 2. You only have I known of all the families of the earth: therefore I will visit upon you all your iniquities. 3. Shall two walk together, except they have agreed? 4. Will a lion roar in the forest, when he hath no prey? will a young lion cry out of his den, if he have taken nothing? 5. Can a bird fall in a snare upon the earth, where no gin is set for him? shall a snare spring up from the ground, and have taken nothing at all? 6. Shall the trumpet be blown in a city, and the people not be afraid? shall evil befall a city, and the Lord hath not done it? 7. Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets. 8. The lion hath roared, who will not fear? the Lord God hath spoken, who can but prophesy?

7. he revealeth his secret. The watcher on the tower at the entrance of the city who sees attacking troops advancing will sound the alarm that arouses and terrifies the people. Israel cannot plead lack of warning. The Prophet is the true Watcher on the tower who would deliver from threatening evils by his summons to repentance. And he speaks because God is acting within, and irresistibly compels him.

8. who can but prophesy. In a modified sense, the voice of God will find expression in the utterances of all who hear and understand. His voice speaks through the pages of our Scriptures; and, if we would listen and understand and perform them, surely would "all the Lord's people be prophets."

I Kings III, 15–IV, 1

In both Sedrah and Haftorah, kings have dreams which are more than dreams. In the Sedrah, Joseph unravels the mystery to the Egyptian sovereign, first humbly ascribing his power of understanding to God, the Source of all wisdom. In the Haftorah, all Israel join the king in acknowledging that the wisdom which the youthful monarch possesses is of God. In the spirit of reverence, Solomon had asked not for long life or riches or honour, but for power to serve others, for an undertsanding heart to discharge the duties and responsibilities of his position, and to advance the welfare

15. And Solomon awoke, and, behold, it was a dream: and he came to Jerusalem, and stood before the ark of the covenant of the Lord,
and offered up burnt offerings, and offered
peace offerings, and made a feast to all his servants.
16. Then came there two women, that were harlots, unto the king, and stood before him. 17.
And the one woman said, Oh my lord, I and this woman dwell in one house; and I was delivered of a child with her in the house. 18. And it came to pass the third day after I was delivered, that this woman was delivered also; and we were together; there was no stranger with us in the house, save we two in the house. 19. And this woman's child died in the night; because she overlaid it. 20. And she arose at midnight, and took my son from beside me, while thine hand-maid slept, and laid in her bosom, and laid her dead child in my bosom. 21. And when I

18. no stranger. None but they could ever know the truth. Observation on the part of a judge must in a case of this nature be supplemented by extraordinary intuition.

21. considered it. "Had looked well at it" (AJ).

"To be the successor of David was a great inheritance, but a much greater responsibility. Solomon was eighteen years old when he ascended the throne. The fact that, in rose in the morning to give my child suck, behold, it was dead: but when I had considered it in the morning, behold, it was not my son, which I did bear. 22. And the other woman said, Nay;

but the living is my son, and the dead is thy son. And this said, No; but the dead is thy son, and the living is my son. Thus they spake before the king. 23. Then said the king, The one saith, This is my son that liveth, and thy son is the dead: and the other saith, Nay; but thy son is the dead, and my son is the living. 24. And the king said, Fetch me a sword. And they brought a sword before the king. 25. And the king said, Divide the living child in two, and give half to the one, and half to the other. 26. Then spake the woman whose the living child was unto the king, for her bowels yearned upon her son, and she said, Oh my lord, give her the living child, and in no wise slay it. But the other said, It shall be neither mine nor thine; divide it. 27. Then the king answered and said, Give her the living child, and in no wise slay it: she is the mother thereof. 28. And all Israel heard of the judgement which the king had judged; and they feared the king: for they saw that the wisdom of God was in him, to do judgement.

4 1. And king Solomon was king over all Israel.

spite of this, he maintained his dominion for forty years under the most trying conditions, is of itself evidence of his great qualities. If David created an Israelitish nation, Solomon created an Israelitish state. He extended immensely the intellectual horizon of Israel. He placed Israel in the rank of the great nations" (Cornill).

v. 16. 19. חבריו ק׳

VAYYIGGASH

Ezekiel XXXVII, 15–28

Ezekiel, the son of a priest, was among those who were carried off into exile in Babylon. He became one of the spiritual agencies that kept Israel's soul alive in those years of despair. He is at once priest and prophet, preacher and writer, inspirer of the nation and pastor of individual souls. A characteristic feature of his teaching is his insistence on individual responsibility. He is the great preacher of Repentance, and of the Divine Forgiveness to those who in sincerity seek God's pardon. "When the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive." When the members of the House of Israel shall thus be purified, Israel would be restored, and become a Holy People amid whom God would be seen to dwell.

XI. VAYYIGGASH

Ezekiel XXXVII, 15–28

15. The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying, 16. And thou, son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel, his companions; then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph,
the stick of Ephraim, and of all the house of Israel his companions: 17. and join them for thee
one to another into one stick, that they may become one in thine hand. 18. And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not shew us what thou meanest by these? 19. say unto them: Thus saith the Lord God: Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes
of Israel his companions; and I will put them together with him unto the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand. 20. And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand before their eyes.

More than any other Prophet, Ezekiel makes vivid use of allegory, symbol and parable to illustrate his message. The first half of this chapter (v. 1–14) is his Vision of the Valley of Dry Bones. The Prophet sees the nation dead as it were, with all fires extinct in the dreary winter of Exile; and then beholds Israel revived through the Spirit of Prophecy, rising to renewed life and glory. In the second half of the chapter v. 15–28, which constitutes our Haftorah, the Prophet pictures the continuation of this national resurrection by the definite announcement of the re-union of the two kingdoms of Judah and Joseph (the Northern Kingdom of Israel). This is symbolised by the union of the two sticks and is a reflex of the picture given in the Sedrah, of Joseph and his Brethren united after long years of estrangement.

16. The symbolic action of the Prophet is intended to secure attention to his message. One stick, to represent the Kingdom of Judah (two tribes); the other, to represent the Kingdom of Israel (ten tribes). As here, the latter kingdom is often called Ephraim (the name of one of the two sons of Joseph).

18–22. The people ask the meaning of Ezekiel's action, which is the re-union of the two kingdoms into one, as they were under Saul, David and Solomon.

23. The result is not merely political re-union, but spiritual regeneration. Israel united—but united in a return to God and in faithful performance of His Law. Then would they deserve the name of "God's People."

21. And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God :
Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the nations, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land : 22. and I will make them one nation in the land, upon the mountains of Israel ;
and one king shall be king to them all : and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all : 23. neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions :
but I will save them out of all their dwelling places, wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them : so shall they be my people, and I will be their God. 24. And my servant David shall be king over them ; and they all shall have one shepherd : they shall also walk in my judgements, and observe my statutes, and do them. 25. And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers dwelt ; and they shall dwell therein, they, and their children, and their children's children, for ever : and David my servant shall be their prince for ever. 26. Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them : it shall be an everlasting covenant with them : and I will place them,
and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore. 27. My tabernacle also shall be over them ; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. 28.
And the nations shall know that I am the Lord

I Kings, II, 1–12.

1–4. In the Sedrah, the dying Patriarch, assembling his sons, speaks to them last words of guidance and admonition, and "blesses them each one according to his blessing." In the Haftorah, David feeling his end near, gives his son the best of blessings in words which point the way of life that sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore.

XII. VAYYECHI

I Kings II, 1–12

2 1. Now the days of David drew nigh that he should die; and he charged Solomon his son, saying, 2. I go the way of all the earth: be thou strong therefore, and shew thyself a man; 3. and keep the charge of the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways, to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgements, and his testimonies, according to that which is written in the law of Moses, that thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest, and whithersoever thou turnest thyself: 4. that the Lord may establish his word which he spake concerning me, saying, If thy children take heed to their way, to walk before me in truth with all their heart and with all their soul, there shall not fail thee (said he) a man on the throne of Israel. 5. Moreover thou knowest also what Joab the son of Zeruiah did for every son of Israel. "Be thou strong, therefore, and show thyself a man; and keep the charge of the Lord thy God, to walk in His ways, to keep His statutes and His commandments." Wherever life be lived, whether in palace, mansion or cottage, the Law of God alone can give life reality, and true value and permanence to human strivings.

6. do therefore accord to thy wisdom. Joab, and Shimei (v. 8) were dangerous men, and David must put Solomon on his guard against them. Solomon need not act precipitately. Both men, true to their nature, would sooner or later commit themselves, and for that reason give Solomon just cause for dealing effectively with them.

7. The dying king cherishes tender gratitude for kindnesses shown him.

5–9. The difficulty created by these verses cannot be ignored. As part of a last charge to a beloved son, they shock one's finer feelings. No admirer of David's otherwise heroic and magnanimous character can read without a pang that he passes into eternity with vengeance in his heart and on his lips.

Is there any extenuation or explanation ? David charges his son to carry out the Divine laws. The thought then flashes through his mind that as the guardian of justice in the land, he had grievously failed inasmuch as he allowed the perpetration of treacherous murders committed by Joab to go unpunished. It was a blot on his government, and the thought weighed on him at this hour. Unless justice, even-handed and impartial, was seen to rule in the highest quarter, no kingdom could be established.

A note of warning must be uttered. Whatever reasons of state may be advanced in mitigation of David's action, it is not an act for imitation in the life of the ordinary individual.

unto me, even what he did to the two captains of the hosts of Israel, unto Abner the son of Ner, and unto Amasa the son of Jether, whom he slew, and shed the blood of war in peace, and put the blood of war upon his girdle that was about his loins, and in his shoes that were on his feet. 6. Do therefore according to thy wisdom, and let not his hoar head go down to the grave in peace. 7. But shew kindness unto the sons of Barzillai the Gileadite, and let them be of those that eat at thy table: for so they came to me when I fled from Absalom thy brother. 8. And, behold, there is with thee Shimei the son of Gera, the Benjamite, of Bahurim, who cursed me with a grievous curse in the day when I went to Mahanaim: but he came down to meet me at Jordan, and I sware to him by the Lord, saying, I will not put thee to death with the sword. 9. Now therefore hold him not guiltless, for thou art a wise man; and thou wilt know what thou oughtest to do unto him,

The temptation to take vengeance is never so insidious as when it comes cloaked under high-sounding names; as when, for example, we say that it is in the interests of justice that we satisfy those feelings of vindictiveness. The Divine command "Thou shalt not avenge nor bear any grudge" (Lev. XIX) is the safest guiding principle for prince and people alike. There is recorded another Farewell Speech of David (I Chron. XXVIII and XXIX) and we take our leave of him with a few verses from that nobler utterance. He lays the solemn charge upon his son to complete the Temple which he was not permitted to begin, and in a prayer of fine humility and faith he commends his son and his children to the eternal God of Israel. "As for me, it was in mine heart to build an house of rest for the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord . . . and I had made ready for the building.

SABBATH CHANUKAH, I

Zechariah II, 14–IV, 7

Zechariah was one of the exiles who returned from Babylon when Cyrus promulgated his decree of Restoration in the year 537. He began his prophecies about 17 years afterwards. Disastrous seasons and the hostility of neighbours had discouraged the people, and all operations in connection with rebuilding the Temple had long ceased.

At this juncture the Prophets Haggai and Zechariah appeared, roused the people from their despondency and fired them to resume the work which had been suspended.

grave with blood.
10. And David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David. 11. And the days that David reigned over Israel were forty years:
seven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty
and three years reigned he in Jerusalem. 12.
And Solomon sat upon the throne of David his father; and his kingdom was established greatly.

In our Haftorah, Zechariah assures the people of the Divine assistance in their work of rebuilding the Temple and of national rehabilitation. "Not by might, nor by power, but by My spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts"—these words of Zechariah may be said to proclaim the lesson of all Jewish history; it is certainly the Prophetic teaching of the Maccabean Festival with which his name is linked in the synagogue service. Even a brief resumé of Maccabean events (such as is given at the end of the second Haftorah for Chanukah, p. 526) will show the appropriateness of these chapters for the anniversary of the re-dedication of the Temple after its defilement of the Syrians.

14. I will dwell in the midst of thee. Through the visible symbol of the restored Temple.

17. be silent. All hostile efforts—now on the part of the Samaritans and other opponents, and later any human opposition to God's ultimate purpose—shall fail.

Chapter III

Zechariah's messages are chiefly conveyed by means of visions. The object of the vivid visions, so dramatically described in the remainder of the Haftorah, is to banish the disturbing thoughts and fears which were depressing the people.

1. Joshua. The first high priest after the Restoration. He was prominently associated with Zerubbabel, the then Governor of Judah, in the erection of the Second Temple. Zerubbabel was the grandson of Jehoiachin, the last independent king of Judah, who had been carried away captive to Babylon in the year 597.

the Adversary. Heb. "Satan." One who opposes with false accusations. Satan accuses Joshua and the people, of sinfulness, and that they are, therefore, unworthy to rebuild the Temple. Perhaps a similar feeling, arising out of their disappointments, depressed the people. But Satan is rebuked; and the returned exiles are assured that their fears are groundless.

inherit Judah as his portion in the holy land,
and shall yet choose Jerusalem. 17. Be silent, all flesh, before the Lord: for he is waked up out of his holy habitation.
3 1. And he shewed me Joshua the high priest standing before the angel of the Lord, and the Adversary standing at his right hand to be his adversary. 2. And the Lord said unto Satan, The Lord rebuke thee, O Adversary; yea, the Lord that hath chosen Jerusalem rebuke thee: is not this a brand plucked out of the fire? 3. Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments, and stood before the angel. 4. And he answered and spake unto those that stood before him, saying, Take the filthy garments from off him.
And unto him he said, Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, and I will clothe thee with rich apparel. 5. And I said, Let them set a fair mitre upon his head. So they set a fair mitre upon his head, and clothed

6. protested. i.e. solemnly assured.

7. if thou wilt walk in my ways. The first condition of the priesthood is that, not only in the Temple but in his own life, the priest shall observe the Divine requirements of conduct, and always remember to Whose service he is consecrated.

that stand by. Among these attendant angels (v. 4). Targum and Kimchi explain " after death," and take it as an allusion to the immortality of the soul.

8. thy fellows. The assistant priests.

men which are a sign. Of God's favour. The restored priesthood is a pledge of the coming of the Messianic Kingdom. Humble and modest as were the beginnings of the Temple, they were portents which contained within them the pledge of the fulfilment of the complete Redemption.

the Branch Or, " the Shoot." According to Rashi, Zechariah here means Zerubbabel, who as the civic leader will complete, with Joshua as the spiritual leader, the rehabilitated state. A comparison with VI, 12 supports this interpretation.

9. for behold the stone. The head or coping stone of the Temple (see last verse of the Haftorah, " head stone ") which in this vision is set before Joshua to symbolise the certainty of the rebuilding.

him with garments; and the angel of the Lord stood by. 6. And the angel of the Lord protested unto Joshua, saying, 7. Thus saith the Lord of hosts: If thou wilt walk in my ways, and if thou wilt keep my charge, then thou also shalt judge my house, and shalt also keep my courts, and I will give thee a place of access among these that stand by. 8. Hear now, O Joshua the high priest, thou and thy fellows that sit before thee; for they are men which are a sign: for, behold, I will bring forth my servant the Branch. 9. For behold, the stone that I have set before Joshua; upon one stone are seven eyes: behold, I will engrave the graving thereof, saith the Lord of hosts, and I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day. 10. In that day, saith the Lord of hosts, shall ye call every man his neighbour under the vine and under the fig tree.

upon one stone seven eyes. i.e. upon every stone in the Temple there shall be "seven eyes," conveying the idea of the very special watchfulness and care that God will exercise over His house (Kimchi).

The same commentator quotes the interesting opinion of his father that in the number "seven" we may see a reference to the seven great leaders of the period to whom the Jewish rebirth was due: Joshua, Ezra, Nehemiah, Zerubbabel, Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi.

I will engrave the graving thereof. As the engraving completes and beautifies a work, so God assures the people that the Temple will be completed to every detail (Kimchi).

I will remove the iniquity of that land. Sin, the chief cause of sorrow and suffering, will be removed with the coming of the new Temple.

10. shall ye call. i.e. invite. A picture of general felicity and security.

Chapter IV

Another vision. The Prophet's thoughts now turn to Zerubbabel, and the need to encourage him in his work. He would further enforce the lesson that God alone is the source of all Light, as well as power, to rulers and people alike.

2. candlestick. Such as stood in the Second Temple.

seven pipes. One to each lamp carrying the supply of oil.

3. two olive trees. Representing Joshua and Zerubbabel, who were appointed respectively to the spiritual and civil leadership, and by whom the work in hand would be accomplished ; see v. 12 (Kimchi).

6. this is the word. i.e. the message of the Lord to Zerubbabel. As the lights are controlled by an unseen agency, so behind Zerubbabel and his allotted work is the invisible spirit and help of God. All the difficulties in the way will disappear ; and, in spite of the hostility and mockings of the people who have hitherto opposed, he will complete the building of the Temple, "not by might, nor by power, but by My spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."

4 1. And the angel that talked with me came again, and waked me, as a man that is wakened out of his sleep. 2. And he said unto me, What seest thou? And I said, I have seen, and behold, a candlestick all of gold, with its bowl upon
the top of it, and its seven lamps thereon; there are seven pipes to each of the lamps, which are upon the top thereof: 3. and two olive trees by it, one upon the right side of the bowl, and the other upon the left side thereof. 4. And I answered and spake to the angel that talked with me, saying, What are these, my lord? 5. Then the angel that talked with me answered and said unto me, Knowest thou not what these be?
And I said, No, my lord. 6. Then he answered and spake unto me, saying, This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel, saying, Not by might,
nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts. 7. Who art thou, O great mountain?
before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain: and he shall bring forth the head stone with shoutings
of Grace, grace unto it.

7. who art thou, O great mountain. Repeating the above idea. Whatever obstacles may arise to hinder him, will all be overcome.

bring forth the head stone. Amid the joyful acclamations of the people when they see the Temple completed.

Grace, grace unto it. i.e. may God's grace and favour rest on it!

SABBATH CHANUKAH, II

I Kings VII, 40–50

Appropriately to Chanukah, the Festival of the Rededication of the Second Temple, this section contains a description of the appurtenances for the First Temple: also (v. 48–50) of the golden utensils for the interior of the House made under Solomon's supervision, and the consecrated gifts bequeathed by his father David (v. 50).

40. Hiram. A famous brass worker, the son of a Tyrian father, who was also a skilled artist, and an Israelitish mother.

XIV. SABBATH CHANUKAH, II

40. And Hiram made the lavers, and the shovels,
and the basons. So Hiram made an end of doing
all the work that he wrought for king Solomon
in the house of the Lord: 41. the two pillars, and
the two bowls of the chapiters that were on the top of the pillars; and the two networks to cover the two bowls of the chapiters that were
on the top of the pillars: 42. and the four hundred
pomegranates for the two networks; two rows
of pomegranates for each network, to cover the
two bowls of the chapiters that were upon the pillars; 43. and the ten bases, and the ten lavers on
the bases; 44. and the one sea, and the twelve oxen under the sea; 45. and the pots, and the
shovels, and the basons: even all these vessels,
which Hiram made for king Solomon, in the house of the Lord, were of burnished brass. 46. In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in
the clay ground between Succoth and Zarethan.
47. And Solomon left all the vessels unweighed,

44. and the one sea. An enormous circular vessel ten cubits (about 18 feet) in diameter and five cubits (about 9 feet) in depth. It was richly decorated, and was supported on the backs of twelve brazen oxen, three looking towards each of the cardinal points of the compass. See v. 23–26 of this chapter.

46. in the plains of Jordan. Hiram set up his foundry in the valley of Jordan at the spot where he found suitable soil ("clay ground") for his moulds.

between Succoth and Zarethan. Succoth was on the other, the east side of the river, in Gad. Zarethan was on the west side of Jordan, about 24 miles north of the Dead Sea.

To appreciate the significance of the Temple in the life of ancient Israel, we must continue reading the next chapter of the First Book of Kings, Solomon's Prayer of Dedication (set aside as the Haftorah for the first and eighth days of Tabernacles); or, better still, during Chanukah, the story of the Re-dedication of the Temple as told in the First Book of Maccabees. There is nothing finer in the whole history of heroism, or more soul-stirring in the annals of religion, than the account of this handful of Jewish warriors who were "prepared to live or die nobly" in order that the light of revealed truth and righteousness be not extinguished in a heathen world. The following is a selection from the first four chapters of I Maccabees :—

"And King Antiochus wrote to his whole kingdom, that all should be one people, and that each should forsake his own laws. And he sent letters unto Jerusalem and the cities of Judah that they should profane the Sabbaths and feasts, pollute the sanctuary, and build altars and temples and shrines for idols; and whosoever shall not do according to the word of the King, he shall die. And he appointed overseers over all the people, and he commanded the cities of Judah to sacrifice, city by city. And they did evil things in the land; and they made Israel to hide themselves in every place of refuge which they had. And they rent in pieces the Books of the Law which they found, and set them because they were exceeding many: the weight of the brass could not be found out. 48. And Solomon made all the vessels that were in the house of the Lord: the golden altar, and the table whereupon the shewbread was, of gold; 49. and the candlesticks, five on the right side, and five on the left, before the oracle, of pure gold; and the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs, of gold 50. and the cups, and the snuffers, and the basons, and the spoons, and the firepans, of pure gold; and the hinges, both for the doors of the inner house, the most holy place, and for the doors of the house, to wit, of the temple, of gold.

on fire. And wheresoever was found with any a Book of the Covenant, and if any consented to the Law, the king's sentence delivered him to death.

"And in those days rose up Mattathias, a priest from Jerusalem; and he dwelt at Modin. And he had five sons, John, Simon, Judah (who was called Maccabæus), Eleazar, Jonathan. And he saw the blasphemies that were committed in Judah and in Jerusalem, and Mattathias and his sons rent their clothes, and put on sackcloth, and mourned exceedingly.

"And the king's officers, that were enforcing the apostasy, came into the city Modin. And many of Israel came unto them, and Mattathias and his sons were gathered together. And the king's officers spake to Mattathias, saying, 'Thou art a ruler and an honourable and great man in this city, and strengthened with sons and brethren; now therefore come thou first and do the commandment of the king, as all nations have done, and the men of Judah, and they that remain in Jerusalem; so shalt thou and thy house be in the number of the king's friends, and thou and thy children shall be honoured with silver and gold, and many rewards.' And Mattathias answered and said with a loud voice, 'Though all the nations that are under the king's dominion obey him, and fall away every one from the religion of their fathers, yet will I and my sons and my brethren walk in the covenant of our fathers.' And Mattathias cried out in the city with a loud voice, saying, 'Whosoever is zealous for the Law, and maintaineth the Covenant, let him follow me.'

"Then were gathered together unto them every one that offered himself willingly for the Law. And all they that fled from the evils were added to them, and became a stay unto them. And they mustered a host, and pulled down the altars; and they pursued after the sons of pride, neither suffered they the sinner to triumph."

"And the days of Mattathias drew near that he should die, and his son Judah rose up in his stead. And all his brethren helped him, and they fought with gladness the battle of Israel. King Antiochus sent forty thousand footmen, and seven thousand horse to go into the land of Judaea, and to destroy it. And Judah, who was called Maccabaeus, said, 'Victory in battle standeth not in the multitude of a host, but strength is from Heaven. They come unto us in fulness of insolence and lawlessness, to destroy us and our wives and children: but we fight for our lives and our Law. It is better for us to die in battle, than to look upon the evils of our nation and the Sanctuary. Nevertheless, as may be the will in Heaven, so shall He do.' And they that were with Judah joined battle, and the heathens were discomfited when they saw the boldness of them that were with Judah, and how they were ready either to live or die nobly. And Judah and his brethren said, 'Behold, our enemies are discomfited, let us go up to cleanse the Sanctuary, and to dedicate it afresh.' And they built a new altar after the fashion of the former; and they built the Sanctuary and the inner parts of the House. And they made the holy vessels new, and they brought the candlestick, and the altar, and the table, into the Temple. On the five and twentieth day of the ninth month, which is the month Kislev, at what time manner of house will ye build unto me? and what place shall be my rest? 2. For all these things hath mine hand made, and so all these things came to be, saith the Lord: but to this and on what day the heathens had profaned it, even on that day was it dedicated afresh. And all the people fell upon their faces, and worshipped and gave praise unto Heaven."

SABBATH AND NEW MOON

Isaiah, LXVI

The Second Temple is nearing completion, and the Prophet corrects false ideas concerning the Temple building and the worship therein. He contrasts the faithful Israelites with the apostates, given to idolatrous practices, and doomed to extinction. The chapter concludes with the renewed assurance of the triumph of the Faithful Remnant, and the universal worship of the one God. Verse 23 that enshrines this hope in the phrase, "From one New Moon to another, and from one Sabbath to another," makes the section an appropriate Haftorah for this Sabbath.

1. What manner of house. God's presence cannot be limited to one spot. ("Behold heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain Thee; how much less this house that I have builded!" I Kings VIII, 27). The purpose of the Temple was to lead men to reverence and uprightness, and the sacrifices were to help the worshipper expel evil thoughts and desires from his heart, and burn them as burnt offerings on the altar (Kimchi). If these conditions did not exist, the Temple was not a house fit for God's glory.

2. all these things. i.e. heaven and earth came into existence at the word of God (Abarbanel).

will I look. Not to external splendours of the building or to the elaborate ceremonial within does God look, but to the existence of a humble and sincere piety among the worshippers who make their will subservient to God ("that trembleth at My word").

3. The lit. translation of the first part of this verse is: "The slaughterer of an ox, a slayer of a man; the sacrificer of the sheep, a breaker of a dog's neck; the offerer of an oblation—swines' blood, &c." This is often explained to mean that he who offers the statutory sacrifices but is not animated by a sincere spirit is no better than he who takes a leading part in some horrible and unholy cult involving human sacrifices. No Prophet, however, would be guilty of such an exaggeration. More probably, the Prophet has in mind those who combined outward observance of Jewish ceremonial with the destestable rites of some debased fetish-worship which existed among those left in Israel after the Assyrian conquest (II Kings, xvii, 33f). There is no reason, however, to assume that these heathen worshippers indulged, or were permitted by the Persian authorities to indulge, in human sacrifices. The words מכה איש only mean "striketh a man" (Ibn Ezra), and not "slayeth a man." The Heb. root of מכה is used for "inflicting stripes," and may therefore here refer to sacred flagellations or scourgings which, as is well known, formed part of many pagan secret cults. He that sacrificeth an ox

of a contrite spirit, and that trembleth at my word. 3. He that killeth an ox is as he that slayeth a man; he that sacrificeth a lamb, as
he that breaketh a dog's neck; he that offereth
a meal offering, as he that offereth swine's blood;
he that burneth frankincense, as he that blesseth
an idol: yea, they have chosen their own ways,
and their soul delighteth in their abominations;
4. I also will choose their mockings, and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called,
none did answer; when I spake, they did not
hear: but they did that which was evil in mine
eyes, and chose that wherein I delighted not.
5. Hear the word of the Lord, ye that tremble
at his word: Your brethren that hate you, that cast you out for my name's sake, have said, Let
the Lord be glorified, that we may see your joy; but they shall be ashamed. 6. A voice of tumult from the city, a voice from the temple,

at God's Temple, complains our Prophet, is at the same time acting as flagellator or sacred scourger at heathen mystery worship!

4. their mockings. Because they—the apostate and obstinate transgressors—have chosen to do that which mocks Me (v. 3), I will choose for them suffering that will mock their hopes.

their fears. i.e. the very things they fear, I will bring upon them.

5–6. Addressed to the faithful ("ye that tremble at My word") whose hopes are ridiculed by their adversaries.

5. your brethren. i.e. the semi-idolatrous schismatics who mocked and opposed the true worshippers of God.

cast you out. That refuse to associate with you (Cheyne). The Heb. root means, in later use, to excommunicate.

let the Lord be glorified . . joy. These are the taunting words of the irreligious and insolent opponents.

v. 8. כצ״ל

6. a voice of tumult. The Prophet already seems to hear the sounds of the coming judgment against the mockers.

7–14. The Prophet again breaks off with words of comfort and hope to the faithful community. Though ridiculed by their adversaries, great increase of population (v. 7), peace and prosperity (v. 12) shall come, and the enemy be destroyed.

7. Zion is the mother, and the verse describes the swift increase in her population through the re-inforcement of faithful children from all parts.

8. shall a land be born in one day. Emphasises the rapidity of this remarkable increase. It will seem as if Zion were regenerated in one day.

9. The work of Restoration and salvation shall be complete. God will not leave it unfinished.

10. A call to the children restored, and those still in Exile, to rejoice with Jerusalem.

all ye that mourn for her. All those in Exile, and those who since the Return have been depressed at the slow realisation of their hopes in Zion.

11. The figure of Zion as Mother is retained.

12. Peace and prosperity shall stream into Zion, like a river that overflows its banks.

a voice of the Lord that rendereth recompence
to his enemies. 7. Before she travailed, she brought forth; before her pain came, she was delivered of a man child. 8. Who hath heard such a thing? who hath seen such things? Shall
a land be born in one day? shall a nation be brought forth at once? for as soon as Zion
travailed, she brought forth her children. 9. Shall
I bring to the birth, and not cause to bring forth?
saith the Lord: shall I that cause to bring forth
shut the womb? saith thy God.

10. Rejoice ye with Jerusalem, and be glad for her, all ye that love her: rejoice for joy with her, all ye that mourn over her: 11. that ye may suck and be satisfied with the breasts of her
consolations; that ye may milk out, and be delighted with the abundance of her glory. 12.
For thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will extend peace to her like a river, and the glory of the nations like an overflowing stream, and ye shall
suck thereof; ye shall be borne upon the side,
and shall be dandled upon the knees. 13. As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you; and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem.
14. And ye shall see it, and your heart shall glory. Wealth.

shall be borne upon the side. Continues the figure of the nursling in the preceding verse. The nations become their foster-mothers.

13. as one whom his mother comforteth. God's is not only a Father's love. "As the grown man, coming back with wounds and weariness upon him to be comforted of his mother" (G. A. Smith), finds there the comfort he seeks; so will God comfort the men of Zion. God is our Mother.

The reference therefore is to an asherah, a grove of sacred trees or poles set up near an altar for idol-worship in the garden. If the word is read as written, אחר, the reference would be to a priest who led the company of worshippers.

They that sanctify themselves and purify themselves to go unto the gardens, behind one in the midst, eating swine's flesh, and the abomination, and the mouse; they shall come to an end together, saith the Lord. 18. For I know their works and their thoughts: the time cometh, that I will gather all nations and tongues; and they shall come, and shall see my glory. 19. And I will set a sign among them, and I will send such as escape of them unto the nations, to Tarshish, Pul and Lud, that draw the bow, to Tubal and Javan, to the isles afar off, that have not heard my fame, neither have seen my glory; and they shall declare my glory among the nations. 20. Tarshish. The town of Tartessus in Spain.

Pul and Lud. Probably districts in N. Africa.

Javan. Greece.

20. Impressed by what they thus hear, these far-off nations shall bring to Jerusalem all the Israelites dwelling among them, and in a manner appropriate to the greatness of the occasion.

v. 23. סבירין יבאו

21. and of them also will I take for priests and Levites Of the converted Gentiles who bring, and from the Jews who are brought back, I will take to assist the priests and Levites in their service (Kimchi). This thought is quite in accordance with the universalist spirit in Isaiah.

22 and 23. In this new (and better) order of things, the race and influence of Israel will continue for ever, leading to the fulfilment of Israel's mission, i.e. the universal worship of the One God, with Jerusalem as the devotional capital of mankind.

23. from one new moon to another. lit. " as often as there is a new moon on its new moon, etc," i.e. on every New Moon and Sabbath ; New Moon by New Moon and Sabbath by Sabbath.

24. A survey again of the conflict against evil, and its final defeat, through which the above great goal is reached. Delitzsch points out that, in effect, the thought is the same as in the concluding sentence of other sections of the second half of Isaiah—" there is no peace unto the wicked " (XLVIII, 22, and LVII, 21). Under the figure of the worm that dieth not, and the fire that is not quenched, we have here a symbolical representation of the lasting remorse that, on the

all the nations for an offering unto the Lord, upon horses, and in chariots, and in litters, and upon
mules, and upon swift beasts, to my holy mountain
Jerusalem, saith the Lord, as the children of Israel
bring their offering in a clean vessel into the house of the Lord. 21. And of them also will I take for priests for and Levites, saith the Lord.
22. For as the new heavens and the new earth,
which I will make, shall remain before me, saith
the Lord, so shall your seed and your name
remain. 23. And it shall come to pass, that from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath
to another, shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the Lord. 24. And they shall go forth,
and look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me: for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.

And it shall come to pass that from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another, shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the Lord.

realisation of their wickedness, troubles the souls of evil-doers. The knowledge of this, which will be clear to all ("And they shall go forth and look"), will become a restraining moral influence. It will be a factor in the attainment of the great consummation (the universal worship of the one true God) described in the previous verse.

they shall go forth. The worshippers.

According to ancient Jewish custom, verse 23 is read a second time after verse 24, so as to conclude the book (of which this is the last chapter) with words of comfort and encouragement. There is a similar direction in regard to concluding Malachi, Lamentations and Ecclesiastes. In each case, the last verse but one is reprinted in the Heb. text, and repeated during the reading in the Synagogue.

MACHAR CHODESH (EVE OF NEW MOON)

I Samuel XX, 18–42

There is hardly a more beautiful figure in history than Jonathan. Truly he was "a very perfect knight," the very essence of chivalry. To the Rabbis, he stands for all time as the type of disinterested, self-denying friendship (Ethics of the Fathers, V, 17). His greatness was manifested in the very clash of duty between his loyalty to his father and his love of David. Jonathan's was a task of rare difficulty, to combine duty to his father with devotion to his friend. Yet he fails in neither. To Saul he was an affectionate son and faithful officer; and "no cloud of envy intercepted his admiration of the great warrior, the sweet singer of Israel, who hereafter was to supersede him" (Jowett). It is fortunate that the opening incident of the chapter, occurring on a Machar Chodesh—the eve of the New Moon, enables the story of Jonathan's friendship and self-abnegation to be included among the Lessons from the Prophets.

Saul, half-crazed by jealousy of David's popularity and growing hold on the people, seeks to destroy him.

XVI. MACHAR CHODESH

I Samuel XX, 18–42

Then Jonathan said unto him, To-morrow is the new moon: and thou shalt be missed, because thy seat will be empty. 19. And when thou hast stayed three days, thou shalt go down quickly, and come to the place where thou didst hide thyself when the business was in hand, and shalt remain by the stone Ezel. 20. And I will shoot three arrows on the side thereof, as though I shot at a mark. 21. And, behold, I will send the lad, saying, Go, find the arrows. If I say unto the lad, Behold, the arrows are on this side of thee: take them, and come; for there is peace to thee and no hurt, as the Lord liveth. 22. But if I say thus unto the boy, Behold, the arrows are beyond thee: go thy way; for the Lord hath sent thee away. 23. And as touching the matter which thou and I have spoken of, behold, the Lord is between thee and me for ever.

24. So David hid himself in the field: and when

David places himself in the power of Jonathan, who at first is quite unwilling to believe evil of his father. He decides to sound his father and warn David.

18. new moon. The New Moon was in ancient times celebrated as an important festive occasion.

19. in the day of work. lit. "on the day of the deed." Probably a reference to the occasion (XIX, 2–4) when Jonathan interceded with Saul for David's life, and David lay "hid in a secret place."

stone Ezel. A cairn called Ezel.

20. arrows. This and other passages of the Bible show that archery was a familiar sport in ancient Israel.

23. the Lord be between thee and me. There is a sworn covenant between us.

the new moon was come, the king sat him down to eat meat. 25. And the king sat upon his seat, as at other times, even upon the seat by the wall;
and Jonathan stood up, and Abner sat by Saul's side: but David's place was empty. 26. Nevertheless Saul spake not any thing that day: for he thought, Something hath befallen him, he is not clean; surely he is not clean. 27. And it came to pass on the morrow after the new moon,
which was the second day, that David's place was empty: and Saul said unto Jonathan his son, Wherefore cometh not the son of Jesse to meat, neither yesterday, nor to-day? 28. And Jonathan answered Saul, David earnestly asked leave of me to go to Beth-lehem: 29. and he said, Let me go, I pray thee; for our family hath a sacrifice in the city; and my brother, he hath commanded me to be there: and now, if I have found favour in thine eyes, let me get away, I pray thee, and see my brethren. Therefore he is not come unto the king's table. 30. Then Saul's anger was kindled against Jonathan, and he said unto him, Thou son of a perverse rebellious woman, do not I know that thou hast chosen the son of Jesse to thine own shame, and unto the shame of thy mother's nakedness? 31. For as long as the son of Jesse liveth upon the ground,
thou shalt not be stablished, nor thy kingdom.
Wherefore now send and fetch him unto me, for he is worthy to die. 32. And Jonathan answered Saul his father, and said unto him, Wherefore should he be put to death? what hath he done?

42. go in peace. Jonathan comforts David with the reassurance of his undying love and devotion. Saul's violence soon assumes a murderous fury—85 priests are slain for having given bread to the hungry fugitive David. If Jonathan had, at the moment of farewell, only thought of providing his friend with a few loaves of bread, that massacre might have been averted (Talmud). David and Jonathan were never to meet again in the royal home. When the

33. And Saul cast his spear at him to smite him:
whereby Jonathan knew that it was determined of his father to put David to death. 34. So Jonathan arose from the table in fierce anger, and did eat no meat the second day of the month:
for he was grieved for David, because his father had done him shame.

35. And it came to pass in the morning, that Jonathan went out into the field at the time appointed with David, and a little lad with him.
36. And he said unto his lad, Run, find now the arrows which I shoot. And as the lad ran, he shot an arrow beyond him. 37. And when the lad was come to the place of the arrow which Jonathan had shot, Jonathan cried after the lad, and said, Is not the arrow beyond thee? 38. And Jonathan cried after the lad, Make speed, haste, stay not. And Jonathan's lad gathered up the arrows, and came to his master. 39. But the lad knew not any thing: only Jonathan and David knew the matter. 40. And Jonathan gave his weapons unto his lad, and said unto him, Go, carry them to the city. 41. And as soon as the lad was gone, David arose out of a place toward the South, and fell on his face to the ground, and bowed himself three times: and they kissed one another, and wept one with another, until David exceeded. 42. And Jonathan said to David,
Go in peace, forasmuch as we have sworn both of us in the name of the Lord, saying, The Lord seed and thy seed, for ever.

tragic end came, and both Saul and Jonathan died for their people, David lamented them in the most beautiful elegy in history:

Thy glory, O Israel, is slain upon thy high places!
How are the mighty fallen! . . . .
Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives,
And in their death they were not divided;
They were swifter than eagles,
They were stronger than lions.
Ye daughters of Israel, weep over Saul,
Who clothed you in scarlet delicately,
Who put ornaments of gold upon your apparel.
How are the mighty fallen in the midst of the battle!
O, Jonathan, slain upon thy high places,
I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan:
Very pleasant hast thou been unto me:
Thy love to me was wonderful,
Passing the love of women.
How are the mighty fallen,
And the weapons of war perished!

When, to the example of David and Jonathan, we add the deep friendship of two women, Ruth and Naomi: ("Whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me and more also, if aught but death part thee and me,") we realise that the Bible is also the supreme Book of Friendship.

PREFATORY NOTE

The nature and purpose of this work were fully stated in the Preface to the preceding volume. It has been undertaken because there is to-day no available edition of the Pentateuch and Haftorahs in Hebrew and English, with a popular commentary for use in Synagogue, School and Home. The cordial welcome accorded to the Genesis volume by scholars and laymen alike, is evidence that such a work meets a real need.

Thanks to the courtesy of the British and Foreign Bible Society, I am enabled to use the plates of their Letteris edition of the Hebrew Massoretic text. I am also deeply grateful to the Delegates and Syndics of the University Presses of Oxford and Cambridge for permission to use the Revised Version. Where that Version offers alternative renderings, the translation most in accord with Jewish Tradition is chosen. The Delegates and Syndics are in no way responsible for the manner in which the Revised Version is reprinted in this volume.

The commentary on chapters XXI–XL was prepared by the Rev. Dr. A. Cohen, and on the Haftorahs by the Rev. S. Frampton, M.A. I have made the freest editorial use of their manuscripts; and have condensed or enlarged, re-cast or written anew at will, myself supplying the Additional Notes and the commentary on chapters I–XX. I have also embodied some glosses by the late Rev. G. Friedlander, as well as several useful suggestions by Prof. I. Epstein and the Rev. E. Levine, M.A. To the Rev. M. Rosenbaum and Mr. S. M. Hertz, B.A., I am much indebted for helpful criticism; also to the Rev. David Bueno de Mesquita, B.A. for the rubrics in reference to Sephardi usage. To all my collaborators and helpers, I would here express my heartfelt thanks.

The publication of this work at a moderate price is due to the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Shaerf, who have endowed it as a memorial to the mother of Mrs. Shaerf, the late Ethel Rosa Schneider. May their idealism and public spirit be rewarded by an increase of religious knowledge, and a consequent strengthening of religious conviction, among English-speaking Jews.

Jerusalem Targum see Targum.

Jonathan Targum see Targum.

Josephus, Flavius (37–95 A.C.E.) Jewish historian and apologist. "Antiquities of the Jews."

Massorah lit. "The Tradition." The original Bible text was unvowelled. The Massoretes fixed the Traditional reading of the Sacred Text and its exact pronunciation, largely by means of vowel points. Their activity began after the Talmudic period, and extended to the tenth century.

Mechilta Oldest Rabbinic commentary on Exodus.

Midrash The ancient homiletical expositions of the Torah, the Five Scrolls (i.e. Song of Songs, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes and Esther) and other portions of Scripture.

Onkelos see Targum.

Philo Judaeus (20 B.C.E.–40 A.C.E.) Renowned Jewish philosopher in Alexandria. Author of allegorical commentaries on the Pentateuch.

Rabbis, the The religious authorities in the Talmudim and Midrashim.

Septuagint The Greek translation of the Bible made by the Jews in Egypt in the third century B.C.E. The word Septuagint means seventy, because it was believed to be the work of seventy-two scholars selected for that purpose by one of the Ptolemy rulers.

Symmachus A literal Greek version of the Pentateuch by a Hellenistic Jew of the second century.

Targum Ancient translations or paraphrases of the Bible into the Aramaic vernacular then spoken by the Jews. The most important of these is the translation of the Pentateuch that is ascribed to Onkelos, the Proselyte, a Mishna teacher of the first century. The Jonathan Targum is a freer paraphrase of the Bible, ascribed to Jonathan ben Uzziel, a pupil of Hillel. An earlier and fragmentary version of this paraphrase is known as the Jerusalem Targum.

Talmud Body of Jewish law and legend comprising the Mishna and the Gemara, and containing the author. ·tive explanation of the Torah by the Rabbis c Palestine and Babylon, from the years 100 B.C.E. .o 500 A.C.E.

B. MEDIEVAL JEWISH AUTHORITIES AND COMMENTATORS

ספר שמות

THE BOOK OF EXODUS

שמות

EXODUS

NAME. The Second Book of Moses was originally called ספר יציאת מצרים, "the Book of the Going out of Egypt." At an early date, however, it came to be known as שמות, from its opening phrase, Ve- eleh shemoth ("And these are the names"). Its current designation in Western countries is Exodus—from the Greek term exodos, "The Departure" (of the children of Israel out of Egypt), a name applied to it in the Septuagint, the ancient Greek translation of Scripture.

CONTENTS. The Book of Exodus is the natural continuation of Genesis. Genesis describes the lives of the Fathers of the Hebrew People: Exodus tells the beginning of the People itself. It records Israel's enslavement in Egypt, and the deliverance from the House of Bondage. It describes the institution of the Passover, the Covenant at Mount Sinai, and the organisation of Public Worship that was to make Israel into "a kingdom of priests and an holy nation." It recounts the murmurings and backslidings of Israel as well as the Divine guidance and instruction, vouchsafed to it; the apostasy of the Golden Calf, as well as the supreme Revelation that followed it—the revelation of the Divine Being as a "God, full of compassion and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy and truth; keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin; and who will by no means clear the guilty."

Importance. Nearly all the foundations on which Jewish life is built—the Ten Commandments, the historic Festivals, the leading principles of civil law—are contained in the Book of Exodus. And the importance of this Book is not confined to Israel. In its epic account of Israel's redemption from slavery, mankind learned that God is a God of Freedom; that, even as in Egypt He espoused the cause of brick-making slaves against the royal tyrant, Providence ever exalts righteousness and freedom, and humbles iniquity and oppression. And the Ten Commandments spoken at Sinai, form the Magna Charta of religion and morality, linking them for the first time, and for all time, in indissoluble union.

Divisions. The Book may be divided into five parts. The first part (chaps. i–xv) relates the story of the Oppression and Redemption. The second part (chaps. xvi–xxiv) describes the journey to Sinai, and embodies the Decalogue and the civil laws and judgments that were to have such a profound influence on human society. Then follow, in chaps. xxv–xxxi, the directions for the building of the Sanctuary. Chaps. xxxii–xxxiv detail Israel's apostasy in connection with the Golden Calf; and chaps. xxxv–xl describe the construction of the Sanctuary, and thus prepare the way for the Third Book of Moses, the Book of Leviticus.

Israel in Egypt: The Oppression and the Redemption (Chapters I–XV)

THE OPPRESSION OF THE ISRAELITES

Chapter I

1. now these. lit. "and these," which better indicates the close connection between the first two books of the Pentateuch, since the whole Torah is one continuous narrative.

5. seventy souls. Jacob himself is included in the number; see Gen. XLVI, 8–27. Of the seventy, sixty-eight were males. If to these we add the wives of the sons and grandsons, and the husbands of the daughters and grand-daughters, and all their servants and their families, the total number of those who entered Egypt must have been several hundreds, if not thousands.

6. and Joseph died. This verse resumes the thread of the narrative of the last verse of Gen. (L, 26) where we read, "So Joseph died."

all that generation. Both Israelites and Egyptians.

Chapter I

1. Now these are the names of the sons of Israel, which came into Egypt ; every man and his household came with Jacob. 2. Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah ; 3. Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin ;
4. Dan and Naphtali, Gad and Asher. 5. And all the souls that came out of the loins of Jacob were seventy souls : and Joseph was in Egypt already.
6. And Joseph died, and all his brethren, and all that generation. 7. And the children of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty ; and the land was filled with them.

7. increased abundantly. lit. "swarmed." Note the accumulation of the synonyms—were fruitful, increased abundantly, multiplied and waxed exceeding mighty. The extraordinary increase of the Israelites in Egypt presents a difficulty that is more apparent than real. As we have seen, the seventy souls who went down to Egypt did so accompanied by extensive households whom they eventually incorporated into their families (cf. Gen. XVII, 12, 27). Prof. Orr recalls from personal knowledge the case of a golden wedding where the original couple had multiplied to 69. If, he says, one bears this in mind in connection with the descendants of Jacob in Egypt, and "reckons the result of a similar rate of increase for 300 or 400 years, the figures may surprise him."

the land was filled. Not only Goshen, the eastern Delta of the Nile, the abode originally assigned to the Israelites. In time, they were found everywhere in Egypt as well as outside Egypt, in territories under Egyptian control ; see v. 12.

8 וַיָּקָם מֶלֶךְ־חָדָשׁ עַל־מִצְרָיִם אֲשֶׁר לֹא־יָדַע אֶת־יוֹסֵף׃
9 וַיֹּאמֶר אֶל־עַמּוֹ הִנֵּה עַם בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל רַב וְעָצוּם מִמֶּנּוּ׃

וְנוֹסַף גַּם־הוּא עַל־שֹׂנְאֵינוּ וְנִלְחַם־בָּנוּ וְעָלָה מִן־הָאָרֶץ׃

8. a new king. A monarch of a new dynasty, with a "nationalist" policy; probably Rameses II. Joseph served one of the Hyksos (Shepherd) kings, an Asiatic dynasty whose rule in Egypt began some centuries before him; see note on Gen. XXXIX, 1. Their rule came to an end not long after the death of Joseph, when the Hyksos were driven back into Asia, and a descendant of the native dynasty regained the throne. See Additional Note A, "Israel in Egypt," p. 56.

which knew not Joseph. He feigned to know nothing of Joseph's merits (Rashi). Or, the memory of the great services which Joseph had rendered grew dim. Joseph was no warrior; only a benefactor of his country, and his unmilitary achievements were forgotten (Ehrlich). The immemorial ingratitude of rulers and commonwealths is proverbial. Especially common is ingratitude to Israel—the People that has achieved so much of eternal worth, but has rarely succeeded in winning gratitude.

With the death of Joseph, a large portion of the Israelites in time forgot the religious traditions and the religious practices of the Fathers (Josh. XXIV, 14; Ezek. XX, 8). The greater portion of the people, however, must have kept alive in their hearts the memory and hope of Israel. Otherwise, it is quite impossible to understand how they maintained their separate existence during generations of oppression, and still more during centuries of prosperity, in a highly civilised society like the Egyptian. Foremost among the loyalists were the tribe of Levi, who alone maintained the covenant of Abraham. Of those who had abandoned Israel's hope, many reverted to heathen Semitic practices; while others, the Midrash tells us, adopted the motto, "Let us be Egyptians in all things."

9. too many and too mighty for us. The exaggeration of hatred, jealousy and fear. The land, it seemed to them, was full of Israelites; they were everywhere! "They filled

8. Now there arose a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph. 9. And he said unto his people, Behold, the people of the children of Israel are too many and too mighty for us: 10. come, let us deal wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they also join themselves unto our enemies, and fight against us, and get them up the theatres and all the places of amusements," is the comment of the Midrash. The fact that their increase is their only crime and that no activity inimical to society could be charged against them, is striking testimony to the blameless civic life of our ancestors in Egypt.

10. come, let us deal. The king plans the means of crushing the Israelites in common deliberation with his counsellors. "This first instance of rishus on a large scale is noteworthy also for the fact that it arises not from the Egyptian people, but from the ruling classes. It is the king who stirs it up, and assigns high reasons of state for making it a national policy. This has often repeated itself in history" (Hirsch).

join themselves. Living in Goshen, the Israelites might assist the enemy and make common cause with the Hittites, whose power Rameses could not break; or with any Semitic invaders of Egypt from the East. It is at all times a common stratagem of "patriots" to suspect the loyalty of the envied alien who is living peacefully and prosperously among them. One of the first laws the children of Israel were to learn on leaving Egypt was: "And a stranger shalt thou not wrong, neither shalt thou oppress him; for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt" (XXII, 20; see Genesis, p. 154, note on XVIII, 7).

and get them. Mendelssohn here translates the conjunction vav by or (as in XXI, 15); "and fight against us"—in case of invasion; "or get them out of the land" and strengthen the enemy peoples who are threatening us. Hence the anxiety of the Egyptian rulers both to retain the Israelites, and at the same time to decimate, and eventually destroy, them through forced labour.

up out of the land. Heb. idiom speaks of "going down to Egypt" and "going up to Canaan," because Egypt lies lower than Palestine.

11. taskmasters. Or, "gang-overseers." This was the first move in the scheme of checking the increase of the Israelites. The free and independent settlers in Goshen, who had been invited to Egypt (Gen. XLV, 16–20), were now subjected to the corvée, i.e. compelled to labour on public works without pay. "Their labour was a sort of tribal tax which they had to render, and for which their own head-men were responsible" (Petrie). The Egyptian and Assyrian monuments show us gangs of slaves working at brick-making, stone-breaking and other severe labours, under the lash of their overseers.

store cities. Fortresses to protect the kingdom against possible invasion from the Asiatic side; and, at the same time, arsenals and granaries for Egyptian armies about to cross into Asia.

Pithom. In Egyptian Pi-Tum, 'the dwelling of the God Tum;' was identified by Naville in 1883 with the ruins in the Wady Tumilat about 60 miles N.E. of Cairo. He found a number of thick-walled rectangular chambers not communicating with one another, but filled from above, as required in the case of granaries. A. H. Gardiner places it eight miles farther west, at the modern Tell-er-Retabeh.

Raamses. The site on which later the Roman city Pelusium stood, at the mouth of the ancient Eastern branch of the Nile Delta on the Mediterranean (Gardiner). It was the capital of the Hyksos kings, and was enlarged and renamed at this time. In an inscription of Rameses II, out of the land. 11. Therefore they did set over them taskmasters to afflict them with their burdens. And they built for Pharaoh store cities, Pithom and Raamses. 12. But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and the more they spread abroad. And they abhorred the children of Israel. 13. And the Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with rigour: 14. and they made their lives bitter with hard service, in mortar and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field, all their service, wherein they made them serve with rigour.

abhorred. Or, "had an horror of." They loathed the Israelites.

13. with rigour. Or, "with crushing oppression," to annihilate both the energies and the spirit of the labourer, and calculated to bring about the degeneration of the Hebrew race. Sir H. H. Johnston, in his account of slavery in Africa, has shown that the horrible traffic in human beings, as in fact all slavery, often created in the master a deliberate love of cruelty, even when it entailed considerable commercial loss.

14. made their lives bitter. There was little humanity towards slave-gangs in ancient Egypt. This remained true down to quite modern times. Only a little over a hundred years ago, in the construction of Mohammed Ali's canal from the Nile to Alexandria, 20,000 lives were sacrificed.

15-22. Failing to weaken the Israelites by the corvée, Pharaoh now proposes infanticide.

15. Hebrew midwives. i.e. the Egyptian women who served as midwives to the Hebrews (Septuagint, Josephus, Abarbanel). It is hardly probable that the king would have expected Hebrew women to slay the children of their own people.

Shiphrah . . Puah. The names are probably Egyptian. They were the two midwives in the capital, where Hebrew women would seek the services of a midwife (Strack). In the capital, furthermore, dwelt the "better classes" of the children of Israel—their natural leaders. If Pharaoh could only succeed in exterminating these, he would experience little difficulty in rendering the slave portion harmless.

16. the birthstool. Thus Targum and Rashi. The literal translation is, "the two stones." Some render, "the stone basin," and explain that in Egypt the midwife placed the child upon a bed of stones or bricks to decide, in accordance with instructions connected with the worship of the goddess of Fate, whether the newly-born infant should live or, in case of deformity, it should be slain (Holzinger).

Shiphrah, and the name of the other Puah:

him; but if it be a daughter, then she shall

and have saved the men children alive? 19.

a daughter . . shall live. These could not prove dangerous in time of war, and would be serviceable as slaves. The remnant of the Israelite people would thus be absorbed in the native population.

17. feared God. And would not be parties to a monstrous crime. The expression fearing God in Scripture is used in connection with heathens to denote the feeling which humanises man's dealings with foreigners, even where national interests are supposed to be at stake; see note on Gen. XLII, 18. Thus, when Amalek attacked Israel, not in open warfare but stealthily, from the rear, slaying the old and the feeble, showing himself devoid of this natural piety and fundamental humanity, Scripture says of him, "and he feared not God" (Deut. XXV, 18). The midwives were required by their king to act barbarously towards "aliens." But they preferred to obey the voice of human kindliness, the voice of conscience: "the midwives feared God." See also Gen. XX, 11.

כ הַֽמְיַלֶּ֖דֶת וְיָלָֽדוּ׃ וַיֵּ֥יטֶב אֱלֹהִ֖ים לַֽמְיַלְּדֹ֑ת וַיִּ֧רֶב הָעָ֛ם וַיַּֽעַצְמ֖וּ

תַּשְׁלִיכֻ֔הוּ וְכָל־הַבַּ֖ת תְּחַיּֽוּן׃ פ

19. lively. Better, vigorous (Ibn Ezra); i.e. the Hebrew women had greater vitality than the Egyptian women, and—like most Arabian women, ancient and modern—did not require the services of midwives; it would therefore be impossible to slay the child unperceived by the mother. The Heb. word chayoth may, however, be taken as a noun, meaning, "animals" (Talmud). The midwives would then have said to the king, "The Hebrew women are not human; they are animals, and do not need a midwife." Their loathing of the Hebrew women would disarm the suspicions of the king (Ehrlich, Yahuda).

20. God dealt well with the midwives. Because at the risk of their own lives, they dared to set at naught the murderous command of the king. Both the name and the action of these heathen midwives are found worthy of being recorded in the pages of God's Holy Book.

21. made them houses. The usual interpretation explains "them," as referring to the midwives. God built up their families or increased their prosperity. The verse may also be translated, "And it came to pass, that because the midwives feared God, He made them (the Israelites) houses"; i.e. the people multiplied and increased abundantly.

22. charged all his people. In consequence of this continuous increase of the Israelites, and having failed in his measures with the midwives, Pharaoh now orders his people generally to drown the male children born to the Israelites. "The whole people were now let loose against the Hebrews; spying and informing were made acts of loyalty, and compassion stamped as high treason" (Kalisch). While many would still, like the midwives, "fear God," others would now take a special delight in carrying out the command of the king.

over 3000 miles, into the Mediterranean. In Egypt, it is called the River. Egypt is by nature a rainless desert which the Nile, and the Nile only, converts into a garden every year. The real Egypt of the past, as of the present, is but a ribbon of fertile land, the River's deposit of rich black earth on the surrounding desert. This river—the life of Egypt—Pharaoh in a moment of rage determined to turn into the grave of Israel. As most of the Israelites, however, lived away from the Nile such a savage decree could not have been strictly carried out, and must in time have become a dead letter. Rabbinic tradition states that the edict was in force some three years.

Chapter II

THE BIRTH AND EDUCATION OF MOSES

Providence overrules the despotic plans of men, and Israel's future deliverer is being prepared for his task in the very court of the merciless tyrant. The marvellous and unique emergence of a people from the midst of another land and people would be both impossible and inexplicable, apart from a great directing genius. This chapter opens the story of the Father of the Prophets, the Liberator and Teacher of Israel, the man who not only led the children of Israel from the Egyptian house of bondage, but brought them to Sinai and trained them to become a free people consecrated unto God and righteousness. "Moses was a great artist, and possessed the true artistic spirit. But this spirit was directed by him, as by his Egyptian compatriots, to colossal and indestructible undertakings. He built human pyramids, carved human obelisks; he took a poor shepherd family and made a nation of it—a great, eternal, holy people: a people of God, destined to outlive the centuries, and to serve as a pattern to all other nations, a prototype to the whole of mankind. He created Israel" (Heine).

Even in its literary form this chapter is noteworthy. Few portions of Scripture condense so many dramatic incidents into a few verses. The power of the narrative only gains thereby.

1. the house of Levi. i.e. tribe of Levi. His name and that of his wife are given in VI, 20. Here the narrative hastens on to the story of the Redemption.

took to wife. The explicit language in these two verses brings out an important characteristic of Judaism. In other religions, the founders are represented as of supernatural birth. Not so in Judaism. Even Moses is human as to birth, as also in regard to death (Deut. XXXIV, 5).

2. bare a son. Two children had already been born to them—Miriam, the elder, was a young woman at the time of the birth of Moses; and Aaron, who was born three years before Moses. The king's order to drown the Israelite children must have been promulgated after the birth of Aaron, as his life had not been in peril.

9. give thee thy wages. Pharaoh's plans for the annihilation of the Israelite children are defeated by women—the human feelings of the midwives, the tender sympathy of a woman of royal birth, and a sister's watchfulness and resource in extremity. "It was to the merit of pious women, that Israel owed its redemption in Egypt," say the Rabbis.

10. the child grew. He remained under his mother's care till he was quite a lad. During these most impressionable years of his life, his mother must have instilled into him the belief in one God, the Creator of heaven and earth, an Eternal Spirit without any shape or form that the mind of man could devise; and imparted to him the sacred traditions of Israel, the story of the Fathers in child: and, behold, the babe wept. And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the Hebrews' children. 7. Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go and call thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee? 8. And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother. 9. And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the woman took the child, and nursed it. 10. And the child grew, and she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her son. And she called his name Moses,

Canaan, of Joseph in Egypt, and of the Divine promise of deliverance from Egyptian bondage. When Moses returned to the Palace, he received, as the adopted child of the princess, the education of boys of the highest rank, probably at Heliopolis—"the Oxford of Ancient Egypt" (Stanley). There he "must have learnt many things which from a Hebrew point of view would be extremely undesirable for him to know" (Driver). But whenever the priests undertook to initiate him into their fantastic idolatry, he remembered the teachings of his childhood; and he remained a Hebrew.

he became her son. He was adopted by the princess, and life at the Egyptian court gave him the training which was essential for a leader of men. "Deep are the ways of Providence! It was His inscrutable intention that Moses should be reared in a Palace, that his spirit might remain uncurbed by the oppressive and enervating influence of slavery. Thus he slew the Egyptian because his heart could not see violence and injustice, and from the same generous motive he took the part of the daughters of Reuel against the shepherds. It served another purpose also. Had he always lived amongst his own people, they would not so readily have accepted him as their leader, nor would they have shown him the respect and deference which were essential for the accomplishment of his great mission" (Ibn Ezra).

Moses. Heb. Mosheh, the Hebraised reproduction of an Egyptian word which probably means, "child of the Nile" (Yahuda). The explanation of the name given in the text ("because I drew him out of the water") rests upon the similarity of sound, as is repeatedly seen in Genesis; the word Mosheh resembling the word for, "the one who is drawn out."

11. when Moses was grown up. lit. "when Moses became great," he went out to his brethren. In later ages it must alas be said of many a son of Israel who had become great, that he went away from his brethren. Not so Moses. He went out of the Palace into the brick-fields where his brethren toiled and agonised in cruel bondage. It was lovingkindness to his people that impelled him to do so. There are ten strong things in the world, say the Rabbis: rock is strong but iron cleaves it; fire melts iron; water extinguishes fire; the clouds bear aloft the water; the wind drives away the clouds; man withstands the wind; fear unmans man; wine dispels fear; sleep overcomes wine; and death sweeps away even sleep. But strongest of all is lovingkindness, for it defies and survives death. Now Moses was filled with lovingkindness. Full of pity, he watched his brethren groaning beneath their burdens. "What has Israel done to deserve such wretchedness"? he wondered.

11. And it came to pass in those days, when Moses was grown up, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their burdens: and he saw an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren. 12. And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he smote the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand. 13. And he went out the second day, and, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove
together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow? 14. And he said, Who made thee a prince and a judge over us? thinkest thou to kill me, as thou killedst
the Egyptian? And Moses feared, and said, Surely the thing is known. 15. Now when of slaves was like. Moses for the first time saw a poor Hebrew flogged, and it was more than he could bear. His loyalty to his kin had not been destroyed by his Egyptian upbringing.

12. he smote. Moses resembles "the great patriots of the past and the present, who have taken the sword to deliver their people from the hands of tyrants. His act may be condemned as hasty. In its immediate results it was fruitless, as is every intemperate attempt to right a wrong by violence. However, it allied Moses definitely with his kinsmen" (Kent).

13. to him that did the wrong. i.e. to the man who was in the wrong.

14. who made thee a prince. A typical attitude of a small but persistent Jewish minority towards anyone working for Israel. The Rabbis speak of it as the Dathan-and-Abiram type of mind (cf. Num. XVI).

surely the thing is known. Referring to the death of the Egyptian. The Midrash takes these words as an answer to his question why Israel should suffer such slavery.

Now he knew the reason: they deserved it. "It is characteristic of the faithfulness of the Sacred Record that his flight is occasioned rather by the malignity of his countrymen than by the enmity of the Egyptians" (Stanley).

The first action of Moses shows him swept away by fierce indignation against the oppressor; the second, anxious to restore harmony among the oppressed. In both these acts, Moses is seen burning with patriotic ardour. His nature, however, requires to be freed from impetuous passion. In the desert whither he is now fleeing, his spirit will be purified and deepened, and he will return as the destined Liberator of his brethren.

15–22. Moses in Midian

15. Midian. In the south-eastern part of the Sinai peninsula. Here he would be beyond Egyptian jurisdiction. The main home of the Midianites appears to have been on the east side of the Gulf of Akabah; see map facing p. 149.

16. priest of Midian. Heb. kohen, which does not necessarily mean priest. It may also mean "chief." And so Onkelos and Rashi translate it here. The sons of David are likewise termed kohanim in II Sam. VIII, 18, where it only means, nobles or officers.

to water their father's flock. Even to this day the young women tend the sheep among the Bedouin of the Sinai peninsula.

Pharaoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Moses. But Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of Midian: and he sat down by a well. 16. Now the priest of Midian had seven daughters: and they came and drew water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock. 17. And the shepherds came and drove them away: but Moses stood up and helped them, and watered their flock. 18. And when they came to Reuel their father, he said, How is it that ye are come so soon to-day? 19. And they said, An Egyptian delivered us out of the hands of the shepherds, and moreover he drew water for us, and watered the flock. 20. And

17. drove them away. These "chivalrous" Arabs wished to water their own sheep first, although the women had already filled the troughs. Moses again takes the part of the injured side, but this time without violence.

18. Reuel their father. Reuel seems to have been their father, while Jethro was the father-in-law of Moses. The word Jethro means, "His Excellence," and may be regarded as a title borne by the priest or chief of Midian, whose proper name is given in Num. x, 29, as Hobab. Reuel, therefore, was the grandfather (often called "father" in Scripture; see Gen. xxviii, 13 and xxxii, 10) of the shepherdesses. If Jethro and Reuel are taken as one person, there is nothing unusual in one man having two names (e.g. Jacob, Israel): and South Arabian inscriptions show many chieftains having two names.

ye are come so soon. Reuel was familiar with the usual delay caused by the interference of the shepherds.

19. an Egyptian. Moses' dress and speech would be Egyptian.

moreover he drew water for us. lit. "he actually drew water for us"; they are surprised at the kindness of his action in helping them to draw water.

20. where is he? Expresses displeasure that they had failed in hospitality towards the stranger who had befriended them.

21. Moses was content. Or, "agreed." One cannot help contrasting the breadth with which the wooing of both Isaac and Jacob is recounted, with the extraordinary, nay irreducible, brevity with which the wooing of Moses is told. What we would call the "romantic" element in the story of Moses disappears like a bubble; it is the woe of his People that engrosses his mind.

Zipporah. The meaning of this name is, "bird." The Midianites spoke a language kindred to Hebrew.

strange land. i.e. foreign land.

the king of Egypt died. Probably Rameses II, who reigned 67 years. The Israelites evidently hoped that his successor, Meremptah, might offer them some relief; but they were disappointed. The regime of ruthless oppression towards Israel would now become the status quo. They realise the hopelessness of their bondage. Therefore, "they cried unto God."

he said unto his daughters, And where is he?
why is it that ye have left the man? call him, that he may eat bread. 21. And Moses was content to dwell with the man: and he gave Moses Zipporah his daughter. 22. And she bare a son, and he called his name Gershom: for he said, I have been a sojourner in a strange land.
23. And it came to pass in the course of those many days, that the king of Egypt died: and the children of Israel sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried, and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage. 24. And God heard their groaning, and God remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob. 25. And God saw the children of Israel, and God took knowledge of them.* iv

24. God remembered his covenant. Not that He had forgotten it, but that now the opportunity had come for the fulfilment of His merciful purposes.

25. God took knowledge of them. God did not close His eyes to their suffering (Rashi), but He chose His own time when to send deliverance and cause Israel to go forth from Egypt. See also Additional Note B, "Israel and Egypt: the Spiritual Contrast," p. 62.

CHAPTERS III AND IV

THE CALL OF MOSES

1. was keeping the flock. God never gives an exalted office to a man unless He has first tested him in small things, say the Rabbis. When feeding the flocks of Jethro, they tell us, Moses saw a little lamb escape from the flock, and when he followed it, he overtook it at a brook quenching its thirst. "Had I known that thou wast thirsty, I would have taken thee in my arms and carried thee hither," he said. "As thou livest," a Heavenly Voice resounded, "thou art fit to shepherd Israel" (Midrash).

to the back of the wilderness. i.e. behind or beyond the wilderness, as the scanty shrubs in the wilderness itself were insufficient for the flock. "The solemn solitude of the dreary desert was to prepare his mind for the sublime commission for which Providence had selected him" (Kalisch).

mountain of God. So called because the Glory of God was later manifested there. The spot chosen by God to announce the physical redemption of Israel, was also chosen by Him as the place of their spiritual redemption.

Horeb. Horeb is the mountain and district, Sinai the summit itself; or, the two names refer to two peaks of the same mountain range, which some identify with Jebel Musa (7636 ft.), others with Mount Serbal (6734 ft.), in the Sinai Peninsula. The aridity and dryness of this

3 1. Now Moses was keeping the flock of Jethro his father in law, the priest of Midian: and he led the flock to the back of the wilderness, and came to the mountain of God, unto Horeb.
2. And the angel of the LORD appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush:
and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned
with fire, and the bush was not consumed. 3.
And Moses said, I will turn aside now, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt.

to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses. And he region have been much exaggerated. In the highest region, fertile valleys are found, with fruit trees and water in plenty.

2. angel of the LORD. The angel in Scripture is not to be identified with God. The angel is the messenger of God and speaks in His name, and is often called by the Name of Him who sent him (see v. 4). The speech and action are the work of the angel, but the thought or will is God's.

in a flame of fire. Or, "in the heart of the fire;" i.e. in the midst of fire (Maimonides).

bush. i.e. the thorn-bush, the wild acacia which is the characteristic shrub of that region.

the bush was not consumed. The burning bush has often been taken as a symbol of Israel—small and lowly among the nations, and yet indestructible; because of the Divine Spirit that dwelleth within Israel; (Deut. XXXIII, 16).

4. God called unto him. i.e. the angel of God, mentioned in v. 2. The angel is here spoken of as God, because he represents the Almighty (Ibn Ezra).

Moses, Moses. God here addresses Moses by his name. "The repetition of the name is an expression of affection intended to encourage him" (Mechilta); cf. Abraham, Abraham, in Gen. XXII, 11; and Jacob, Jacob, in Gen. XLVI, 2. God's choice is never groundless or arbitrary. Moses' warm heart for his brethren, and his burning indignation against all injustice, made him worthy of God's love and choice.

5. holy ground. Every spot where God manifests Himself is holy ground.

6. thy father. i.e. thy fathers; the word is here used collectively (Onkelos), and is explained by the words, "the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob"; see XV, 2. The Midrash, however, refers the word "father" to Amram, the father of Moses. It was with his father's voice that the angel of God addressed him, "I am the God of thy father, i.e. the God of whom thy father spake, the unchangeable God of eternity, who is now about to fulfil the promise given to Israel's ancestors."

hid his face. Or, "covered his face" (Jerusalem Targum) in reverence (cf. I Kings XIX, 13). In the presence of the All-holy, an instant and irresistible feeling of human nothingness overpowers him. In sacred awe before the majesty of the Godhead, he hides his face. No mortal eye is worthy of beholding God. Even the angels are not pure in His sight; and, therefore, in the vision of Isaiah VI, 2, they are spoken of as covering their faces and bodies; see p. 509.

7. my people. This is the first time Israel is so called: God had made their cause His own. "God always takes the side of the persecuted," say the Rabbis.

said, Here am I. 5. And he said, Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground. 6. Moreover he said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God. 7. And the LORD said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their taskmasters; for I know their sorrows; 8. and I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Amorite, and the flowing with milk and honey. A proverbial expression, often applied to Canaan, see XIII, 5; Num. XIII, 27. The description of the Promised Land is here required, because Moses does not know it from personal observation.

the Canaanite. The general name for all the peoples inhabiting ancient Palestine. Originally Canaan, meaning the Lowland, was applied only to the coast of Phœnicia and the land of the Philistines; see Gen. X, 6.

the Hittite. A powerful and warlike nation whose seat was Asia Minor; an offshoot of this people lived in Southern Palestine; see Gen. XXIII.

Amorite. Originally a warlike tribe inhabiting the hill

11–12. Moses' First Difficulty : he is unsuited for his Mission

11. who am I. How different was Moses' attitude in his youth ! With age, Moses can only think of his own unfitness for the gigantic undertaking ; cf. Jeremiah's diffidence to assume the Prophet's office, Jer. I, 6f ; see p. 468.

12. certainly I will be with thee. This tremendous fact of the reality of the Divine help would make it possible for Moses, an old man of eighty years, to face Pharaoh and demand the emancipation of his enslaved brethren. Moses' humility, therefore, is here out of place ; and, when persisted in, earns him the Divine rebuke (IV, 14).

this shall be the token. i.e. the proof that thou art sent by God will be that in this very place, where thou art now doubting the possibility of redemption, the children of Israel will worship, in thanksgiving, the God who will have brought them out of the land of bondage.

And now, behold, the cry of the children of Israel is come unto me: moreover I have seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them. 10. Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth
my people the children of Israel out of Egypt.
11. And Moses said unto God, Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt? 12. And he said, Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be the token unto thee, that I have sent thee: when thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain. 13. And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers

me, What is his name? what shall I say un-

what is his name? Heb. מה שמו. Not an inquiry for information as to what God is called. Moses comes to Israel with the words, "the God of your fathers hath sent me unto you." It is, therefore, hardly conceivable that he should proclaim a God quite unknown unto them, as the God of their Fathers (G. B. Gray). They must have known what He was called, "since nothing is more un-Biblical than the idea of an "Unknown God" (B. Jacob). But since name means fame, "record," and in IX, 16 is the synonym of "power," What is his name? means "What are the mighty deeds which thou canst recount of Him—what is His power—that we should listen to thy message from Him"?

14. I AM THAT I AM. Heb., Ehyeh asher ehyeh—the self-existent and eternal God; a declaration of the unity and spirituality of the Divine Nature, the exact opposite of all the forms of idolatry, human, animal, and celestial, that prevailed everywhere else. I am that I am is not, however, to be understood as a philosophical phrase; the emphasis is on the active manifestation of the Divine existence; cf. the explanation of the Midrash, אהיה אשר אהיה אני נקרא לפי מעשי To the Israelites in bondage, the meaning would be, "Although He has not yet displayed His power towards you, He will do so; He is eternal and will certainly redeem you."

Most moderns follow Rashi in rendering "I will be what I will be"; i.e. no words can sum up all that He will be to His people, but His everlasting faithfulness and unchanging mercy will more and more manifest themselves in the guidance of Israel. The answer which Moses receives in these words is thus equivalent to, "I shall save in the way that I shall save." It is to assure the Israelites of the fact of deliverance, but does not disclose the manner. It must suffice the Israelites to learn that, "Ehyeh, I WILL BE (with you), hath sent me unto you."

15. the LORD. This is the translation of the Divine Name written in the four Hebrew letters Y H W H and always pronounced "Adonay" (see Genesis, p. 16). This Divine Name of four letters—the Tetragrammaton—comes from the same Heb. root (hayah) as Ehyeh; viz., "to be." It gives expression to the fact that He was, He is, and He ever will be. Here too the words must not be understood in the philosophical sense of mere "being," but as active manifestation of the Divine existence.

to them? 14. And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you. 15. And God said moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, the LORD, the God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: this is my name forever, and this is my memorial unto all generations.* v 16. Go, and gather the elders of Israel together, and say unto them, The LORD, the God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, hath appeared unto me,

According to the Rabbis, this Name stresses the lovingkindness and faithfulness of God in relation to His creatures: He who educates, punishes and guides; He who hears the cry of the oppressed, and makes known His ways of righteousness unto the children of men. He is the great Living God who reveals Himself in the Providential care of His people.

the LORD, the God of your fathers. Not a deity discovered by Moses in Midian, but the same God who had revealed Himself to their fathers, the Creator of the world and the righteous Judge of all the earth—Adonay—the ever-living God of faithfulness and lovingkindness, hath sent him unto them.

this is my memorial. The designation by which I will be remembered. "Memorial" is a synonym of "Name"; Hos. XII, 6 (Genesis, p. 489).

16. the elders of Israel. It seems that the Israelites had a representative national organisation consisting of the elders or leading men in each family; see V, 5.

the LORD, the God of your fathers. This shows that the elders, as well as the people, are acquainted with the Name of God. "What impression could Moses have possibly hoped to make upon them with an altogether new Name?" (B. Jacob).

three days' journey. A current expression for a considerable distance; Gen. xxx, 36; Num. x, 33. "The Israelites were to ask what could not reasonably be refused, being a demand quite in accordance with Egyptian customs. . . . It is important to observe that the first request which Pharaoh rejected could have been granted without any damage to Egypt, or any risk of the Israelites passing the strongly fortified frontier" (Speaker's Bible). The request was not granted; and so it resolved itself in the end into a demand for the unconditional release of the people and their actual departure.

19. no, not by a mighty hand. Better, except by a mighty hand (AJ).

20. with all my wonders. i.e. the plagues.

21. and I will give this people favour. The Egyptian people are throughout far friendlier to the Israelites than the hard-hearted king. Not only will they let the Israelites go, but God will dispose them favourably towards the Israelites.

which is done to you in Egypt: 17. and I have said, I will bring you up out of the affliction of Egypt unto the land of the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Amorite, and the Perizzite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite, unto a land flowing with milk and honey. 18. And they shall hearken to thy voice: and thou shalt come, thou and the elders of Israel, unto the king of Egypt, and ye shall say unto him, The LORD, the God of the Hebrews, hath met with us: and now let us go,
we pray thee, three days' journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to the LORD our God.
19. And I know that the king of Egypt will not give you leave to go, no, not by a mighty hand.
20. And I will put forth my hand, and smite Egypt with all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof: and after that he will let you go. 21. And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty:

when ye go, ye shall not go empty. To understand this phrase and the promise it contains, we must recall Deut. xv, 12f., which ordains that when a faithful servant leaves his master after many years' service, he is to be liberally equipped from his owner's property. "When thou lettest him go free from thee, thou shalt not let him go empty; thou shalt furnish him liberally out of thy flock, out of thy threshing-floor, and out of thy wine-press." The phrase, "Thou shalt furnish him liberally," is a paraphrase of the Heb. העניק תעניק לו which means lit. "make-him-a-necklace" —the metaphor being that of ornamenting and embellishing, of giving some striking gift as from a man who wishes to show his lasting regard for the servant who had served him faithfully through many years. Such—God announces unto Moses—will be the farewell which the Egyptian people will accord unto the departing Israelites.

22. shall ask. For the mere asking, they will be given in gladness and friendliness precious and valuable gifts. The Heb. שאל means to ask as a gift (see Ps. II, 8), with no idea of giving back the object thus received. AV translates, "every woman shall borrow of her neighbour." This translation is thoroughly mischievous and misleading. "If there was any borrowing, it was on the part of the Egyptians, who had been taking the labour of the Israelites without recompense" (Dummelow).

that sojourneth in her house. It is most unlikely that the households of the oppressed Israelites included Egyptian dependents. Therefore, Ehrlich, following Rashi and in strict accordance with Semitic idiom, rightly translates, in whose house she sojourneth.

jewels. Heb. "articles." These articles were not asked for to be used for festive wear when worshipping God. Worship requires purification, sanctification on the part of the worshipper (cf. Gen. XXXV, 2), not ornamentation (B. Jacob); see following note.

put them upon your sons, and upon your daughters. The striking manifestation of kindliness and goodwill on the side of the Egyptian people is to be remembered by the Israelites throughout the generations; and, therefore, they are bidden to put these gifts and ornaments upon their children, who will ask concerning that great Day when the Lord saved Israel out of the hands of Pharaoh. These jewels, tokens of friendship and repentance, were fittingly employed later in the adornment and enrichment of the Sanctuary.

ye shall spoil the Egyptians. This rendering should be replaced by ye shall save the Egyptians (B. Jacob). "Spoil the Egyptians" (or, "strip Egypt") is an incorrect, nay impossible, rendering of the Heb. text. The root נצל which is here translated, "spoil" or "strip," occurs 212 times in Scripture; and in 210 instances its meaning is admitted by all to be, to snatch (from danger), to rescue (from a wild beast), to recover (property), also to plunder (booty). Its direct object is never the person or thing from whom the saving or the rescuing or the snatching has taken place, but always the person or thing rescued. The usual translation, both here and in xii, 36, "ye shall spoil the Egyptians," is, therefore, unwarranted, for two reasons. It takes the persons from whom things are snatched as the direct object; and, furthermore, it necessitates an entire reversal of the meaning of נצל from save into despoil! There is no justification for departing, in this verse, or in xii, 36, from the rendering which is absolutely unchallenged in the 210 other places where it occurs. The words ונצלתם את מצרים, can only be translated, "and ye shall save the Egyptians," i.e. clear the name, and vindicate the humanity, of the Egyptians. Bitter memories and associations would have clung to the word "Egyptians" in the mind of the Israelites, as the hereditary enslavers and oppressors of Israel. A friendly parting, and generous gifts, however, would banish that feeling. The Israelites would come to see that the oppressors were Pharaoh and his courtiers, not the Egyptian People. They would be enabled thereby to carry out the command to be given to them forty years later, "Thou shalt not abhor an Egyptian" (Deut. xxiii, 8). It is for such reasons that the Israelites are bidden to ask their neighbours for these gifts, in order to ensure such a parting in friendship and goodwill, with its consequent clearing of the name, and vindication of the honour, of the Egyptian people (B. Jacob).

22. but every woman shall ask of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: and ye shall put them upon your sons, and upon your daughters; and ye shall spoil the Egyptians.

v. 21 and 22 lend a poetic and unforgettable touch of beauty to the going out of Egypt; and yet these verses, as few others, have been misunderstood and been looked upon as a "blot" on the moral teaching of Scripture. The Talmud records a formal claim for indemnity put forward by the Egyptians before Alexander the Great for the vessels of gold and silver which the Israelites had taken with them at the Exodus! The Jewish spokesman, however, had little difficulty in proving to Alexander that, if any indemnity was to be paid, it was the Egyptians who were the debtors, seeing that they had enslaved and exploited the Israelites for many centuries without any pay for their labours.

In modern times, enemies of the Bible vie with one another in finding terms strong enough in which to condemn the "deceit" practised on the Egyptians. Apologists, both Jewish and non-Jewish, usually reply that this silver and gold was in exchange for the property the Israelites left behind them (Malbim); or they repeat the reply of the Alexandrian Jews: "Through God's providence, the Israelites were enriched at the expense of their oppressors, and gained as it were a prize of victory in compensation for their long oppression" (Dillmann). Far better than any of these current explanations is that given by Rabbiner Dr. B. Jacob, which we have adopted. It meets all the apparent difficulties, and brings out unexpected beauties in the Divine command. Thus, the phrase, spoiling the Egyptians, which has become a proverbial expression, is like the phrase, brand of Cain (Genesis, p. 38), due to a complete misunderstanding of the text.

1–9. Moses' third Difficulty: the Israelites may not Believe his Message of Freedom

1. the Lord hath not appeared unto thee. How could this be answered? Argument would be of little avail. Their unbelief must be swept aside by something that would carry conviction to men whose religious memories are dimmed and whose spirit is crushed.

2–5. The first sign.

2. a rod. Jewish legend has woven marvellous tales round the Rod of Moses. "It was probably only a shepherd's crook. What a history, however, awaited it! It was to be stretched out over the Red Sea, pointing a pathway through its depths; to smite the flinty rock; to win victory over the hosts of Amalek; to be known as the rod of God" (Meyer).

3. a serpent. Heb. nachash; the basilisk, the symbol of royal and divine power in the diadem worn by Pharaoh. "The meaning of this miracle seems to be, Pharaoh's own power shall become an instrument of punishment, and his enslaved enemy shall triumph" (Hirsch).

4. put forth thine hand. Snake-charmers usually take hold

10–17. MOSES STILL HESITATES : HE IS NOT ELOQUENT

10. I am not eloquent. lit. "a man of words." He had spent the years of his manhood in the great silent spaces of the desert, and he could only stammer forth the message of freedom. Leadership, it seemed to him, was impossible to a man unskilled in forensic eloquence with which to win the Council of Elders to his way of thinking, or to state his case fluently and convincingly before Pharaoh.

slow of speech, and of a slow tongue. lit. "heavy of speech and heavy of tongue." He may have had an actual impediment in his speech. Rabbinic legend tells that Moses when a child was one day taken by Pharaoh on his knee. He, thereupon, grasped Pharaoh's crown and placed it on his head. The astrologers were horror-struck. "Let two braziers be brought"—they counselled; "one filled with gold, the other with glowing coals; and set them before him. If he grasps the gold, it will be safer for Pharaoh to put the possible usurper to death." When the braziers were brought, the hand of Moses was stretching for the gold, but the angel Gabriel guided it to the coals. The child plucked out a burning coal and put it to his lips, and for life remained "heavy of speech and heavy of tongue."

the rod of God. Called thus by reason of the miracle performed in connection therewith; v. 2 and 3.

21. I will make his heart strong. i.e. stubborn. Or, "I will harden his heart" (RV Text, AV and AJ). This does not mean that God on purpose made Pharaoh sinful. For God to make it impossible for a man to obey Him, and then punish him for his disobedience, would be both unjust and contrary to the fundamental Jewish belief in Freedom of the Will. No wonder that this passage has often been the subject of attack and defence respectively by the friends and enemies of the Bible.

The phrase most often translated "hardening of the heart" occurs nineteen times; ten times it is said that shalt take in thine hand this rod, wherewith thou shalt do the signs.* vi

18. And Moses went and returned to Jethro his father in law, and said unto him, Let me go, I pray thee, and return unto my brethren which are in Egypt, and see whether they be yet alive. And Jethro said to Moses, Go in peace. 19. And the LORD said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return into Egypt: for all the men are dead which sought thy life. 20. And Moses took his wife and his sons, and set them upon an ass, and he returned to the land of Egypt: and Moses took the rod of God in his hand. 21. And the LORD said unto Moses, When thou goest back into Egypt, see that thou do before Pharaoh all the wonders which I have put in thine hand: but I will make

Pharaoh hardened his heart; and nine times the hardening of Pharaoh's heart is ascribed to God. There thus seem to be two sides to this hardening. When the Divine command came to Pharaoh, "Set the slaves free," and his reply was, "I will not," each repetition of Pharaoh's persistent obstinacy made it less likely that he would eventually listen to the word of God. For such is the law of conscience: every time the voice of conscience is disobeyed, it becomes duller and feebler, and the heart grows harder. Man cannot remain "neutral" in the presence of Duty or of any direct command of God. He either obeys the Divine command, and it becomes unto him a blessing; or he defies God, and such command then becomes unto him a curse. "It is part of the Divinely ordered scheme of things that if a man deliberately chooses evil, it proceeds to enslave him; it blinds and stupefies him, making for him repentance well-nigh impossible" (Riehm). Thus, every successive refusal on the part of Pharaoh to listen to the message of Moses froze up his better nature more and more, until it seemed as if God had hardened his heart. But this is only so because Pharaoh had first hardened it himself, and continued doing so. The Omniscient God knew beforehand whither his obstinacy would lead Pharaoh, and prepared Moses for initial failure by warning him that Pharaoh's heart would become "strong," "heavy," or "hardened."

The modern mind whilst agreeing that all things are ultimately controlled by God's will, does not attribute results to the immediate action of God. Not so the Biblical idiom. Events, whether physical or moral, which are the inevitable result of the Divine ordering of the universe, are spoken of as the direct work of God (Dillmann, Driver, Jacob). See also note on Isa. VI, 9, p. 511.

22. Israel is my son. This expression is here applied for the first time to Israel as a nation.

firstborn. Implying the universal fatherhood of God. The other nations too are God's children ; and in Abraham's seed, spiritually the firstborn among them, all the families of the earth are to be blessed (Gen. XII, 3).

23. thou hast refused. Better, "and if thou refusest . . . I shall slay."

24. on the way at the lodging place. The verse can also be translated : "On the way, he tarried in a lodging place." Moses was still distrusting himself in regard to his mission, hesitating, tarrying in the inn. This brings down the Divine displeasure upon him (Wogue).

sought to kill him. An anthropomorphic way of saying that Moses fell suddenly into a serious illness. Many commentators connect this sudden illness of Moses with his postponing, for some reason, the circumcision of his son. Tradition ascribes the omission to the influence of Jethro and Zipporah, who may have desired the circumcision postponed to the 13th year, as was customary among the LORD, Israel is my son, my firstborn: 23. and I have said unto thee, Let my son go, that he may serve me; and thou hast refused to let him go: behold, I will slay thy son, thy firstborn.

24. And it came to pass on the way at the lodging place, that the LORD met him, and sought to kill him. 25. Then Zipporah took a flint, and cut off the foreskin of her son, and cast it at his feet;
and she said, Surely a bridegroom of blood art thou to me. 26. So he let him alone. Then she said, A bridegroom of blood in regard of the bridegroom of blood. This is the literal translation of the Heb. chathan damim. Since circumcision is the symbol of the covenant between God and the child, the child was spoken of as the bridegroom of the covenant; in the same way as the "hero" of Simchath Torah, the Festival of the Rejoicing of the Law, came in medieval times to be called chathan Torah, the "bridegroom" of the Torah.

According to Ibn Ezra, the words, "Surely a bridegroom of blood art thou to me," were addressed to the child: "Indeed, thee I might call literally a bridegroom of blood, because thou didst nearly cause the death of my husband."

26. so he let him alone. The illness of Moses abated, and he was soon restored to health.

"Now after all these years comes a vague rumour through the brick-fields and along the great canal, about the two old men from far-off Midian with a most startling message. One, it was said, was that Moses whose exciting story their aged elders still talked about, the story that had so stirred the slave settlements long ago—when a prince of Egypt, who was one of themselves, had, for their sakes, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter. Then came the secret messages from Moses and Aaron to the heads of families. Before going to Pharaoh, they must first be sure that their leadership will be accepted by the people. You can imagine the secret gatherings along the canals, the midnight meetings of desperate men assembling at risk of their lives, such as one reads of in Uncle Tom's Cabin—the old slaves, the elders of the tribes, with the first dawn of hope in their eyes. Ah, poor wretches, one needs to have suffered like them to understand the goodness of finding out that God cared after all" (Smyth).

27. And the Lord said to Aaron, Go into the wilderness to meet Moses. And he went, and met him in the mountain of God, and kissed him.
28. And Moses told Aaron all the words of the Lord wherewith he had sent him, and all the signs wherewith he had charged him. 29. And Moses and Aaron went and gathered together all the elders of the children of Israel: 30. and Aaron spake all the words which the Lord had spoken unto Moses, and did the signs in the sight of the people. 31. And the people believed:
and when they heard that the Lord had visited the children of Israel, and that he had seen their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshipped.* vii

31. the people. As represented by the elders. It is also reasonable to assume that the elders called the people together to hear the message brought by Moses and Aaron. Already the word of God, " They shall hearken to thy voice " (III, 18) was being fulfilled.

Unsuccessful Appeal to Pharaoh and Increase of the Oppression

in the wilderness. The Israelites could not offer sacrifices in the presence of the Egyptians, in view of the fact that the animals to be sacrificed were held sacred by the Egyptians; just as Mohammedans in India cannot with impunity slaughter cows in sight of a Hindu mob. Hence the request to go to the wilderness to celebrate the feast.

2. who is the Lord. An expression of contempt; Pharaoh does not know Adonay, and does not acknowledge His right to command him. The Rabbis say that he turned to his seventy scribes who knew all the tongues spoken on earth, and asked them; "Know ye a god who is called Adonay, the God of Eternity?" They answered, "We have sought in all the books of all the peoples among the names of

Note A

ISRAEL IN EGYPT: THE HISTORICAL PROBLEMS

I

What Light does Egyptian History throw on Israel in Egypt?

The history of ancient Egypt is usually divided into three periods. The earliest period is that of the Old Kingdom, which comprises the first ten dynasties of pyramid builders, ending 2500 B.C.E. The second period, the Middle Kingdom, from the eleventh to the seventeenth dynasty of rulers (2500–1587 B.C.E.) is one of great obscurity, and covers the age during which the Hyksos, Bedouin invaders from the Arabian desert, ruled Egypt. They were expelled by the founder of the eighteenth dynasty in 1587. He opens the third period, the New Kingdom, which continues to the end of the twentieth dynasty in 1100 B.C.E. After that date, the country successively came under Lybian, Persian, Macedonian and Roman rule.

Biblical interest in Egypt begins during the Middle Kingdom. Joseph served one of the Hyksos kings. These invaders, "princes of the desert," as they called themselves, soon accommodated themselves to the system of Government they had found in Egypt; and their contribution to Egyptian culture was not inferior to that of the native kings. Their dominion was later described as one of desolation and ruin—which is quite untrue. The Hyksos kings restored and enlarged the temples, encouraged learning, and could not have destroyed any of the previous Egyptian monuments, seeing that these have come down to our own day. On the contrary, it is the native rulers who followed them that eradicated every trace of the Hyksos kings. This is responsible for the obscurity that overhangs the story of the whole Hyksos period, and the consequent uncertainty of so much of Egyptian chronology. Not long after the death of Joseph, the Hyksos were driven back into Asia; and a native ruler, the founder of the Eighteenth Dynasty, regained the throne.

The advent of this nationalist dynasty marked the turn of the tide in the fortunes of the descendants of Jacob. As friends of the overthrown Hyksos kings, they lost their favoured position, and their past services to the State were "ignored." From prosperous and honoured settlers in the Eastern Delta of the Nile, with freedom of movement and right of domicile throughout Egypt and her dominions, they were under the successive rulers of the Eighteenth Dynasty (1587–1350 B.C.E.) gradually reduced to a condition of serfdom. These rulers, as well as the kings of the Nineteenth Dynasty (1350–1200), were great architects and are famous for the number and magnificence of their monuments. That veritable frenzy for building which characterised all these rulers, naturally called for vast levies of forced labour. The feared and hated Israelites seemed to these Pharaohs to be at hand for just such a purpose. The Israelites were now condemned to cruel slave labour as brick-layers and navvies, both the kind and conditions of their labour being utterly alien to the nature and the traditions of free and independent shepherd folk.

It is difficult to determine the name of the "new king" who initiated the Oppression. Scripture does not give us the name of the ruler in question, Pharaoh being merely the royal title of the reigning monarch. The one aim of the Scripture story is to describe God's Providential guidance of His people. The narrative is "theocentric"; and events are viewed under the aspect of eternity. Details, such as the exact names of the impious heathen oppressors are passed over, and all the emphasis is placed on the religious truths with which the narrative throbs (Boehl). And as to the hieroglyphic monuments, their information on this whole subject is most meagre. Possibly this is due to the fact that as yet little excavation has taken place in Goshen, i.e. the Eastern Delta, which was the main domicile of the Israelites. But even when ancient Goshen will have been revealed to us, it is well to remember that the true-born Egyptian chronicler took little notice of the fortunes of an alien serf-class like the Israelites, whose original occupation—keeping sheep—was, in his eyes, that of outcasts (Gen. XLVI, 34).

There are, therefore, but few casual references on the monuments to the Aperu or Apuriu, which is the Egyptian form of the name "Hebrews." Thus, in a report addressed to an official of the reign of Rameses II, there occur the words: "I have obeyed the message of my lord, in which he said, 'Give corn to the native soldiers, and also to the Apuriu, who are bringing up stones for the great tower of Pa-Ramessu' . . . I have given them their corn every month, according to the instructions of my lord." In another report of the same age we read : " I have hearkened to my lord's message, 'Give provisions to the soldiers and to the Aperu, who bring up stones for Ra (the sun-god), viz. for Ra of Rameses, the beloved of Amon, in the southern quarter of Memphis.'" So much for the nature of the few Egyptian references to the Hebrew serfs doing forced labour to the Pharaohs.

As to the exodus from Egypt, the Egyptian records pass it over in total silence—as was their invariable custom in connection with any defeat suffered by the ruler or nation. For instance, although the Hyksôs conquest of Egypt is the most important political event in Egyptian history, yet almost no mention is made in the monuments of this catastrophe which shook the whole social structure to its foundations. The Egyptian records confine themselves to the boastful recounting of victories. The Biblical writers, alone, among all Oriental chroniclers, describe defeats of their kings and armies; nay more, they arraign ruler and people alike whensoever these are unfaithful to the aims and ideals of the nation. This is one of the reasons why of all Oriental chronicles, it is only the Biblical annals that deserve the name of history.

Who was the Pharaoh of the Oppression?

In view of the above, there are several candidates for the infamy of having been the " Pharaoh of the Oppression," under whom the bondage of the Israelites ended in a systematic attempt at their extermination. The majority of scholars identify him with the splendour-loving and tyrannical Rameses II, whose dates are variously given as 1300–1234 B.C.E. (Petrie) and 1347–1280 (Mahler). " He was a vain and boastful character who wished to dazzle posterity by covering the land with constructions whereon his name was engraved thousands of times, and who prided himself in his inscriptions upon great conquests which he never made" (Naville). The Exodus itself is held to have taken place under his son, Menremptah, with whom the decline of Egypt began. Menremptah (or Menephtah) was an obstinate and vain despot. He too had the habit of claiming as his own the achievements of others. "He was one of the most unconscionable usurpers (and defacers) of the monuments of his predecessors, including those of his own father, who had set him the example . . . all due to a somewhat insane desire to perpetuate his own memory" (Prof. Griffith, Encyclopaedia Britannica, 1929).

Some scholars, however, date the Oppression and the Exodus in the century preceding Rameses II, and connect it with the religious revolution of Amenophis IV, or Ikhnaton (1383–1365). This extraordinary personality abolished the multitudinous deities of the Egyptian Pantheon, and devoted himself exclusively to the worship of the Sun. These scholars hold that there was some relation between the faith of the Israelites and the solar monotheism of Ikhnaton, and that Israelite influence was partly responsible for this assault on the gross idolatry of Egypt. Ikhnaton was hated by the people as the "heretic king," and his innovations were abandoned by his son-in-law Tut-an-khamen who succeeded him, eventually to be altogether uprooted by Haremrab, the last Pharaoh of the Eighteenth Dynasty. When the native religion was restored—these scholars maintain—the Israelites suffered persecution and degradation; and the Oppression formed part of the extirpation of Ikhnaton's heresy.

Other Egyptologists go back still another century to Thotmes III (1503–1449), and declare him to have been the Pharaoh of the Oppression. They connect the Oppression and the departure of the Israelites from Egypt with the movements of the Habiri people in the Amarna age (see Genesis, p. 129), and believe that the recently discovered inscriptions on the Sinai Peninsula likewise favour this theory.

One of the main reasons which induce both these groups of scholars to dissent from the general view that Rameses II was the Pharaoh of the Oppression, is the fact that the name "Israel" is alleged to occur on an inscription of Menremptah. That Inscription (discovered in 1896) is a song of triumph of Menremptah, describing in grandiloquent language his victories in Canaan; and, among other conquests, he boasts that "Canaan is seized with every evil; Ashkelon is carried away; Gezer is taken; Yenoam is annihilated; Ysiraal is desolated, its seed is not." From the phrase, "Ysiraal is desolated," these scholars deduce that the Israelites must in those days have been in possession of Canaan; and that, therefore, the Exodus must have taken place long before the time of Menremptah. However, it is not at all certain that the words, "Ysiraal is desolated," refer to Israel at all. Thus, Prof. Kennett takes the phrase as analogous with that concerning Ashkelon and Gezer; and, therefore, as merely stating that Menremptah had devastated the district of "Jezreel." And if "Ysiraal" does mean Israel, then it refers to the settlements in Palestine by Israelites from Egypt before the Exodus (Jampel). From various notices in I Chronicles we see that during the generations preceding the Oppression, the Israelites did not remain confined to Goshen or even to Egypt proper, but spread into the southern Palestinian territory, then under Egyptian control, and that they even engaged in skirmishes with the Philistines. When the bulk of the nation had left Egypt and was wandering in the Wilderness, these Israelite settlers had thrown off their Egyptian allegiance. And it is these settlements which Menremptah boasts of having devastated during his Canaanite campaign. There is, therefore, no cogent reason for dissenting from the current view that the Pharaoh of the Oppression was Rameses II, with his son Menremptah as the Pharaoh of the Exodus.

III

The "Inconvenience" of Biblical Traditions

Little need be said in regard to the extreme and baseless scepticism, recently revived in Soviet anti-religious circles, that the Israelites never were in Egypt; and that, in consequence, there could not have been either an Oppression or an Exodus.

There is one conclusive answer to the doubts as to the historicity of the Exodus and other crucial events in Scriptural history; and that is, what has aptly been called, the "inconvenience" of Biblical traditions. One or two examples will both explain this argument and make clear its unanswerable force. The first example is taken from the story of Abraham. For centuries, the Hebrew tribes waged a life-and-death struggle with the native population for the possession of ancient Palestine. But instead of the Hebrews claiming that they too were natives of Canaan, or that they were the true aborigines of its soil, Bible Tradition concerning the beginnings of the Hebrew people is emphatic that its ancestors were not born in Canaan, but were nomads, immigrant shepherds, and had their origin in Ur of the Chaldees. Now, even the sceptical historian is forced to admit that such a tradition must be based on strict history, as no people would invent such an inconvenient tradition in regard to a matter of vital importance like its right and title to its national homeland. To take another example. The record in Genesis that Isaac and Jacob married Aramaean wives must be based on fact, and could not have arisen, as some Bible critics maintain, in the days of Monarchy. For throughout the days of the Monarchy, Aram was the hereditary enemy of Israel, and was guilty of the most hideous barbarities in its continued attempts to annihilate Israel. It is clear that here too the tradition that the "Mothers" of the Israelite people were Aramaean women, was an inconvenient one—and cannot therefore be an invention of later legend (Cornill, Jirku).

All this applies with immeasurably greater force in regard to the historicity of the Oppression in Egypt. Compared with the Egyptian bondage and the deliverance therefrom, everything else in Bible history is of secondary importance. The memory of that bondage and deliverance is woven into the message of legislator, historian, psalmist, prophet and priest; and a large portion of Jewish life both in the Biblical and the post-Biblical ages is but a זכר ליציאת מצרים, an echo and reminder of that Divine event which meant the birth of Israel as a nation. Now, it is unthinkable that any nation, unless forced to do so by the overwhelming compulsion of unforgettable fact, would of its own account have wantonly affixed to its forefathers the stain and dishonour of slavery in a foreign country. No people has ever yet invented a disgraceful past for itself. The invention by a later age of a story so humiliating to national self-respect would be still more astounding in the case of Israel, when we consider that after the days of Menremptah the decline of Egypt began, and the invented national bondage would have been to a weak and waning Power. If, therefore, Israel's sojourn and bondage in Egypt were merely a fiction, such fiction would be quite inexplicable—in fact, a psychological miracle. Even a radical student of this question like Prof. Peet sums up his conclusions as follows: "That Israel was in Egypt under one form or another no historian could possibly doubt; a legend of such tenacity representing the early fortunes of a people under so unfavourable an aspect, could not have arisen save as a reflection of real occurrences."

Note B

ISRAEL AND EGYPT: THE SPIRITUAL CONTRAST

Israel and Egypt represent two world-conceptions, two ways of looking on God and Man that are not merely in conflict, but mutually exclusive.

For ages Egypt was the Land of Wonder, and men spoke in awe of the wisdom of the Egyptians. We now know that they were indeed a wonderful people; but that it is only in the arts and crafts, and especially in their colossal and titanic architecture, that they attained truly astonishing results.

The real tests of a nation's civilisation, however, are far other than these. The supreme test is its vision of God. Now what were the objects of Egyptian worship? Stocks and stones, and, above all else, the beast. While there are traces, albeit faint traces, that the men of the Nile Valley were capable of learning both in religion and in conduct, they seem to have been quite incapable of forgetting. Egypt never discarded the low animism and savage fetishism of its pre-historic days, and remained always "zoomorphic" in its conception of God: bulls, crocodiles, beetles, apes, cats and goats—these were its gods. There were, it is true, stammerings of something nobler; glimpses of higher religious truth; but these remained only glimpses—like flashes of light for one brief moment in the night-time, leaving greater darkness, Egyptian darkness, behind them. Once only was an attempt made by that remarkable man, Amenophis IV, to reform the barbarism of Egyptian worship and to put a kind of monotheism in its place. The sun was to be worshipped as the single deity under the name of Aton; and he changed his own name to Ikhnaton, "Glory to the Sun." But the reformation was a failure. He died amid the curses of his subjects, and the old confused polytheism returned stronger than ever. "We have no grounds for holding the opinion," says Prof. R. H. Hall, "that the educated Egyptian priest, far less the man in the street, normally accepted any pious theories of a latent monotheism, underlying his blatant polytheism. Ikhnaton was branded as a criminal; and after his failure, we go back to the old spells and mumbo-jumbo again . . . till the death of the Egyptian religion in the days of Justinian. In religious matters, the Egyptians at all periods (except the educated at the end of the Eighteenth Dynasty) were in the mental condition of the blacks of the Gold Coast and Niger delta. They had 'mysteries,' of course, like the Ashantis or Ibos. It is a mistake, however, to think that these mysteries enshrined truth, and that there was an occult 'faith' behind them. There is no more proof of it than in the case of the Ashantis or Ibos" (Encyclopaedia Britannica, 1929).

Now where there is no vision of God there can be no vision of man. Hence the insignificance of man in the Egyptian world-conception. They bent the knee to the beast, but man throughout Egyptian history was in bondage. Human life had absolutely no value. The lives of vast multitudes of men were sacrificed in connection with the frenzied building schemes. Herodotus tells us that in the time of Pharaoh Necho II (609–588 B.C.E.), 120,000 labourers were worked to death in the construction of a canal connecting the Nile and the Red Sea. The pyramids, erected by the tyrant's unlimited command of human forces, remain everlasting monuments of human slavery—and of the national deification of reckless and irresponsible power.

In eternal contrast to Egypt, the whole story of Israel is one long protest against idolatry and inhumanity. A single incident in the life of a Jewish ruler will illustrate the world-wide difference between Israel and Egypt. King Jehoiakim, a contemporary of Pharaoh Necho II, tried to emulate his example, and he built himself palaces by means of forced labour. In Egypt, such a thing was taken as a matter of course, as the unquestioned prerogative of the king. In Israel, that enterprise was deemed an outrage against reason and human decency. Jeremiah the Prophet arose and came to the door of Jehoiakim's palace, crying: "Woe unto him that buildeth his house by unrighteousness, and his chambers by injustice; that useth his neighbour's service without wages, and giveth him not his hire. . . . . Thine eyes and thine heart are not but for thy covetousness, and for to shed innocent blood, and for oppression, and for violence, to do it. Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah, king of Judah: They shall not lament for him. He shall be buried with the burial of an ass, drawn and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem" (Jer. XXII, 13, 17-19). These words of Jeremiah are but a Prophetic echo of the Israelite's cry for freedom that pierced the heavens in the days of Moses: they are but the translation of the trumpet sounds of the Exodus and the Sinaitic Covenant with their Divine and everlasting proclamation of the rights of man.

Another characteristic element in the religious life of Egypt was Worship of the dead. I give a brief summary of that worship, taken from W. Max Müller's article in the Encyclopaedia Biblica. The huge pyramids alone, says Prof. Müller, would be sufficient to testify that the Egyptians devoted greater zeal than any nation on earth to the abodes of their dead, and to the sustenance of their souls by sacrifices. The Bible of the Egyptians is the so-called "Book of the Dead." It contains magic formulae for the guidance of man after death, warning him of the dangers he might expect to meet, and providing him with powerful spells—previously placed on the coffins for this purpose—to guarantee his safety. When the dead man reached the great Judgment Hall of the god Osiris, his moral life was tested. In the course of that judgment, the deceased denied that he ever committed any of the 42 cardinal sins. (R. H. Hall rightly says: The Egyptian was never a humble person, either genuinely or hypocritically. When he confessed he did not say, "I am guilty"; he said, "I am not guilty"; his confession was negative, and the onus probandi lay on his judges). Simultaneously with the doctrine just stated, there existed the conflicting belief that the departed souls lived in darkness and misery in the nether world, persecuted by evil spirits, so that it was best for the dead person to become, by witchcraft, one of these evil monsters himself.

No wonder that the influence of the Egyptian religion on the lives of men was not very profound. In every respect the morality of the Egyptians seems to have been lax. One example will suffice. The tombs were almost invariably broken into soon after burial, and no military protection could prevent even the royal tombs from being plundered.

When we compare the Egyptian attitude towards death with that of the Pentateuch, we see in the latter what appears to be a deliberate aim to wean the Israelites from Egyptian superstition. In this way alone, can we explain the silence of Israel's Torah in regard to the Life after Death. On the one hand, there is not a word concerning immortality, or concerning reward and punishment in the Hereafter ; and, on the other hand, there is rigorous proscription of all magic and sorcery, of sacrificing to the dead, as well as every form of alleged intercourse with the world of spirits. Israel's Faith is a religion of life, not of death ; a religion that declares man's humanity to man as the most acceptable form of adoration of the One God, the Creator of heaven and earth, Who is from everlasting to everlasting.

Israel while in Egypt was yet but a child, and was not strong enough to withstand Egypt in Egypt. Only out of Egypt could it grow, uncontaminated by noxious influences of a decadent civilisation. Only when liberated from the contagion of a nation of mere childish stammerers in the things of the Spirit, could it flourish, and fill the earth with the glad tidings of a God of holiness and pity, and the message of Righteousness to men and nations.

4. of their sojournings. The land of their temporary abode, in which they resided as strangers, but which was promised to their descendants as a permanent possession.

5. I have heard. The pronoun is emphatic; i.e. the same Being who established the Covenant. The context of the passage implying: "I am unchangeable and My plans are unalterable. I have promised to your ancestors the possession of Canaan after a certain time of trial and misery; this period of oppression is now drawing near its close; and I shall therefore fulfil My promise by rescuing you with great judgments from your oppressors" (Kalisch).

6. I will redeem you. Heb. gaal means, "to reclaim, redeem"; hence goel, the technical term for the kinsman whose duty it was to ransom or, if need be, avenge the person or property of his relative. God intervenes in order to ransom His helpless and suffering People from slavery; and in mercy and faithfulness, He becomes their Redeemer (goel).

heritage. Heb. morashah, the same word used in Deut. XXXIII, 4 of the Torah. This is significant. Israel has been offered two heritages: the one spiritual—the Torah—is unconditional and eternal. Not so the other heritage, the Land of Promise. Its possession depends upon Israel's appreciation of, and obedience to, its God-given Law (Hirsch).

I am the LORD. Or, "I am ADONAY." The message to Moses closes with the same Divine assertion with which it opens—God is a God of faithfulness, and His promises are unfailingly realised.

13. unto Moses and unto Aaron. God replies by charging Aaron to take part with Moses in the emancipation of Israel (Rashi).

CHAPTER VI, 14–VII, 7. THE GENEALOGY OF MOSES AND AARON

14–27. At this point the narrative gives the genealogical tree of Moses and Aaron, who now assume leadership of the People. In giving the chiefs of the families of the tribe of Levi, the names of the families of the two elder tribes are included, possibly to show that even as Moses was not the eldest son of Amram, Kohath was not the eldest son of Levi. The firstborn according to nature is not always the "firstborn" in the sight of God. This thought is general in Scripture. Abel, Shem, Isaac, Jacob, Levi, Judah, Joseph, Ephraim, Moses, David, were none of them eldest sons in their families.

12. And Moses spake before the LORD, saying, Behold, the children of Israel have not hearkened unto me; how then shall Pharaoh hear me, who am of uncircumcised lips?

20. Amram. Referred to, but not mentioned, in II, 1.

Jochebed. As later in the case of royal persons, e.g. I Kings XV, 2, the name of the mothers of Moses and Aaron, Eleazar and Phineas, are given. The name means, "Adonay is my glory" (which shows that, contrary to the belief of Bible critics, even according to "P," the name Adonay was used before the days of Moses. Some scholars maintain that it was known in Abraham's home, long before Abraham. There is nothing contrary to Jewish tradition in such a belief.)

Aaron and Moses. Miriam is not mentioned, as the descent in the male line only is traced.

21. Korah. See Num. XVI, 1 and I Chron. VI, 22.

prophet. Spokesman; this is the original meaning of the Semitic root of the Heb. nabi, prophet. Aaron would give utterance to the words communicated by God to Moses, or to the thoughts which God put into the mind of Moses, with reference to Pharaoh. The Prophets are inspired spokesmen of God's will. They warn the people of the consequences of disobedience, and they often foretell events; but the latter is not their primary function.

The appointment of Moses to be "in God's stead to Pharaoh" is announced with a similar formula, "I am Adonay"; and his official activity, like that of Joseph, is prefaced by the statement of his age. This disposes of the belief that I am Adonay in VI, 2 is any revelation of a new Name of God.

THE TEN PLAGUES

"Bible story is nowhere more vivid than in its picture of the Plagues of Egypt. Pharaoh is the incarnation of sullen force, yielding by inches, or for a single moment, only to and Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh and before his servants, and it became a serpent.

11. Then Pharaoh also called for the wise men and the sorcerers: and they also, the magicians of Egypt, did in like manner with their secret arts.
12. For they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents: but Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods. 13. And Pharaoh's heart was strong, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken.

harden his heart when the crisis is past. But it is human strength matching itself against the inexhaustible resources of nature, which Moses is permitted to wield. The river which is Egypt's pride runs with blood; from out its reed-grass, frogs invade the secret recesses of luxury; the dust of the ground takes life, to become loathsome vermin; indoors and outside, there is no escape from swarming flies and corruption. While all over the land of Egypt beasts are dying of murrain, in Israel's land of Goshen the cattle are intact. The royal magicians, seeking to compete with the wonders of Moses, become themselves victims to the plague of boils. Now the heavens begin to play their part, and rain down wasting hail; while, to enhance the wonder, fire winds about the hailstones and melts them not. The land of Egypt is one mass of desolation; but from outside, the east wind blows steadily until the swarming locusts hide the ground; at a sign from the champion of Israel, the western hurricane succeeds, and the locust hosts are swept into the Red Sea. Then the whole scene dissolves into darkness that might be felt; every man a solitary prisoner where he stands. At last, midnight reveals the slain firstborn, and Pharaoh and his people thrust Israel forth" (R. G. Moulton).

Who is the LORD that I should hearken unto his voice to let Israel go? I know not the LORD, and moreover I will not let Israel go, was the reply of Pharaoh to the message of the God of Righteousness who demanded justice for Israel, His firstborn son. Pharaoh, too, is a child of God, but "a rebellious son" (Deut. XXI, 18) who must be chastised,

14 ס וַיֹּאמֶר
טו יְהוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה כָּבֵד לֵב פַּרְעֹה מֵאֵן לְשַׁלַּח הָעָם׃ לֵךְ
אֶל־פַּרְעֹה בַּבֹּקֶר הִנֵּה יֹצֵא הַמַּיְמָה וְנִצַּבְתָּ לִקְרָאתוֹ עַל־ before he will let his bondmen go free. The Plagues are disciplinary chastisements of God. Instead of annihilating the tyrant by one mighty stroke, God, in His Divine forbearance, inflicted ten successive plagues to break his pride. "See how different are the ways of God from the ways of men," say the Rabbis; "when a mortal warrior would destroy his enemy, he attacks him by surprise; he spaces not out his blows; and when he has him beneath his feet, he makes an end of him. But God warned Pharaoh ten times, and ten times gave him respite to repent; and before punishing him, He ten times showed him His mercy." For there is grace and merciful forgiveness for those who repent; but there is unsparing punishment for those who, hardening their hearts to the voice of God, continue to oppress their fellowmen.

The Ten Plagues form a symmetrical and regularly unfolding scheme. The first nine plagues consist of three series of three each; (a) blood, frogs, gnats; (b) fleas, murrain, boils; (c) hail, locusts, darkness. In each series the first plague is announced to Pharaoh beforehand at the brink of the Nile, the second is proclaimed by Moses at the Palace, and the third is sent without warning. Each series of plagues rises to a climax, the final series is the climax of all that preceded; and these are but the prelude to the tenth plague—the death of the firstborn, which seals the completeness of the whole. The first nine plagues, though often spoken of as wonders, are not fantastic miracles without any basis in natural phenomena. As everywhere else in Scripture, the supernatural is here interwoven with the natural; and the Plagues are but miraculously intensified forms of the diseases and other natural occurrences to which Egypt is more or less liable. Between June and August, the Nile usually turns to a dull red, owing to the presence of vegetable matter. Generally after this time, the slime of the river breeds a vast number of frogs; and the air is filled with swarms of tormenting insects. We can, therefore, understand that an exceptional defilement of the Nile would vastly increase the frogs which swarm in its waters; that

14. And the LORD said unto Moses, Pharaoh's heart is stubborn, he refuseth to let the people go.
15. Get thee unto Pharaoh in the morning; lo, he goeth out unto the water; and thou shalt the huge heaps of decaying frogs would inevitably breed great swarms of flies, which, in turn, would spread the disease-germs that attacked the animals and flocks in the pest-ridden region of the Nile. But, whether we place the greater emphasis on the natural or on the supernatural in the account of the Plagues, we must never forget the purpose for which they were recorded. As is true of every Scripture narrative, the purpose is not so much to give an exhaustive archaeological or even historical chronicle, as it is moral and religious instruction. "The story of the plagues is drawn with unfading colours, and its typical and didactic significance cannot be overrated. It depicts the impotence of man's strongest determination when it essays to contend with God, and the fruitlessness of all human efforts to frustrate His purposes" (Driver).

Moreover, the contest was far more than a dramatic humiliation of the unrepentant and infatuated tyrant. It was nothing less than a judgment on the gods of Egypt. The plagues fell on the principal divinities that were worshipped since times immemorial in the Nile valley. The River was a god; it became loathsome to its worshippers. The frog was venerated as the sign of fruitfulness, and it was turned into a horror. The cattle—the sacred ram, the sacred goat, the sacred bull—were all smitten. The sacred beetle became a torment to those who put their trust in its divinity. When we add to these, the plague of darkness, which showed the eclipse of Ra, the Sun-god, we see that we have here a contrast between the God of Israel, the Lord of the Universe, and the senseless idols of a senile civilisation; as it is written (XII, 12) "against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgements; I am the LORD."

20. he lifted up. i.e. Aaron.

21. the blood was throughout all the land. As stated above, the waters of the Nile frequently turn a dull red colour at the annual rising. The supernatural character of the visitation was attested by the suddenness and intensity of the change, and by its effect in killing the fish and making the water unfit for use.

22. did in like manner. From where did the magicians obtain water for their experiment, as all the water had been turned into blood? asks Ibn Ezra. They took rain (Midrash), or they obtained the water from Goshen, or they dug for it (v. 24).

23. neither did he lay even this to heart. Referring to the first miracle of Aaron's serpent to which he paid no attention. To make an apparent change of small quantities of water into blood, was one of the common tricks of Egyptian magic. Pharaoh, therefore, disregarding the universality and completeness of Moses' miracle, thought it nothing more than what he had often seen done by his magicians.

25. seven days were fulfilled. Evidently referring to the duration of the plague. Nothing is said about the restora-

And the fish that was in the river died; and the river stank, and the Egyptians could not drink water from the river; and the blood was throughout all the land of Egypt. 22. And the magicians of Egypt did in like manner with their enchantments: and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken. 23. And Pharaoh turned and went into his house, neither did he lay even this to heart. 24. And all the Egyptians digged round about the river for water to drink; for they could not drink of the water of the river. 25. CHAPTER VIII

8 1. And the LORD said unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch forth thine hand with thy rod over the rivers, over the canals, and over the pools, and cause frogs to come up upon the land of Egypt.
2. And Aaron stretched out his hand over the waters of Egypt; and the frogs came up, and covered the land of Egypt. 3. And the magicians did in like manner with their enchantments, and brought up frogs upon the land of Egypt. 4.
Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, Intreat the LORD, that he take away the frogs from me, and from my people; and I will let the people go, that they may sacrifice unto the LORD. 5. And Moses said unto Pharaoh, Have thou this glory over me: against what time shall I intreat for thee, and for thy servants, and for thy people, that the frogs be destroyed from thee and thy houses, and remain in the river glory over me, in fixing the time when the plague shall cease at my entreaty" (Luzzatto). The words are a polite address to the king.

6. against to-morrow. "To-morrow" (AV).

that there is none like the Lord. The removal of the plague at a time fixed by Pharaoh himself, should be conclusive evidence to him that it was sent by God (Driver).

7. in the river only. Where they would naturally be at any time.

8. Moses cried. The expression is a strong one. Moses had ventured to allow Pharaoh to fix a time for the removal of the plague, without the Divine approval. Hence earnest prayer was necessary (Ibn Ezra).

9. courts. Belonging to the private houses.

10. they gathered them. Better, they piled them.

from thee, and from thy houses, and from thy servants, and from thy people; they shall remain in the river only. 8. And Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh: and Moses cried unto the LORD concerning the frogs which he had brought upon Pharaoh. 9. And the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and the frogs died out of the houses, out of the courts, and out of the fields. 10. And they gathered them together in heaps: and the land stank. 11. But when Pharaoh saw that there was respite, he hardened his heart, and hearkened not unto them;
as the LORD had spoken.

12. And the LORD said unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch out thy rod, and smite the dust of the earth, that it may become lice throughout all the land of Egypt. 13. And they did so;
and Aaron stretched out his hand with his rod,
and smote the dust of the earth, and there were lice upon man, and upon beast; all the dust of the earth became lice throughout all the land of Egypt. 14. And the magicians did so with their

14. to bring forth. Or, "to remove," the gnats (Chizkuni, Hirsch).

15. the finger of God. The magicians had encouraged Pharaoh in his defiance of the Divine will; hence, their confessed failure now is the more complete. They discern the hand or work of God in the plague.

16–28. The Fourth Plague: Beetles

17. swarms of flies. Heb. ha-arob, a collective singular, from a root, meaning "to mix." The authorities again differ as to the exact interpretation; some render, "a mixture of noxious animals" (Rashi); others, "beetles" (Kalisch). "The beetle or scarab, was sacred and was regarded as the emblem of the Sun-god. It was sculptured on monuments, painted on tombs, engraved on gems, worn round the neck as an amulet and honoured in ten thousand images" (Geikie).

18. sever. Or, "set apart" (AJ), dividing and miraculously distinguishing Goshen from the rest of Egypt. "Such enchantments to bring forth lice, but they could not: and there were lice upon man, and upon beast. 15. Then the magicians said unto Pharaoh, This is the finger of God: and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken.

16. And the LORD said unto Moses, Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh; lo, he cometh forth to the water; and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Let my people go, that they may serve me. 17. Else, if thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send swarms of flies upon thee, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thy houses: and the houses of the Egyptians shall be full of swarms of flies, and also the ground whereon they are. 18. And I will sever in that day the land of Goshen, in which my people dwell, that no swarms of flies shall be there; to the end thou mayest know that I am the LORD in the midst of the earth.* vi 19. And I will put a division between my people and thy people: by to-morrow shall this sign be. 20. And the LORD did so; and there came grievous swarms of flies into the house of Pharaoh, and into his servants' houses: and in swarms may advance along particular lines, and so spare a given district" (Dillmann).

I am the LORD in the midst of the earth. Although My glory is in Heaven, My will is omnipotent on earth (Rashi).

19. I will put a division. Or, "set a sign of deliverance."

did the Egyptians and their cattle suffer, but the daily occupations of the people were interrupted.

21. in the land. But not in the wilderness, as demanded by Moses. At last the king begins to yield.

22. abomination of the Egyptians. The animals which the Hebrews would sacrifice were sacred to the Egyptians. The sacrifice of these animals would, consequently, shock them; it would be an abominable crime in their eyes. Moses had good ground for his fear. The ancient historian Diodorus tells of a Roman ambassador who was put to death in Egypt for killing a cat. We need only think of Hindu riots at the slaughtering of cows by Moslems in our own days.

23. three days' journey. Idiomatic expression for a long distance; see III, 18.

all the land of Egypt the land was destroyed by reason of the swarms of flies. 21. And Pharaoh called for Moses and for Aaron, and said, Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land. 22. And Moses said, It is not meet so to do; for we shall sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians to the LORD our God: lo, shall we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not stone us? 23. We will go three days' journey into the wilderness, and sacrifice to the LORD our God, as he shall command us. 24. And Pharaoh said, I will let you go, that ye may sacrifice to the LORD your God in the wilderness; only ye shall not go very far away: intreat for me. 25. And Moses said, Behold, I go out from thee, and I will intreat the LORD that the swarms of flies may depart from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people, to-morrow: only let not Pharaoh deal deceitfully any more in not letting the people go to sacrifice to the LORD. 26. And Moses went out from Pharaoh, and intreated the LORD. 27. And the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and he removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people; there remained not one. 28. And Pharaoh hardened his heart this time also, and he did not let the people go.

25. deal deceitfully. Or, "mock." Moses fears Pharaoh will once more prove faithless, as in v. 11 after the promise to let the people go.

28. this time also. As he had done before. On this occasion he had given a more definite promise (v. 24).

1. then the Lord said. lit. "and the Lord said"; the announcement to Pharaoh is worded in the same way as those of the second and fourth plagues in the previous chapter.

3. a very grievous murrain. A "rinderpest"; see v. 15. camels. Traders who brought merchandise across the Arabian desert early introduced the camel into Egypt; see Gen. xxxvii, 25. Horses, which are said to have been unknown there prior to the Hyksos invasion, became common under the Eighteenth Dynasty, when they were used in war.

sprinkle. Better, toss.

9. small dust. The disease would be carried through Egypt by the air.

11. the magicians could not stand. Not only were they unable to imitate it, but they were themselves included in the affliction.

12. made the heart...strong. "Pharaoh's sin preceded and provoked God's punishments, which, however, far from moving his stubborn heart, tended to harden it still more, and to bring him into a self-conscious opposition to the God of Israel" (Kalisch). See note on IV, 21.

14 and 15. These two verses are interdependent, and RV does not make this clear. Moffatt translates v. 15; "Otherwise, I would have exerted my force and struck you furnace, and let Moses sprinkle it toward the heaven in the sight of Pharaoh. 9. And it shall become small dust over all the land of Egypt, and shall be a boil breaking forth with blains upon man and upon beast, throughout all the land of Egypt. 10. And they took ashes of the furnace, and stood before Pharaoh; and Moses sprinkled it up toward heaven; and it became a boil breaking forth with blains upon man and upon beast. 11. And the magicians could not stand before Moses because of the boils; for the boils were upon the magicians, and upon all the Egyptians. 12. And the LORD made the heart of Pharaoh strong, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken unto Moses.

13. And the LORD said unto Moses, Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, the God of

and upon thy people; that thou mayest know

very deed for this cause have I made thee to

17. As yet exaltest thou thyself against my people, that thou wilt not let them go? 18. Behold, to-morrow about this time I will cause it to rain
a very grievous hail, such as hath not been in Egypt since the day it was founded even until now. 19. Now therefore send, hasten in thy cattle, and all that thou hast in the field; for every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be brought home, the hail shall come down upon them, and they shall die.

23. fire ran down unto the earth. Probably lightning is implied. Luzzatto suggests thunderbolts.

24. fire mingled with the hail. RV Margin gives, "And fire flashing continually amidst the hail." Perhaps forked or zigzag lightning is meant.

25. every herb of the field. lit. "all the grass of the field"; all, according to the Heb. usage meaning a great part.

26. only in the land of Goshen. See VIII, 22; IX, 4, 7.

27–33. Pharaoh craves a third time for the cessation of the Plague (see VIII, 8, 28)

27. I have sinned this time. Pharaoh this time confesses his fault as he had never done before. His penitence, however, as the sequel shows, is not very deep (Driver).

And the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt all that was in the field, both man and beast; and the hail smote every herb of the field, and brake every tree of the field. 26. Only in the land of Goshen, where the children of Israel were, was there no hail. 27. And Pharaoh sent, and called for Moses and Aaron, and said unto them, I have sinned this time: the LORD is righteous, and I and my people are wicked. 28. Intreat the LORD; for there hath been enough of these mighty thunderings and hail; and I will let you go, and ye shall stay no longer. 29. And Moses said unto him, As soon as I am gone out of the city, I will spread abroad my hands unto the LORD; the thunders shall cease, neither shall there be any more hail; that thou mayest know that the earth is the LORD'S. 30. But as for thee and thy servants, I know that ye will not yet fear the LORD God. 31. And the flax and the barley were smitten: for the barley was in the ear, and the flax was in bloom.

30. ye will not yet fear. i.e. you do not yet stand in awe of Him, so as to set Israel free.

31. flax and the barley were smitten. The time indicated by this verse and the one following is about the end of January or the beginning of February. Flax was much esteemed by the Egyptians, and Egypt was the great linen market of the ancient world. Barley took the place occupied by oats in Europe and America; it was used for making a coarse bread eaten by the poor.

Pharaoh saw that the rain and the hail and the thunders were ceased, he sinned yet more, and not let the children of Israel go; as the LORD had spoken by Moses.

Note C

DOES EXODUS VI, 3 SUPPORT THE HIGHER CRITICAL THEORY?

This query, as well as the answer to it, may have little meaning and no interest to the general reader. In that case, he will be well advised to skip the next four pages. There is, however, a good number of laymen who are aware of the crucial significance that is attached to Exodus VI, 3 in modern Biblical study. For them it is of utmost importance that the question which forms the title of this Note be dealt with in a thoroughgoing way. Even the man who is not possessed of technical knowledge will then see how feeble, how insubstantial, is the Pillar on which so much of Bible Critical Theory rests.

I

Contrary to what we have seen to be the plain meaning of Exodus VI, 3, Bible Critics declare that, according to the author of this chapter, the Name Y H W H (Adonay) is here revealed for the first time to Moses. Therefore—they hold—all those chapters in Genesis and Exodus in which Adonay (or the LORD, in English) occurs, must have been written by another hand than Exodus VI, 3. They point to this verse as unanswerable proof of the alleged plurality of "sources" in the Pentateuch (see Genesis, p. 105–109); and Exodus VI, 3 is accordingly proclaimed in every learned and popular treatise on the Critical treatment of the Bible as the "clue" to the various sources of the Pentateuch.

The current Critical explanation of this verse, however, rests on a total misunderstanding of Hebrew idiom. When Scripture states that Israel, or the nations, or Pharaoh, "shall know that God is Adonay"—this does not mean that they shall be informed that His Name is Y H W H (Adonay), as the Critics would have it; but that they shall come to witness His power and comprehend those attributes of the Divine nature which that Name denotes. Thus, Jer. XVI, 21, "I will cause them to know my hand and my might, and they shall know that my name is Adonay." In Ezekiel the phrase, "They shall know that I am Adonay," occurs more than sixty times. Nowhere does it mean, They will know Him by the four letters of His Name. Every time it means, They will know Him by His acts and the fulfilment of His promises (see, e.g., the Haftorah of this Sedrah)

If a new Name indeed were here announced for the first time, Hebrew idiom would require the use of the verb הגיד, (cf. Gen. XXXII, 30; Judges XIII, 6); and the actual phrase would be ושמי ד׳ לא הגדתי להם. B. Jacob has shown that the revelation of a new name of God would have been announced somewhat in the following manner:

הנה לא ידעת עד כה את שמי וגם אל אברהם אל יצחק ואל יעקב לא נודעתי כי אם בשם אל שדי ושמי ד׳ לא הגדתי להם: ועתה הנני מודיעך כי לא אל שדי יקרא עוד שמי כי אם ד׳ יהיה שמי:

"Behold, thou hast not hitherto known my Name; and even unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob I was known only by my Name El Shaddai, but my Name Adonay I did not tell them. Now I make known unto thee that my Name shall no longer be called Shaddai, but Adonay shall my Name be."

As it is, the writer of VI, 3 could not possibly have meant what the Critics attempt to read into his words. Furthermore, the Critics themselves furnish a most awkward obstacle to their own theory. This is the "Redactor." Think of it. After supposedly combining the story of the Patriarchs from documents constantly using the name Adonay, he now introduces a statement that the Patriarchs had never heard of this Name! By such a statement, that Redactor would have stultified himself completely—if he had ever had any existence outside the imagination of modern Bible critics (W. H. Green).

One of these critics (Dr. J. Skinner) pleads that the Criticial analysis of Scripture is a chain which is a good deal stronger than its weakest link. Whatever this may mean, no one will pretend that a chain can be stronger than its strongest link. And its strongest link,—the alleged proof offered by Exodus VI, 3—consists not alone in disregarding the plain meaning of the text and attributing an absurdity to the Sacred Writer, but actually in sadly belittling the intelligence of the Critics' own creation, the "Redactor."

II

The so-called Analysis of Sources, with its series of non-existent authors and irresponsible "Redactors," is unsupported by any external evidence whatsoever. None of these imaginary sources has come down to us in its original form, or in any form for that matter. "The plurality of sources," complains Naville, "is assumed by the Critics as an indisputable fact. Unity of authorship is ruled out by them from the very first. They must at all costs discover diverse authors, in explanation of a perfectly simple narrative which unfolds itself in the most natural manner. It matters little that the text itself is altogether out of harmony with the conception of the Critics. The text must adjust itself to these conceptions. If it does not, what does it matter: it is at fault. They correct the text; with the result that it agrees with their theory." Moreover, all this wanton tampering with the text leads nowhere. The varying use of the Divine Names does not indicate a difference of authorship, but is due to the different meanings of the Names, the choice of which is carefully considered in each case (see Genesis, p. 17, 107). Differences of style and treatment are called forth by differences in the nature of the subjects treated; e.g. in Exodus, the story of the Deliverance from Egypt demands a strong, energetic narrative; while the account of the building of the Tabernacle calls for technical details. All suggestions of reduplications and contradictions are merely due to an insufficient insight into the spirit and intention of Scripture on the part of the Higher Critics.

Instead of the misleading term "Higher Criticism," its followers now prefer to speak of their school as that of Historical Criticism. This, however, is even more misleading: for nothing is more characteristic of the Higher Critic than the way he refuses to revise his views, in the face of historical discovery which disproves those views. One example will suffice. The Critical theory starts from the assumption that, before the days of Solomon, the Hebrews lived in a state of savagery. Thus, it was one of the "finalities of scholarship" that the art of writing was unknown in ancient Israel. As recently as 1892, an eminent exponent of that theory asserted deliberately, "The time, of which the pre-Mosaic narratives treat, is a sufficient proof of their legendary character. It was a time prior to all knowledge of writing." Others said the same thing of the Mosaic age. Whereas to-day, Professor Sellin—a leading exegete, excavator and historian—says: "That the question should ever have been raised whether Moses could have known how to write, appears to us now absurd. Every petty Canaanitish 'king' of a city-state had his scribe, who conducted his correspondence and kept the necessary lists." But though the main assumption on which the Critical speculations are based has been proved false, the Higher Critics remained as imperturbable as ever. An unimpeachable witness like Prof. Kittel, the eminent historian, recently wrote: "The facts themselves had rendered a large portion of Wellhausen's hypothesis untenable. One would have thought that Wellhausen would have taken note of this new knowledge. But he never retracted or modified any of his theories; and his followers continued writing and building on his hypothesis, as if nothing had happened." Wellhausen's devotees to-day still continue writing, as if nothing had happened; and his speculations are still proclaimed as truths which it is heresy to question, by the popularizers, hacks and journeymen of theological literature, especially in English-speaking countries.

The leaders, however, are not as confident as they used to be in regard to the criterion of the Divine Names for the supposed separateness of the "sources." Jewish and Christian scholars like Hoffmann and Wiener, Dahse and Eerdmans, W. H. Green and Naville have not laboured in vain; and the Critical structure begun in 1753, and completed with so much jubilation by Wellhausen, his forerunners and his disciples, is crumbling before our very eyes. Dr. B. Jacob recalls the fact that even as late as 1910, a Liberal-Jewish Critic had such an absolute faith in the Critical division of the Pentateuch according to the well known symbols J, E, P, D, R, etc., that he permitted himself to declare: "If one is to doubt the truth of the Critical analysis, one might just as well doubt the truth of Newton's law of gravitation!" In a statement of this nature, one sees mirrored the dogmatism of the entire school of Bible Criticism. Little did they dream of the Einsteins that were to arise, who, in the field of Physics would restate the law of gravitation according to new categories of thought; and, in the field of Bible study, shatter the foundations of the Wellhausen hypothesis, and definitely declare its assumptions to be both unscientific and obsolete.

mayest tell. "This phrase is appropriate in regard to the plague of locusts, which constantly recurs in those lands ; and men on such occasions would compare their visitation with preceding ones, and thus be reminded of the unparalleled visitation in the days of Moses" (Bechor Shor).

I have wrought upon Egypt. This rendering (Onkelos, Rashbam, Luther, Mendelssohn, Strack), is borne out by the parallelism in the next clause, "my signs which I have done among them." The Heb. verb is uncommon. It implies an action which brings shame and disgrace upon its objects, making them, so to speak, playthings of Divine power.

CHAPTER X

10 1. And the LORD said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh: for I have made his heart heavy, and the heart of his servants, that I might shew these my signs in the midst of them: 2. and that thou mayest tell in the ears of thy son, and of thy son's son, what things I have wrought upon Egypt, and my signs which I have done among them; that ye may know that I am the LORD.
3. And Moses and Aaron went in unto Pharaoh, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, the God of the Hebrews, How long wilt thou refuse to humble thyself before me? let my people go, that they may serve me. 4. Else, if thou refuse to let my people go, behold, to-morrow will I bring locusts into thy border: 5. and they that ye may know that I am the LORD. See notes on VI, 3–7. The object of the plagues is the education of men in the knowledge of God. Ps. LXXVIII and CV are instances of the instruction of later generations in the meaning of the wonders wrought by God for the Israelites of old.

3. refuse to humble thyself. This was now the real cause of Pharaoh's sin after all these plagues—refusal to humble himself before God. And Pharaoh would not really humble himself, until he made God's will his own, and fulfilled his oft-given promise to permit the Israelites to leave Egypt. His heart was hardened, but his will was still free, and he could repent if he chose.

4. to-morrow. Again another opportunity is given to the king to submit himself to the Divine command.

5. they shall cover the face of the earth. This is literally true of locusts. Lord Bryce thus describes a swarm of locusts :

> " It is a strange sight, beautiful if you can forget the destruction it brings with it. The whole air, to twelve or even eighteen feet above the ground, is filled with the insects, reddish-brown in body, with bright, gauzy wings. When the sun's rays catch them, it is like the seas sparkling with light. When you see them against a cloud, they are like the dense flakes of a driving snowstorm. You feel as if you had never before realised immensity in number. Vast crowds of men gathered at a festival, countless tree-tops rising along the slope of a forest-ridge, the chimneys of London houses from the top of St. Paul's—all are as nothing to the myriads of insects that blot out the sun above, and cover the ground beneath, and fill the air whichever way one looks. The breeze carries them swiftly past, but they come on in fresh clouds, a host of which there is no end, each of them a harmless creature which you can catch and crush in your hand, but appalling in their power of collective devastation."

and they shall eat the residue. Their voracity is incredible. Not only the leaves, but the branches and even the wood are attacked and devoured. The residue here refers to the wheat and the spelt (IX, 32), which escaped the havoc wrought by the hail (Malbim).

7. And Pharaoh's servants said unto him, How long shall this man be a snare unto us? let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God: knowest thou not yet that Egypt is destroyed?
8. And Moses and Aaron were brought again unto Pharaoh: and he said unto them, Go, serve the LORD your God: but who are they that shall go?

go now ye that are men. This policy of Pharaoh has more than once been imitated by Israel's oppressors. After the expulsion from Spain, 80,000 Jews took refuge in Portugal, "relying on the promise of the king. Spanish priests lashed the Portuguese into fury, and the king was persuaded to issue an edict which threw even that of Isabella into the shade. All the adult Jews were banished from Portugal; but first of all their children below the age of fourteen were taken from them to be educated as Christians. Then, indeed, the serene fortitude with which

19. drove them into the Red Sea. A swarm of locusts floats upon an easy breeze, but is beaten down by a storm; and if it touches water it perishes. Pliny also speaks of very grievous were they; before them there were no such locusts as they, neither after them shall be such. 15. For they covered the face of the whole earth, so that the land was darkened; and they did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left: and there remained not any green thing, either tree or herb of the field, through all the land of Egypt. 16. Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron in haste; and he said, I have sinned against the LORD your God, and against you. 17. Now therefore forgive, I pray thee, my sin only this once, and intreat the LORD your God, that he may take away from me this death only. 18. And he went out from Pharaoh, and intreated the LORD. 19. And the LORD turned an exceeding strong west wind, which took up the locusts, and drove them into the Red Sea; there remained not one locust in all the border of Egypt. 20. But the LORD made Pharaoh's heart strong, and he did not let the children of Israel go.

The name, Red Sea (Septuagint), has been variously derived from the corals within its waters, the colour of the mountains bordering its coasts, or the glow of the sky reflected on it.

21–23, Ninth Plague: Darkness

21. darkness over the land of Egypt. "Like the third and sixth plagues, it is inflicted unannounced; and the parleying, the driving of a bargain and then breaking it, by which the eighth was attended, is quite enough to account for this" (Chadwick).

This plague would especially affect the spirits of the Egyptians, whose chief object of worship was Ra, the sun-God. Merenphtah is depicted in a sculptured effigy with the inscription, "He adores the sun."

darkness which may be felt. Explained as an aggravation of the khamsin, or "wind of the desert," which is not uncommon in Egypt, and is accompanied by weird darkness, beyond that of our worst fogs (Rawlinson). The following verses are from the wonderful description of the plague of Darkness in Wisdom of Solomon XVII.

"No force of fire prevailed to give them light, neither were the bright flames of the stars strong enough to illumine that gloomy night;

For wickedness, condemned by a witness within, is a coward thing; and being pressed hard by conscience, always forecasteth the worst lot;

Whether there were a whistling wind, or a melodious noise of birds among the spreading branches, or a measured fall of water running violently:

All these things paralysed them with terror; but for thy saints there was great light."

23. they saw not one another. lit. "man did not see his brother."

neither rose any from his place. Too terrified to move.

had light in their dwellings. i.e. in the land of Goshen.

21. And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be darkness over the land of Egypt, even darkness which may be felt. 22. And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven; and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days; 23. they saw not one another, neither rose any from his place for three days: but all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings.* iii

24. And Pharaoh called unto Moses, and said, Go ye, serve the LORD; only let your flocks and

Prof. Mahler identifies the ninth plague with the solar eclipse of March 13, 1335 B.C.E. which darkened Egypt proper but did not extend as a total eclipse to Goshen; hence, "all the children of Israel had light in their habitations." (Thus, the eclipse of the sun on January 24, 1925, was not visible in the lower half of New York City—96th Street marking the southern limit of the path of totality.) Tradition states that the darkness took place of the first of Nisan, which then fell on a Thursday. If Mahler's identification is correct, we would know the exact date—Thursday, March 27, 1335 B.C.E.—of the Exodus. Prof. Mahler, furthermore, takes the words, "three days" at the end of v. 22, and joins them to v. 23; thus, "Three days they saw not one another, neither rose any from his place three days." Accordingly, the eclipse was on one day only, but its terrifying effects—the blank, utter paralysis of dread—lasted three days. Greek writers have left us graphic descriptions of the effects of eclipses, "when sore fear comes upon men." Herodotus tells us that a total eclipse of the sun in 585 B.C.E., during a battle between the Lydians and Medes, so terrified the combatants that they ceased fighting and concluded peace. When the spectators are "natives," a total eclipse of the sun is the occasion of remarkable scenes in which alarm and despair and anger are intermingled.

24. called unto Moses. After the darkness had passed away.

28. see my face no more. Seek no more admittance to my presence; cf. II Sam. XIV, 24, 28; II Kings XXV, 19. When they once more met, it was the king that changed his purpose; and on his face, not on that of Moses, was the pallor of impending death. In his negotiations with Pharaoh, Moses was ever ready to intercede; he never "reviles the ruler," nor transgresses the limits of courtesy towards the king; yet he never falters nor compromises. Throughout, the dignified bearing is with Moses, the meanness and shame with Pharaoh who begins by insulting him,

4. And Moses said, Thus saith the LORD, About midnight will I go out into the midst of Egypt: 5. and all the firstborn in the land of Egypt shall die, from the firstborn of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the firstborn of the maidservant that is behind the mill; and all the firstborn of cattle. 6. And there shall be a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there hath been none like it, nor shall be like it any more. 7. But against any of the children of Israel shall not a dog move his tongue, firstborn of cattle. The plague of the cattle described in IX, 6 was limited to the "cattle which are in the field." The Heb. words for cattle in IX, 6 is mikneh, whereas here the word behemah is used. The Egyptians paid Divine honours to various animals; and the firstborn of all these beasts were to be doomed.

6. a great cry. The freedom with which Orientals give vent to their emotions is well known. Stuart Poole reports that during the great plague of cholera in 1848, he heard the cries of the women in Cairo two miles off.

Chapter XII

THE INSTITUTION OF THE PASSOVER

The deliverance from Egypt is to be not only from physical but also from spiritual slavery. Israel is to be freed from all heathen influences and consecrated to the service of God. These commandments concerning the Passover open the religious legislation of the Torah. The occasion when they were given, and the manner in which they were enjoined, emphasise the basic importance of that Festival in the life against man or beast: that ye may know how that the LORD doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel. 8. And all these thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow down themselves unto me, saying, Get thee out, and all the people that follow thee: and after that I will go out. And he went out from Pharaoh in hot anger.

9. And the LORD said unto Moses, Pharaoh will not hearken unto you: that my wonders may be multiplied in the land of Egypt. 10. And Moses and Aaron did all these wonders before Pharaoh: and the LORD made Pharaoh's heart strong, and he did not let the children of Israel go out of his land.

CHAPTER XII

and history of Israel. "The Exodus from Egypt is not only one of the greatest events and epochs in the history of the Jews, but one of the greatest events and epochs in the history of the world. To that successful escape, Europe, America and Australia are as much indebted as the Jews themselves. And the men of Europe, the men of America, and the men of Australia might join with us Jews in celebrating that feast of the Passover" (C. G. Montefiore).

beneficent dealings with you and you will be heedful to fear, love and serve Me" (Bechor Shor). The redemption from Egypt is to be both in deed and in word "epoch-making." The Exodus was to mark the beginning of a new era; and not only the years in the national history were to be counted from it (see XVI, 1; XIX, 1; Num. I, 1; I Kings VI, 1), but also the months of each year were to be counted from the first month of Israel's Freedom. Israel is now given a new Calendar, thus making the break with Egypt complete.

The ordinary Jewish year consists of twelve lunar months of a little more than $29\frac{1}{2}$ days each, with every new moon (Rosh Chodesh) a minor festival. As, on the one hand, twelve lunar months total only a little more than $354\frac{1}{3}$ days, eleven days less than the solar year which consists, roughly, of $365\frac{1}{4}$ days; and, on the other hand, the Festivals had to be celebrated in their seasons according to the solar year—Passover in spring, Pentecost in summer, and Tabernacles in autumn—it was essential to harmonise the lunar and solar years. This was done by the "intercalation," or introduction, of an extra month Adar, which made that year a leap year. There are seven such leap years, of thirteen months each, in every cycle of nineteen years. But years, whether ordinary years or leap years, have not a uniform duration in the Jewish reckoning. According as the months of Kislev and Cheshvan have 29 or 30 days, ordinary years vary between 353, 354 and 355 days, and leap years between 383, 384 and 385 days. By these means the mathematical exactness of the Jewish Calendar was secured. A renowned non-Jewish scholar declared, "There is nothing more perfect than the calculation of the Jewish year" (Scaliger).

if the household be too little for a lamb, then shall he and his neighbour next unto his house
take one according to the number of the souls;

Biblical and early Talmudic times, the Sanhedrin fixed the new moons by actual observation, and the dates were announced by messengers from Jerusalem to surrounding countries. Later, the dates were determined by astronomical calculation. Religious considerations decided which year was to be a leap year, and when the months of Kislev and Chesvan were to be "long" (having 30 days) or "short" (29 days). Furthermore, Rosh Hashanah could never be a Sunday, Wednesday or Friday (לא אד״ו ראש השנה), which rule secured, among other things, that the Day of Atonement did not either immediately precede or immediately follow the Sabbath.

3. unto all the congregation of Israel. Hitherto Moses and Aaron had been God's ambassadors to Pharaoh; they now become God's ambassadors to Israel. The "congregation of Israel," adath Yisrael, is the term for the community as a religious entity.

according to their fathers' houses. A "father's house" is here synonymous with mishpachah, a family. The Passover is to be the specific family festival of Israel. And it is noteworthy that the first ordinance of the Jewish religion was a domestic service. A nation is strong so far as it cherishes the domestic sanctities.

4. if the household be too little for a lamb. i.e. too few to consume it at a sitting. "If, however, the men of the house are less than ten" (Jerusalem Targum). Had a family of two or three been compelled to take a lamb, a considerable quantity would have been wasted; see v. 10.

nor sodden at all with water. The lamb was not to be boiled, because this would make the dismemberment of the animal indispensable.

with water. This addition is necessary, as without it the verb בשל means "to roast." The expression ובשלת in Deut. XVI, 7, in regard to the paschal-lamb, receives its proper explanation by II Chron. XXXV, 13, where it is said that they roasted (ויבשלו) the paschal-lamb in fire (Kalisch). It is not to be divided, but to be roasted whole. This rite was probably intended to represent the perfect unity of Israel as a nation. One meal, at one table, eaten whole and eaten entirely (nothing left till the morning).

12. for I will go through the land of Egypt. cf. XI, 4. "The power of God will fearfully manifest itself in the land; His majesty will create terror; His justice will produce awe and veneration—and thus He will pass through the land" (Kalisch).

14–20. Regulations for the Passover Festival

14. for a memorial. In the future. The regulations so far concerned the Passover in Egypt (v. 1–13); now (v. 14–20) the precepts for its future celebration are given.

forever. Israel still keeps it.

15. even the first day . . . leaven out of your houses. Better, Of a surety on the first day ye shall have removed the leaven from your houses " (Mendelssohn). The leaven is therefore removed and symbolically destroyed by fire (ביעור חמץ) on the forenoon of the day before Passover. The Rabbis have also instituted a search for leaven (בדיקת חמץ) on the preceding evening. Leaven is the symbol of corruption, passion and sin.

And in the first day there shall be to you an holy convocation, and in the seventh day an holy convocation; no manner of work shall be done in them, save that which every man must eat, that only may be done of you. 17. And ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread; for in this selfsame day have I brought your hosts out of the land of Egypt: therefore shall ye observe this day throughout your generations by an ordinance for ever. 18. sojourner. Heb. ger. The resident alien. "He was not directed or compelled to assume a religious duty of Israel, but he was prevented from interfering with the religious practices of Israel" (Sulzberger). In later Hebrew law, the resident alien is either a ger tzedek, a righteous proselyte, who has been received into the covenant of Abraham, and thereby enjoys the same privileges and obligations as the born Israelite ; or ger toshab or sha'ar, "the stranger of the gate," the alien squatter who remains outside the religious life of Israel, but who has undertaken to adhere to the seven Noachic laws that are binding upon all men who desire to live in human society ; see Genesis, p. 81.

20. in all your habitations. Even out of Palestine, where there was no paschal lamb offered up, the observance of the Passover festival is obligatory.

gregation of Israel, whether he be a sojourner,

nothing leavened; in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread.* v

21. Then Moses called for all the elders of Israel, and said unto them, Draw out, and take you lambs according to your families, and kill the passover. 22. And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dip it in the blood that is in the bason, and strike the lintel and the two side posts with the blood that is in the bason; and none of you shall go out of the door of his house until the morning. 23. For the LORD will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side posts, the LORD will pass over the door, and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you. 24. And ye shall keep this service. In connection with the paschal lamb.

26. your children shall say. The children of successive generations are to be instructed at Passover as to the origin and significance of the Festival. In the Seder service on the first two nights of Passover, this command has found its solemn realisation. In it we have history raised to religion. The youngest child present asks the Questions, which are answered by a recitation of the events that culminated in the original institution of Passover. Education in the home is thus as old as the Hebrew people; see Gen. XVIII, 19.

Since the destruction of the Temple, the Questions of the child are concerned with the distinctive features of the Seder meal.

And the Egyptians were urgent upon the people, to send them out of the land in haste; for they said, We be all dead men. 34. And the people took their dough before it was leavened, their kneadingtroughs being bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders. 35. And the children of Israel did according to the word of Moses; and they asked of the Egyptians jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: 36. and the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they let them have what they asked. conceiving the departure at one time and in one place, of such a large body of men; but the event has its parallels in history. At the close of the 18th century, 400,000 Tartars started in a single night from the confines of Russia towards the Chinese borders.

on foot that were men. All the males who could march.

flocks, and herds. The Israelites were not all slave-labourers, but also nomad tribes possessing cattle.

39. any victual. Other than the dough.

40. four hundred and thirty years. In Gen. XV, 13, the period of affliction is foretold, and was to be four hundred years, beginning—according to Rabbinic tradition—with the birth of Isaac. The thirty years not accounted for, are supposed to refer to the years that elapsed between the vision when the affliction was foretold and the birth of Isaac (Luzzatto). Others refer these 30 years to the exploit of the Ephraimites who, according to the Book of Chronicles, made a raid out of Egypt a generation before the Exodus.

on foot that were men, beside children. 38. And a mixed multitude went up also with them; and flocks, and herds, even very much cattle. 39.
And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough
which they brought forth out of Egypt, for it was not leavened; because they were thrust out of Egypt, and could not tarry neither had they prepared for themselves any victual. 40. Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, which they sojourned in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years. 41. And it came to pass at the end of four hundred and thirty years, even the selfsame day it came to pass, that all the hosts of the LORD went out from the land of Egypt.
42. It is a night of watching unto the LORD for bringing them out from the land of Egypt: this is that night of the LORD to be much observed of all the children of Israel throughout their generations.

Of these four hundred and thirty years, the Rabbis state, the Israelites were in Egypt for a period of 210 years. This accords with the narrative of Exodus, and with the genealogies given in chap. VI.

41. the selfsame day. The fifteenth of Nisan.

42. of watching. i.e. of keeping in mind. Heb. shimmurim; "of celebration," and, "of vigilance"—are alternative translations. "Because God shielded them, and did not suffer destruction to approach their houses, He ordered that the night be observed by all Israelites as a night of watching, a memorial of the night of redemption" (Ibn Ezra). It was the birthnight of the Israelite nation, and the whole history of Israel is stamped with its memory.

this is that night . . . of all. Or, "this same night is a night of watching unto the Lord for all" (RV Margin).

43–51. Further Regulations regarding the Passover

43. the ordinance of the passover. Introduced here in consequence of what is said concerning the mixed multitude in v. 38 (Abarbanel).

no alien eat thereof. The non-Israelite, who has not chosen to enter the Covenant of Abraham, as well as the man whose deeds have alienated him from his Father in Heaven (Rashi), were not to partake of the paschal meal. It is to be a distinctly Israelite observance.

44. servant. However, a foreigner who as a bought servant permanently enters the family circle of an Israelite, may become a full member of Israel, and, therefore, partake of the Passover.

when thou hast circumcised him. "With his consent" (Ibn Ezra). He cannot be forced to embrace the faith of Israel. Circumcision and Passover belong together; the former is the sign of Israel's election, and of God's covenant with His people; the latter is a sign of the fulfilment of the covenant on God's part (Talmud).

45. a sojourner. i.e. an alien who is his own master; as distinguished from "an hired servant" who, as a rule, is also merely a temporary resident in Israel. The bought slave, however, who has consented to circumcision shares the religious privileges of the born Israelite.

43. And the LORD said unto Moses and Aaron,
This is the ordinance of the passover: there shall no alien eat thereof. 44. but every man's servant that is bought for money, when thou hast circumcised him, then shall he eat thereof.
45. A sojourner and an hired servant shall not eat thereof. 46. In one house shall it be eaten; thou shalt not carry forth aught of the flesh abroad
out of the house; neither shall ye break a bone thereof. 47. All the congregation of Israel shall keep it. 48. And when a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the LORD, let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as one that is born in the land: but no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof. 49. One law shall be to him that is homeborn, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among you. 50. Thus did all the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

46. in one house. i.e. in one company (Rashi).

49. the stranger that sojourneth among you. See v. 19. According to Ibn Ezra, the stranger referred to here is the ger tzedek, the "righteous proselyte." The principle of this injunction—one law shall be to him that is homeborn, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among you—has an application in Jewry beyond the sphere of ritual practice. (See especially Lev. XXIV, 22). It is dominant not only in Jewish moral conduct, but also in the civil legislation of Israel; and, in consequence, Jewish law recognises no distinction in civil rights between native and alien. Only recently this verse was recommended for selection as the motto of the Congress for the Protection of Minority Populations in European Countries.

all the firstborn. Just as the annual celebration of the Passover served to remind the Israelites of the great Redemption, so the sanctification of every male firstborn would keep the memory fresh in every home blessed with a firstborn son. The rite is still remembered in Israel in the ceremony of "Redeeming the son" (pidyon habben) which is solemnised on the thirty-first day of the child's birth; see Authorised Prayer Book, p. 308. Firstborn Israelites keep the fourteenth day of Nisan as a fast, in commemoration of the miracle wrought for their ancestors.

13 1. And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2. Sanctify unto me all the firstborn, whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israel,
both of man and of beast: it is mine.
3. And Moses said unto the people, Remember this day, in which ye came out from Egypt, out of the house of bondage; for by strength of hand the LORD brought you out from this place:
there shall no leavened bread be eaten. 4. This day ye go forth in the month Abib. 5. And it shall be when the Lord shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Amorite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite, which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee, a land flowing with milk and honey, that thou shalt keep this service in this month. 6. Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, and in the seventh day shall be a feast to the LORD.
7. Unleavened bread shall be eaten throughout the seven days; and there shall no leavened bread
be seen with thee, neither shall there be leaven

8. tell thy son. The Rabbis derive from this verse the law that every father should relate on the evening of Passover the story of the Deliverance to his children. The story itself, as formulated for recitation during the domestic service on the eve of Passover, is called Haggadah shel Pesach.

9. and it shall be for a sign unto thee. The Exodus is to be more than a mere annual celebration. Its eternal lessons are to be ever before the mind of the Israelite, by means of a " sign " upon the hand, and of a " memento " between the eyes. The reminders on arm and forehead are called tephillin, a late Heb. plural of תפלה, prayer. Four sections from the Torah (Ex. XIII, 1–10 ; 11–16 ; Deut. VI, 4–9 ; and XI, 13–21) are in the tephillin ; and " these four sections have been chosen in preference to all the other passages of the Torah, because they embrace the acceptance of the Kingdom of Heaven, the unity of the Creator, and the exodus from Egypt—fundamental doctrines of Judaism." (Sefer ha-Chinuch). The purpose of the tephillin is given in the Meditation recited before putting on the tephillin (Authorised Prayer Book, p. 15) :—

" Within these Tephillin are placed four sections of the Law, that declare the absolute unity of God, and that remind us of the miracles and wonders which he wrought for us when he brought us forth from Egypt, even he who hath power over the highest and lowest to deal with them according to his will. He hath commanded us to lay the Tephillin on the hand as a memorial of his outstretched arm ; opposite the heart, to indicate the duty of subjecting the longings and designs of our heart to his service, blessed be he ; and upon the head over against the brain, thereby seen with thee, in all thy borders. 8. And thou shalt tell thy son in that day, saying, It is because of that which the LORD did for me when I came forth out of Egypt. 9. And it shall be for a sign unto thee upon thine hand, and for a memorial between thine eyes, that the law of the LORD may be in thy mouth: for with a strong hand hath the LORD brought thee out of Egypt. 10. Thou shalt therefore keep this ordinance in its season from year to year.

11. And it shall be when the LORD shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanite, as he sware unto thee and to thy fathers, and shall give it thee, 12. that thou shalt set apart unto the LORD

teaching that the mind, whose seat is in the brain, together with all senses and faculties, is to be subjected to his service, blessed be he."

The tephillin are not worn at night, nor on Sabbaths or Festivals, as these are themselves called "a sign" of the great truths symbolised by the tephillin. The commandment of tephillin applies to all male persons from their thirteenth birthday, when they attain their religious majority (Barmitzvah). On the Sabbath following that birthday, the Barmitzvah is called to the Law, publicly to acknowledge God as the Giver of the Torah.

12. thou shalt set apart. Heb. "cause to pass over," to the Lord; i.e. thou shalt put it aside for the Lord, lest it be mixed with other beasts (Ibn Ezra).

thou shalt break its neck. This requirement ensured the scrupulous execution of the law of redemption in regard to unclean animals, as every one would prefer parting with a lamb to losing an ass.

thy sons shalt thou redeem. With " five shekels apiece "; Num. III, 45–47. This law is in direct opposition to the practice of the heathen Semitic peoples of sacrificing their firstborn. Even Wellhausen admits that of this abomination there is no trace in the religion of Israel. Driver writes: " The instances of child-sacrifice which occur are either altogether abnormal, or, as in the reigns of Ahaz and Manasseh, due to the importation of Phoenician customs into Judah."

against letting us go, that the LORD slew all the 16. frontlets. Heb. "totafoth," phylacteries; see Deut. VI, 8.

This verse, with the preceding two verses, is to form the answer of the father to the question put by his son. The religious education of the children is a Divine command, and the future of religion depends upon this precept being loyally obeyed. In addition to these signs and observances, both the Sabbath and even those Festivals that have other historic associations, are all spoken of in the Liturgy as זכר ליציאת מצרים "memorials of the Going forth out of Egypt."

17. And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not by the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, Lest peradventure the people repent when they see war, and they return to Egypt: 18. but God led the people about, by the way of the wilderness by the Red Sea: and the children of Israel went up armed out of the land of Egypt. 19. Etham, in the edge of the wilderness. If, on leaving Egypt, the Israelites went along Wady Tumilat, they would make for the broad tract of dry ground to the N. of Lake Timsah, and the position of Etham would be where their route crossed the Egyptian frontier, i.e. in the neighbourhood of the modern Ismailia (Naville). At the frontier, the green land of Egypt would be cut off as with a knife from the hard desert tract on which they entered.

21. by day in a pillar of cloud. The pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night were symbols and witnesses to God's watching providence (Abarbanel). Sir Walter Scott has based on this verse one of the most beautiful religious songs in English literature, Rebecca's Hymn.

Luzzatto and Kalisch refer to the Oriental custom of fire-signals in front of armies, or of a brazier filled with burning wood borne along at the head of a caravan, as the natural basis of the miracle. In that case, we should have in this narrative of the guiding Cloud and Pillar another instance of the interweaving of the supernatural and the natural in Scripture.

And they took their journey from Succoth, and encamped in Etham, in the edge of the wilderness. 21. And the LORD went before them by day in a pillar of cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; that they might go by day and by night: 22. the pillar of cloud by day, and the pillar of fire by night, departed not from before the people.

2. that they turn back. The march was no sooner begun than it was checked. The people were ordered to return. They were now in great danger, in case the king of Egypt wished to pursue them. His chariots would soon have overtaken this multitude, and his host would have made a slaughter of the fugitives. This seemed to be the reason why they received a command which they must have considered as very extraordinary, and of a nature to shake their confidence in their leader (Naville). Instead of continuing to march to the north of the northern end of the Gulf of Suez, they were bidden to turn south or south-west, keeping the Sea, i.e. the Gulf of Suez, on their left. It is probable that the Gulf of Suez then extended much further north than it does now, and that the modern Lake Timsah and the Bitter Lakes were connected with each other and the Gulf of Suez by necks of shallow water, which would in a tornado be swept almost dry.

The landmarks mentioned in this verse have long ago disappeared, and cannot be identified with certainty.

The precision, however, with which they are designated, guarantees that the spots were once well known. No portion of the world outside of Palestine, was more familiar to the Israelites than the western border of Egypt; and no event in Bible history more perennially popular than the story of the Deliverance from Egypt.

the wilderness. i.e. the Egyptian wilderness, a tract of desert land between the Nile and the Red Sea. The southern boundary of that wilderness was a high mountain range. With mountains to the south and the Sea to the west, they are "shut in."

4. I will make Pharaoh's heart strong. After an interval of several days, during which the king gradually recovered from his panic, and reflected on his loss through the dismissal of so many scores of thousands of labourers, his innate obstinacy returned. His blindness to the right of the Israelites to their freedom became a malady of the mind with him, that was to drive him to destruction. His obdurate impiety was encouraged by the report that the Hebrew army was now between Migdol and the Sea, patently ignorant of the trap in which they now found themselves.

4. And I will make Pharaoh's heart strong, and he shall follow after them; and I will get me honour upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host; and the Egyptians shall know that I am the LORD. And they did so.
5. And it was told the king of Egypt that the people were fled: and the heart of Pharaoh and of his servants was changed towards the people, and they said, What is this we have done, that we have let Israel go from serving us?

they did so. The Israelites turned back and encamped before Pi-hahiroth.

5–14. The epic story of Israel's Redemption is now swiftly approaching its climax. The last chapters described Israel's final night in Egypt, with its panic for the Egyptians and rejoicing for the Israelites, when monarch and people alike hurried the children of Israel out of the land of bondage. But no sooner had Israel gone, than Pharaoh and his court regretted the act of emancipation. "What have we done!" they exclaimed. There followed a swift marshalling of the cavalry and chariots of Egypt; and only a few days after being thrust out into freedom, the children of Israel beheld the hosts of Egypt in hot pursuit after them.

5. changed toward the people. They saw Goshen empty, the brick-fields deserted, great works of Egypt stopped

10. they were sore afraid. "It is very surprising that such a large host should be so terrified by an approaching enemy. But our astonishment ceases if we consider that the Egyptians had been the lords of the Hebrews, and that that generation had learned from their youth patiently to endure all insults which the Egyptians inflicted upon them. Thus had their minds become depressed and servile" (Ibn Ezra).

out unto the LORD. 11. And they said unto Moses, Because there were no graves in Egypt,

ness? wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to bring us forth out of Egypt? 12. Is not this the word that we spake unto thee in Egypt, saying, Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians? For it were better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the taunt of the Israelites. "These words show the hand of the eye-witness of the events he relates" (Naville). Similar taunts were flung at their leader every time anything went wrong in regard to food, water or comfort.

12. let us alone. The Midrash indicates that not only were the people distracted by fear, but they were further demoralised by divided counsels. One group, frantic with despair, cried, Let us cast ourselves into the sea. Another group said, Let us go back to Egypt and submit to slavery. Other groups were for giving battle to the enemy.

which went before the camp of Israel. That is, the angel of God and the pillar of cloud, instead of being in front of the Israelites, as hitherto, now stand behind them. The pillar is the instrument of the angel. The second half of the verse, "the pillar of cloud removed from before them and stood behind them," is synonymous with the first half of the verse.

yet gave it light by night. To the Israelites. If there was a pillar of light and another of darkness, then the one enabled the Israelites to pass through the sea during that night, whilst the pillar of darkness stood before the Egyptians and hindered their movement. On the other hand, if we assume that there was only one pillar, then it was dark to the Egyptians and gave light to the Israelites.

21. caused the sea to go back. A strong east wind, blowing all night and acting with the ebbing tide, may have laid bare the neck of water joining the Bitter Lakes to the Red Sea, allowing the Israelites to cross in safety. "As in all the wonders of Egypt, this also, the greatest of all, is based upon a natural cause; and in this the boundless power of God, who, by an insignificant change, knows how to convert the natural and common course of things into extraordinary and marvellous events, is sublimely manifest" (Kalisch).

22. a wall unto them. i.e. a protection and a defence. Pharaoh could not attack them on either flank, on account of the two bodies of water between which their march lay. He could only come at them by following after them (Rawlinson).

And the Egyptians pursued, and went in after them into the midst of the sea, all Pharaoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen. 24. And it came to pass in the morning watch, that the LORD looked forth upon the host of the Egyptians through the pillar of fire and of cloud, and discomfited the host of the Egyptians. 25. discomfited. Threw into confusion. The text does not allude to the means whereby the panic of the Egyptians was produced. The Psalmist supplies this omission. "The clouds poured out water: the skies sent out a sound; thine arrows also went abroad. The voice of thy thunder was in the whirlwind; the lightnings lighted up the world; the earth trembled and shook. Thou leddest thy people like a flock by the hand of Moses and Aaron" (LXXVII, 17, 18–20). There was a hurricane raging with tornado force, causing the sea to go back, amidst a darkness lit up only by the glare of lightning, as "the LORD looked out" from the black skies.

25. and he took off. The Egyptians were hindered in the Egyptians dead upon the sea shore. The fact that the Egyptians had to perish mars the completeness of Israel's victory. "When the Egyptian hosts were drowning in the Red Sea," say the Rabbis, "the angels in heaven were about to break forth into songs of jubilation. But the Holy One, blessed be He, silenced them with the words, 'My creatures are perishing, and ye are ready to sing!'" In the same spirit, a medieval rabbi explained why a drop of wine is poured out of the wine-cup on Seder eve at the mention of each of the plagues that were inflicted on the Egyptians. Israel's cup of joy, he said, cannot be full if Israel's triumph involves suffering even to its enemies. For the same reason, only half of Hallel is recited during the greater part of the Festival.

they believed in the LORD, and in his servant Moses. This miraculous deliverance was never forgotten by Israel. "An experience such as the Exodus, accomplished in spite of all its difficulties, and the passage through the Red Sea, must have been reckoned by all who participated in them as a direct act of God. Moses was thereby authenticated in the eyes of his people" (Kittel). Their new-born faith in God, and their witnessing of His marvellous help, led to the wonderful outburst of song in the next chapter. Whenever Israel has faith in God and in the Divine Mission of Moses, Israel sings. It is only ages of scepticism and religious disintegration that are spiritually dumb and sterile.

CHAPTER XV

THE SONG AT THE RED SEA

1–21. This Song, notable for poetic fire, vivid imagery and quick movement, gives remarkable expression to the mingled horror, triumph and gratitude that the hosts of Israel had lived through during the fateful hours when they were in sight of Pharaoh's pursuing hosts. In Jewish literature it is spoken of as the Song, שירה and the Sabbath on which it is read in the Synagogue as שבת שירה.

1. Moses and the children of Israel. Moses composed the Song, and the Israelites joined their Leader in praising God. From v. 20 and 21, it appears that there was musical accompaniment, with male and female choruses. It is probably the oldest song of national triumph extant.

this is my God. Who has saved me. The redeemed at the Red Sea had a unique realisation of the Presence and of the present help of God. The Rabbis say, "A maidservant at the Red Sea had a more vivid and vitalising experience of the Divine than many a prophet."

my father's God. The continuity of worship among the children of the Patriarchs is emphasised here. The God of tradition has justified Himself by redeeming Israel. The promises made to the forefathers have now been fulfilled. "My father's God" stands here for "the God of my fathers"; see III, 6.

The floods stood upright as an heap;
The deeps were congealed in the heart of the sea.

Pangs have taken hold on the inhabitants of Philistia.

18. the LORD shall reign for ever and ever. The Song closes, not with the conquest of material domains, but with the promise of the Kingdom of God. This is the climax. The redemption from Egypt was to be followed by the Revelation on Mount Sinai, when God's Kingdom on earth was inaugurated. That Kingdom is eternal.

on dry land in the midst of the sea. 20. And Miriam the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand; and all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances. 21. And Miriam answered them,

Sing ye to the LORD, for he is highly exalted;
The horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

22. And Moses led Israel onward from the Red Sea, and they went out into the wilderness of Shur; and they went three days in the wilderness, and found no water. 23. And when they came to Marah, they could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter: therefore the name of it was called Marah. 24. And the people murmured against Moses, saying, What shall we drink? 25. And he cried unto the LORD; and the LORD shewed him a tree, and he cast it into the waters and the waters were made sweet.

The station where Moses and the Israelites halted after their passage of the Red Sea, is regarded by the Arabs to be Ayun Musa, "the springs of Moses," 9 miles below Suez, on the east side of the Gulf, and 1½ miles from the coast.

23. Marah. The Heb. word means, "bitterness." Has been identified by some with Bir Huwara, about 47 miles S.E. of Ayun Musa, and 7 miles from the coast, on the usual route to Mt. Sinai. Others identify Marah with "Ain Naba" (also called el-Churkudeh) a fountain with a considerable supply of brackish water, about 10 miles S.E. of Suez, and 50 miles from Lake Timsah.

25. the LORD shewed him a tree. There are certain shrubs that sweeten bitter water.

God set before them the fundamental principle of implicit faith in His providence, to be shown by willing obedience to His will. The healing of the bitter waters was a symbol of the Divine deliverance from all evils.

3. when we sat by the flesh pots. They remembered the bread and the fleshpots, but not the slavery. Some commentators infer from this that the Israelites in Egypt must have had a good and full diet. Such inference is quite unwarranted. The pangs of hunger cause them to look back upon their slave-fare, served to them from pots large enough to supply a whole gang, as the height of luxury.

v. 20. פתח באתנח

15. what is it? Heb. מן הוא "It is manna" (RV Margin). The Heb. word man may really be Egyptian (Rashbam, Ebers); the translation would then be, "They said one to another, It is man, for they knew not what it was;" i.e. they called it by the name of the substance that resembled it most in appearance, and was well known to them in Egypt. The Arabs give the name man to a sweet, sticky honey-like juice, exuding in heavy drops, in May or June, from a shrub found in the Sinai peninsula. This, however, is found in only small quantities and is not suitable for food. It does not, moreover, correspond to the description given in our text, where the manna, falling upon the earth in grains, gathered in the morning and melting in the heat of the sun, is clearly a miraculous substance. God in His ever-sustaining providence fed Israel's hosts during the weary years of wandering in His own unsearchable way.

16. This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, Gather ye of it every man according to his eating ; an omer a head, according to the number of your persons, shall ye take it, every man for them which are in his tent.
17. And the children of Israel did so, and gathered some more, some less.
18. And when they did mete it with an omer, he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack ; they gathered every man according to his eating.
19. And Moses said unto them, Let no man leave of it till the morning.
20. Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto Moses ; but some of them left of it until the morning, and it bred worms, and stank : and Moses was wroth with them.
21. And they gathered it morning by morning, every man according to his eating : and when the sun waxed hot, it melted.
22. And it came to pass, that on the sixth day they gathered twice as much bread, two omers for each one : and all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses.

holy sabbath unto the Lord. The seventh day must have been known to the people as a special day, distinct from the other days of the week. The children of the Patriarchs had brought with them to Egypt the tradition that God had completed His work of creation in six days, and that He had sanctified the seventh day. At Mt. Sinai, therefore, the children of Israel are bidden, "Remember the Sabbath day."

bake that which ye will bake. On the Friday. What was not eaten on the Friday was to be kept for the Sabbath day.

27. there went out some of the people. Not because they were lacking food, for they had gathered a double portion on the previous day ; but because they doubted the word of Moses.

28. how long refuse ye. The rebuke is addressed to Moses as the representative of the people.

29. abide ye. i.e. do not go out in order to gather manna.

go out of his place. To gather manna on the Sabbath. Rabbinical tradition has deduced from this context the prohibition, that no Israelite shall go more than 2,000 said unto them, This is that which the LORD hath spoken, To-morrow is a solemn rest, a holy sabbath unto the Lord: bake that which ye will bake, and seethe that which ye will seethe; and all that remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning. 24. And they laid it up till the morning, as Moses bade: and it did not stink, neither was there any worm therein. 25. And Moses said, Eat that to-day; for to-day is a sabbath unto the LORD: to-day ye shall not find it in the field. 26. Six days ye shall gather it; but on the seventh day is the sabbath, in it there shall be none. 27. And it came to pass on the seventh day, that there went out some of the people for to gather, and they found none. 28. And the LORD said unto Moses, How long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws? 29. See, for that the LORD hath given you the sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days; abide ye every man in his place, let no man go out of his place on the seventh day. 30. So the people rested on the seventh day.*vi s 31. And the house of Israel called the name thereof Manna: and it was yards from the place of his abode. This is called the תחום שבת "the Sabbath journey." Travelling interrupts the rest both of man and his beast, and was therefore to be avoided on the Sabbath day.

31. house of Israel. An unusual expression for, "the children of Israel"; see XI, 38; Num. XX, 29.

lay it up before the LORD. i.e. before the Ark the Testimony, in the Tabernacle. Ibn Ezra says that this section should come after the story of the erection of the Tabernacle; and Luzzatto suggests that Moses wrote v. 33–35 in the fortieth year of the wandering in the wilderness. It is well to keep in mind the Rabbinical saying, that the events in Scripture are not always arranged in strict chronological order. אין מוקדם ומאוחר בתורה. Sometimes an inner connection causes events wide apart in time to be mentioned together in one chapter.

34. the Testimony. i.e. the Ark, so called because of the Tables on which the Ten Commandments (spoken of as "the Testimony" in XXV, 22, XXXI, 18) were engraved.

Moses said, This is the thing which the LORD hath commanded, Let an omerful of it be kept for your generations; that they may see the bread wherewith I fed you in the wilderness, when I brought you forth from the land of Egypt. 33.
And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a pot, and put an omerful of manna therein, and lay it up before the LORD, to be kept for your generations. 34.
As the LORD commanded Moses, so Aaron laid it up before the Testimony, to be kept. 35. And the children of Israel did eat the manna forty years, until they came to a land inhabited; they did eat the manna, until they came unto the borders of the land of Canaan. 36. Now an omer unto the borders of the land of Canaan. This was the limit of the wanderings under the leadership of Moses. Moses gives the complete history of the manna up to the end of his own life. He does not state that the manna ceased; because the manna was not withheld until after the death of Moses, when the Israelites had passed the Jordan under Joshua (Josh. v, 12).

36. an ephah. The name of a measure well known to the people, whereas the name omer was not known (Abarbanel).

1–7. Water from the Rock in Horeb

1. by their stages. Or, "journeys." The route was as follows: the wilderness of Sin, Dophkah, Alush, Rephidim: see Num. xxxiii, 14. The various stages are omitted, as it is not the intention of Scripture here to enumerate the different places where the Israelites halted. Its purpose is to narrate the occasions when the people murmured (Biur).

Rephidim. Either the upper part of the broad and long oasis of Feiran, the most fertile part of the Peninsula of Sinai, or the narrow defile el-Watiyeh, 27 miles beyond Feiran.

2. give us water. The Heb. for "give" is in the plural, and refers to Moses and Aaron.

tempt the Lord. Better, try the Lord (AJ). Tempt is a misleading rendering: for "to tempt" in modern English has acquired the sense of enticing a person to a particular action, especially an evil one; whereas the Heb. nissah means merely to test or prove a person, to see whether he will act in a particular way, or whether the character he bears is well established (Driver).

3. to kill us . . . . . with thirst. lit. "to kill me and my sons and my cattle with thirst," as if each one had cried out separately. The reaction from the mood of exultation at the Red Sea is complete. "It is the nature of man," says Macaulay,

Chapter XVII

17 1. And all the congregation of the children of Israel journeyed from the wilderness of Sin, by their stages, according to the commandment of the Lord, and pitched in Rephidim: and there was no water for the people to drink. 2. Wherefore the people strove with Moses, and said, Give us water that we may drink. And Moses said unto them, Why strive ye with me? wherefore do ye tempt the Lord? 3. And the people thirsted there for water; and the people murmured against Moses, and said, Wherefore hast thou brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us and our children and our cattle with thirst? 4. And Moses cried unto the Lord, saying, What shall I do unto this people? they be almost ready to stone

"to overrate present evil. A hundred generations have passed away since the first great national emancipation of which an account has come down to us. We read in the most ancient of books that a people bowed to the dust under a cruel yoke, scourged to toil by hard taskmasters, not supplied with straw, yet compelled to furnish the daily tale of bricks, became sick of life, and raised such a cry of misery as pierced the heavens. The slaves were wonderfully set free; at the moment of their liberation they raised a song of gratitude and triumph; but in a few hours they began to regret their slavery, and to reproach the leader who had decoyed them away from the savoury fare of the house of bondage to the dreary waste which still separated them from the land flowing with milk and honey. Since that time the history of every great deliverer has been the history of Moses retold. Down to the present hour, rejoicings like those on the shore of the Red Sea have ever been speedily followed by murmurings like those at the Waters of Strife."

4. what shall I do unto this people? To save them from despair and sin.

I will stand before thee there upon the rock in Horeb; and thou shalt smite the rock, and there shall come water out of it, that the people may of Israel. 7. And he called the name of the place Massah, and Meribah, because of the striving of the children of Israel, and because they tempted

the LORD, saying, Is the LORD among us, or not?
8. Then came Amalek, and fought with Israel in Rephidim. 9. And Moses said unto Joshua, Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek:

8–16. THE BATTLE WITH THE AMALEKITES

The Amalekites were a predatory tribe, who are spoken of as having their home in the desert of Palestine. At the same time, a nomad tribe is quite capable of raids at a distance from its usual home (e.g. it was with some difficulty that the Transjordan Arabs were prevented from taking part in the loot and murder of Palestine Jews in August, 1929); or, the Amalekites may in the summer months have led their flocks up into the cooler and fresher pastures in the mountains of the Sinai Peninsula.

8. then came Amalek. As an immediate sequence of the murmuring on the part of the Israelites, say the Rabbis. It is the invariable lesson of Jewish history that whenever Israel begins to doubt God and Israel, asking, Is the Lord among us or not? that an Amalek unexpectedly assails it.

fought with Israel. Deut. XXV, 18 records that Amalek cut off, at the rear of Israel, all that were feeble and weary.

9. Joshua. His name was originally Hoshea (Num. XIII, 8). This is the first mention of the great captain and successor of Moses. By anticipation, he is here called by his latter name.

with the rod of God. The victory over their enemies was to be attributed altogether to God, who had fought for them against Pharaoh.

10. Hur. According to the Talmud, Hur is the son of Miriam and Caleb.

11. Moses held up his hand. The Talmud remarks, "Can the hands of Moses really cause victory, if they are raised; or defeat, if they are lowered? Scripture teaches here, that, when the Israelites looked up to God, and humbled themselves before their Father in Heaven, they were victorious; when they did not, they were defeated." Some commentators explain that Moses raised his staff like a banner. When the Israelites saw this banner, they were courageous and victorious; when they did not see it, they were despondent and fled; and, therefore, the place was called Adonay-nissi, i.e. "The Lord is my banner" (v. 15).

to-morrow I will stand on the top of the hill with the rod of God in mine hand. 10. So Joshua did as Moses had said to him, and fought with Amalek: and Moses, Aaron, and Hur went up to the top of the hill. 11. And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed: and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed. 12. But Moses' hands were heavy; and they took a stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun. 13. And Joshua discomfited Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword.* m hand. Power.

11. in the thing wherein they dealt proudly. Perhaps the translation should be, "yea, because they dealt proudly with them." Because the Egyptians had dealt proudly and obstinately with Israel, God felt the need of using His power to humble the Egyptians (Rashbam). The Septuagint renders, "for the reason that they acted wickedly against them." God made use of their very pride and defiance to bring about their doom, and at the same time, the salvation of Israel. By this, Jethro realises that God is "greater than all other gods." According to the Rabbis, Jethro thereupon forsook idolatry and became a proselyte.

12. Aaron came, and all the elders. Though Moses is

10. And Jethro said, Blessed be the LORD, who hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh; who hath delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians,
11. Now I know that the LORD is greater than all gods: yea, in the thing wherein they dealt proudly against them.
12. And Jethro, Moses' father in law, took a burnt offering and sacrifices for God: and Aaron came, and all the elders fo Israel, to eat bread with Moses' father in law before God.* ii

Moses' father in law saw all that he did to the

his father in law, Because the people come unto

a man and his neighbour, and I make them know the statutes of God, and his laws. 17. And Moses' father in law said unto him, The thing that thou doest is not good. 18. Thou wilt surely with thee: for the thing is too heavy for thee;

thou art not able to perform it thyself alone.
19. Hearken now unto my voice, I will give thee

the people to God-ward, and bring thou the

No longer will the people have to stand all day waiting for their turn before Moses (see v. 14). Moses, but every small matter they judged them-

CHAPTER XIX

PREPARATIONS FOR THE COVENANT AT SINAI

The arrival at the foot of Mt. Sinai marks the beginning of Israel's spiritual history. We reach what was the kernel and core of the nation's life, the Covenant by which all the tribes were united in allegiance to One God, the Covenant by which a priest-people was created, and a Kingdom of God on earth inaugurated among the children of men.

1. in the third month. The month of Sivan.

the same day. lit. "in that day," i.e. the first of the month (Mechilta).

came they into the wilderness of Sinai. As foretold when God first revealed Himself to Moses at the Burning Bush (see IV, 29). Moses is bringing his People to acknowledge and worship the God of their Fathers at that Mount.

The wilderness is the wide plain in front of Mt. Sinai. This mountain is generally identified with Jebel Musa; and accordingly, the wilderness is in all probability the plain of Er-Rahah, situated 5,000 feet above the sea. By careful local investigation, Robinson arrived at the conviction that there was space enough in the plain Er-Rahah to satisfy all the requirements of the Scripture narrative, so far as it relates to the assembling of the people for the Divine revelation. The plain is one-and-half miles long and one mile broad; while the adjacent valleys afford ample space for tents, animal and baggage.

CHAPTER XIX

19 1. In the third month after the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt, the same day came they into the wilderness of Sinai.
2. And when they were departed from Rephidim and were come to the wilderness of Sinai, they pitched in the wilderness; and there Israel camped before the mount. 3. And Moses went up unto God, and the LORD called unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel;

2. and when they were departed from Rephidim. Or, "For they had journeyed from Rephidim" (Mendelssohn, Benisch); see XVII, 8f. This supplies the link in the narrative, interrupted by the story of Jethro's visit in the preceding chapter.

they pitched. Better, they encamped (AJ), in the wilderness of Sinai.

3. Moses went up unto God. i.e. he ascended the mountain. On the day when the Israelites came to Mt. Sinai, the cloud of God's glory covered the mountain; see XXIV, 16.

house of Jacob . . . children of Israel. Israel has an exalted future in store for it; it is called to become the priest-people of the God of Holiness and Righteousness. "The poetical parallelism is to impress the hearer or reader" (Ibn Ezra). House of Jacob occurs only here in the Pentateuch, and is a poetical synonym of "house of Israel." The Rabbis understand by the "house of Jacob" the women of the nation. Moses is bidden to approach the women first, as it is they who rear the children in the ways of Religion. God asked Israel, "What sureties have you to give that you will keep My Covenant?" They offered the Patriarchs, the Prophets and their righteous Rulers as their guarantors. But all of them were rejected. It was only when they offered their children as sureties for the permanence of the Covenant, that these were accepted.

how I bare you. "As though I bare you" (Ibn Ezra, Luzzatto).

on eagles' wings. This verse is a magnificent and beautiful example of Heb. poetry, expressing God's relations with Israel. The Jewish commentators point out that the eagle carried its young upon its wings, offering its own body as a shield to protect the fledglings from the arrows of the archer. This strong tenderness of the eagle towards its young is a symbol of God's love in taking His people out of the reach of danger to His own abode.

and brought you unto myself. From the kingdom of Pharaoh to Sinai, where My Kingdom is to be proclaimed.

5. a peculiar treasure. Heb. segullah, a term used to denote a precious object or treasure that is one's special possession; I Chron. XXIX, 3. "These words, a peculiar treasure, sound more partial than they really are. If I have chosen an instrument for a peculiar purpose, that instrument may be to me a peculiar treasure, but the purpose is greater than the instrument. So with the Jews. They are God's instrument, and as such a peculiar treasure; but the work is far greater than the instrument" (C. G. Montefiore).

for all the earth is mine. See VI, 7. God is the Creator of all things and the Father of all mankind. Israel, in common with every other nation, forms part of God's possession; but He has chosen Israel to be His in a special degree, to be "a light unto the nations" and a blessing to all humanity. There is no thought of favouritism in God's choice. Israel's call has not been to privilege and rulership, but to martyrdom and service.

4. Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself. 5. Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant,
then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me
from among all peoples: for all the earth is mine:
6. and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel.* v
7. And Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and set before them all these words which the LORD commanded him. 8. And all the people answered together, and said, All that the LORD

6. a kingdom of priests. Or, "a priestly kingdom"; a kingdom whose citizens are all priests (cf. Isa. LXI, 6), living wholly in God's service and ever enjoying the right of access to Him. As it is the duty of the priest to bring man nearer to God, so Israel has been called to play the part of a priest to other nations; i.e. to bring them closer to God and Righteousness. This spiritual Kingdom constitutes the highest mission of Israel.

and an holy nation. "Holy" here means, "separated" from the false beliefs and the idolatry of the other nations. Israel becomes holy by cleaving unto God and by obeying His Torah; see also on XXII, 30.

set before them. Giving the entire nation the choice of accepting or rejecting the Divine message; cf. Ex. XXIV, 3 and Deut. IV, 44. Religion in Israel was not to be a secret doctrine of one favoured class, not a body of "mysteries" entrusted to the keeping of priests, as in Egypt. At Sinai, the Divine Message comes to rich and poor, old and young, learned and unlearned alike.

8. all that the LORD hath spoken. They gladly and freely expressed their willingness to enter God's Covenant; cf. XXIV, 3. They thereby become in a special sense, God's People. The conviction of having entered upon such a Covenant—a conviction that henceforth remains imprinted for all time in the consciousness of Israel—cannot have arisen of itself. Its historicity is as unassailable as that of the sojourn in Egypt.

Moses went down unto the people, and told them.

In the next chapter, the Ten Commandments have a double accentuation in the Hebrew text—one for use in public reading in the Synagogue, and one for use in private devotion or study. The latter alone is given in the Authorized Prayer Book, p. 87.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

Chapter XX, 1—14

The " Ten Words " or Commandments, the עשרת הדברות or the Decalogue (from deka, ten, and logos, word), are supreme among the precepts of the Torah, both on account of their fundamental and far-reaching importance, and on account of the awe-inspiring manner in which they were revealed to the whole nation. Amid thunder and lightning and the sounding of the shofar, amid flames of fire that enveloped the smoking mountain, a Majestic Voice pronounced the Words which from that day to this have been the guide of conduct to mankind. That Revelation was the most remarkable event in the history of humanity. It was the birth-hour of the Religion of the Spirit, which was destined in time to illumine the souls, and order the lives, of all the children of men. The Decalogue is a sublime summary of human duties binding upon all mankind; a summary unequalled for simplicity, comprehensivenes and solemnity; a summary which bears divinity on its face, and cannot be antiquated as long as the world endures. It is at the same time a Divine epitome of the fundamentals of Israel's Creed and Life; and Jewish teachers, ancient and modern, have looked upon it as the fountain-head from which all Jewish truth and Jewish teaching could be derived. " These Commandments are written on the walls of Synagogue and Church; they are the world's laws for all time. Never will their empire cease. The prophetic cry is true: the word of our God shall stand for ever " (M. Joseph). See Additional Note D, " The Decalogue," p. 230.

The most natural division of the Ten Commandments is into man's duties towards God (בין אדם למקום), the opening five Commandments engraved on the First Table; and into man's duties to his fellow-man (בין אדם לחברו), the five Commandments engraved on the Second Table.

Chapter XX

20 1. And God spake all these words, saying,
2. I am the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

First Table: Duties towards God

First Commandment

RECOGNITION OF THE SOVEREIGNTY OF GOD

2. I am the LORD thy God. Non-Jewish commentators regard this verse merely as the preface to the Decalogue. Such is not the Jewish traditional view, which considers it as the first of the Ten Words, and deduces from it the positive precept, To believe in the existence of God. Though not a command, it is a great truth, and forms the historical basis and foundation of the other Commandments.

I. Heb. anochi. The God adored by Judaism is not an impersonal Force, an It, whether spoken of as "Nature" or "World-Reason." The God of Israel is the Source not only of power and life, but of consciousness, personality, moral purpose and ethical action (M. Joël).

thy God. The emphasis is on thy. He is the God not merely of the past generations, but of all generations, and of every individual soul in each generation. To the hosts assembled at the foot of the Mount, it signified, I am the God of Whom thou hast learnt not merely by hearsay, but Whom thou hast come to know from personal experience at the Red Sea.

which brought thee out of the land of Egypt. God is not here designated, "Creator of heaven and earth." Israel's God is seen not merely in Nature, but in the destinies of man. He had revealed Himself to Israel in a great historic deed, the greatest in the life of any people: the God who saved Israel from slavery had a moral claim, as their Benefactor and Redeemer, on their gratitude and obedience. "The foundation of Jewish life is not merely that there is only one God, but the conviction that this One, Only and True God is my God, my sole Ruler and Guide in all that I do" (Hirsch). The first Commandment is thus an exhortation to acknowledge the sovereignty of God (קבלת עול מלכות שמים, lit. "the taking upon ourselves the yoke of the Kingdom of Heaven").

3 לֹא־יִהְיֶה לְךָ אֱלֹהִים אֲחֵרִים עַל־פָּנָיַ׃ לֹא־תַעֲשֶׂה לְךָ 4
פֶסֶל ׀ וְכָל־תְּמוּנָה אֲשֶׁר בַּשָּׁמַיִם ׀ מִמַּעַל וַאֲשֶׁר בָּאָרֶץ
ה מִתַּחַת וַאֲשֶׁר בַּמַּיִם ׀ מִתַּחַת לָאָרֶץ׃ לֹא־תִשְׁתַּחֲוֶה לָהֶם

The reference to the redemption of Egypt is of deepest significance, not only to the Israelites, but to all mankind. The primal word of Israel's Divine Message is the proclamation of the One God as the God of Freedom. The recognition of God as the God of Freedom illumines the whole of human history for us. In the light of this truth, history becomes one continuous Divine revelation of the gradual growth of freedom and justice on earth.

Second Commandment

THE UNITY AND SPIRITUALITY OF GOD

Jewish tradition (based on Talmud, Midrash and Targum) makes v. 3 the beginning of the Second Commandment.

3. thou shalt have none other gods. Because there are none other gods besides God. The fundamental dogma of Israel's religion, as of all higher religion, is the Unity of God. It alone can be the basis for the teaching of the Unity of mankind, and the consequent Brotherhood of man, since the one God must be the God of the whole of humanity. "Have we not all one father? hath not one God created us?" are words whose significance would be meaningless to a polytheist.

before me. Or, "besides me"; or, "to my face" (Koenig). Nothing shall receive the worship due to Him. Neither angels nor saintly men or women, are to receive adoration as Divine beings; and the Jew is forbidden to pray to them. This Commandment also forbids belief in evil spirits, witchcraft, and similar evil superstition. Furthermore, he who believes in God will not put his trust in Chance or "luck."

4. a graven image. This verse forbids the worship of the One God in the wrong way. Every other religion permitted, nay demanded, pictorial representation of its deity

3. Thou shalt have none other gods before me.
4. Thou shalt not make unto thee a graven image, nor the likeness of any form that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: 5. thou

or deities. Judaism alone, from the very beginning, taught that God was a Spirit; and made it an unpardonable sin to worship God under any external form that human hands can fashion. No doubt this law hindered the free development of plastic arts in ancient Israel; but it was of incalculable importance for the purity of the conception of God. The Prophets waged an unwearied fight against idolatry and image-worship. That sacred warfare was continued by the Pharisees. Abraham, the father of the Hebrew people, they taught, started on his career as an idol-wrecker. Obedience to this Commandment gave rise in Maccabean times to the ideal of martyrdom. The Israelite was bidden unhesitatingly to choose death whenever a cruel persecutor would make him bow to idols or to depart in the slightest degree from Israel's belief in the Unity of God. Thus, thousands of the Jewish people were prepared to lay down their lives and be trampled under foot by the Roman soldiery rather than permit the image of the Roman eagle, symbol of the deification of the Emperor, to be put up in the Temple. In the Middle Ages, fathers and mothers slew their own children and themselves, rather than submit to forced baptism. "There is no sublimer passage in the Hebrew Scriptures than the commandment, Thou shalt not make unto thee a graven image. It alone is sufficient to explain the enthusiasm which the Jewish People in its best period felt towards its Religion, when it compared itself with other peoples" (Immanuel Kant).

nor the likeness. Nor is He to be worshipped under any image, though such be not graven, which the human mind can conceive.

in heaven above. i.e. of the heavenly bodies; such as the ancestors of the Hebrews in Babylonia adored.

in the earth beneath. e.g. of animals, such as the Israelites saw the Egyptians worshipping.

in the water under the earth. The monsters of the deep.

וְלֹא תָעָבְדֵם כִּי אָנֹכִי יְהוָה אֱלֹהֶיךָ אֵל קַנָּא פֹּקֵד עֲוֺן
6 אָבֹת עַל־בָּנִים עַל־שִׁלֵּשִׁים וְעַל־רִבֵּעִים לְשֹׂנְאָי׃ וְעֹשֶׂה
חֶסֶד לַאֲלָפִים לְאֹהֲבַי וּלְשֹׁמְרֵי מִצְוֺתָי׃ ס

5. a jealous God. The Heb. root for "jealous," kanna, designates the just indignation of one injured; used here of the all-requiting righteousness of God. God desires to be all in all to His children, and claims an exclusive right to their love and obedience. He hates cruelty and unrighteousness, and loathes impurity and vice; and, even as a mother is jealous of all evil influences that rule her children, He is jealous when, instead of purity and righteousness, it is idolatry and unholiness that command their heart-allegiance. It is, of course, evident that terms like "jealousy" or "zeal" are applied to God in an anthropomorphic sense. It is also evident that this jealousy of God is of the very essence of His holiness. As has recently been pointed out by a foremost philosopher of religion, "The expression a living God is only a synonym of a jealous God: God's livingness and holiness are manifested in and through His jealousy" (Rudolf Otto). Outside Israel, the ancients believed that the more gods the better; the richer the pantheon of a people, the greater its power. It is because the heathen deities were free from "jealousy" and, therefore, tolerant of one another and all their abominations, that heathenism was spiritually so degrading and morally so devastating.

visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children. The Torah does not teach here or elsewhere that the sins of the guilty fathers shall be visited upon their innocent children. The soul that sinneth it shall die proclaims the Prophet Ezekiel. And in the administration of justice by the state, the Torah distinctly lays down, "The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, neither shall the children be put to death for the fathers; every man shall be put to death for his own sin" (Deut. XXIV, 16). However, human experience all too plainly teaches the moral interdependence of parents and children. The bad example set by a father frequently corrupts those that come after him. His most dreadful bequest to his children is not a liability to punishment, but a liability to the commission of fresh offences. In shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them: for I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, upon the third and upon the fourth generation of them that hate me; 6. and shewing mercy unto a thousand generations of them that love me and keep my commandments.

every parent, therefore, the love of God, as a restraining power from evil actions, should be reinforced by love for his children; that they should not inherit the tendency to commit, and suffer the consequences of, his transgressions.

Another translation is, "remembering the sins of the fathers unto the children;" i.e. God remembers the sins of the fathers when about to punish the children. He distinguishes between the moral responsibility which falls exclusively upon the sinful parents, and the natural consequences and predisposition to sin, inherited by the descendants. He takes into account the evil environment and influence. He, therefore, tempers justice with mercy; and He does so to the third and fourth generation.

of them that hate me. The Rabbis refer these words to the children. The sins of the fathers will be visited upon them, only if they too transgress God's commandments.

6. and shewing mercy unto a thousand generations. Better, unto the thousandth generation (AJ). Contrast the narrow limits, three or four generations, within which the sin is visited, with the thousand generations that His mercy is shown to those who love God and keep His commandments. "History and experience alike teach how often, and under what varied conditions, it happens that the misdeeds of a parent result in bitter consequence for the children. In His providence, the beneficent consequences of a life of goodness extend indefinitely further than the retribution which is the penalty of persistence in sin" (Driver).

that love me. Note the verb "love," used to designate the right attitude to God; cf. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy might" (Deut. VI, 5). Love of God is the essence of Judaism, and from love of God springs obedience to His will.

Third Commandment

AGAINST PERJURY AND PROFANE SWEARING

The Second Commandment lays down the duty of worshipping God alone, and worshipping Him in spirit and not through images. The Third Commandment forbids us to dishonour God by invoking His name to attest what is untrue, or by joining His name to anything frivolous or insincere.

7. take the name of the Lord. Upon the lips ; i.e. to utter.

in vain. lit. " for vanity," or " falsehood " ; for anything that is unreal or groundless.

God is holy and His Name is holy. His Name, therefore, must not be used profanely to testify to anything that is untrue, insincere or empty. We are to swear by God's Name, only when we are fully convinced of the truth of our declaration, and then only when we are required to do so in a Court of law. This verse, according to the Rabbis, forbids using the Name of God in false oaths (e.g. that wood is stone) ; as well as using the Name of God in vain and flippant oaths (e.g. that stone is stone). God's Name is, moreover, not to be uttered unnecessarily in common conversation.

will not hold him guiltless. i.e. will not leave him unpunished. Perjury is an unpardonable offence, which, unless repressed by severest penalties, would destroy human society. The Rabbis ordained a special solemn warning to be administered to any one about to take an oath in a Court of law. In various ages, saintly men have avoided swearing altogether. The Essenes, a Jewish Sect in the days of the Second Temple, held that " he who cannot be believed without swearing is already condemned." " Let thy yea be yea, and thy nay, nay," says the Talmud.

7. Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain; for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.
8. Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.

FOURTH COMMANDMENT

THE SABBATH

8. remember. The use of the word "remember" may indicate that the institution was well-known to the Israelites, long before their manna experiences; that it was a treasured and sacred institution inherited from the days of the Patriarchs; see also Genesis, p. 57. The Rabbis, however, explain "Remember the Sabbath day" to mean, Bear it in mind and prepare for its advent; think of it day by day, and speak of its holiness and sanctifying influence. They instituted the Kiddush prayer, praising God for the gift of the Sabbath, to celebrate its coming in; and the Havdalah blessing, praising God for the distinction between the Sabbath and the six weekdays, to mark its going out.

sabbath day. Heb. shabbath, from a root meaning desisting from work.

to keep it holy. To treat it as a day unprofaned by workaday purposes. In addition to being a day of rest, the Sabbath is to be "a holy day, set apart for the building up of the spiritual element in man" (Philo). Religious worship and religious instruction—the renewal of man's spiritual life in God—form an essential part of Sabbath observance. We, therefore, sanctify the Sabbath by a special Sabbath liturgy, by statutory Lessons from the Torah and the Prophets, and by attention to discourse and instruction by religious teachers. The Sabbath has thus proved the great educator of Israel in the highest education of all; namely the laws governing human conduct. The effect of these Sabbath prayers and Synagogue homilies upon the Jewish people has been incalculable. Leopold Zunz, the founder of the New Jewish Learning, has shown that almost the whole of Israel's inner history since the close of Bible times, can be traced in following the development of these Sabbath discourses on the Torah. Sabbath worship is still the chief bond which unites Jews into a religious Brotherhood. Neglect of such worship injures the spiritual life of both the individual and the community.

9. shalt thou labour. Work during the six days of the week is as essential to man's welfare as is rest on the seventh. No man or woman, howsoever rich, is freed from the obligation of doing some work, say the Rabbis, as idleness invariably leads to evil thoughts and evil deeds. The proportion of one day's rest in seven has been justified by the experience of the last 3,000 years. Physical health suffers without such relief. The first French Republic rejected the one day in seven, and ordained a rest of one day in ten. The experiment was a complete failure.

thou shalt not do any work. Scripture does not give a list of labours forbidden on Sabbath; but it incidentally mentions field-labour, buying and selling, travelling, cooking, etc., as forbidden work. The Mishna enumerates under thirty-nine different heads all such acts as are in Jewish Law defined as "work," and, therefore, not to be performed on the Sabbath day; such as ploughing, reaping, carrying loads, kindling a fire, writing, sewing, etc. Certain other things which cannot be brought under any of these 39 Categories are also prohibited, because they lead to a breach of Sabbath laws (שבות); as well as all acts that would tend to change the Sabbath into an ordinary day. Whatever we are not allowed to do ourselves, we must not have done for us by a fellow-Jew, even by one who is a Sabbath-breaker. All these Sabbath laws, however, are suspended as soon as there is the least danger to human life; פקוח נפש דוחה את השבת say the Rabbis. The Commandments of God are to promote life and well-being, a

Not only the children but also the servants, whether Israelite or heathen, nay even the beasts of burden, are to share in the rest of the Sabbath day; see note on XXIII, 12. "The Sabbath is a boundless boon for mankind and the greatest wonder of religion. Nothing can appear more simple than this institution, to rest on the seventh day after six days of work. And yet no legislator in the world hit upon this idea! To the Greeks and the Romans it was an object of derision, a superstitious usage. But it has removed with one stroke the contrast between slaves who must labour incessantly, and their masters who may celebrate continuously" (B. Jacob).

11. for in six days. See notes on Gen. II, 1–3.

By keeping the Sabbath, the Rabbis tell us, we testify to our belief in God as the Creator of the Universe; in a God who is not identical with Nature, but is a free Personality, the creator and ruler of Nature. The Talmudic mystics tell that when the heavens and earth were being called into existence, matter was getting out of hand, and the Divine Voice had to resound, "Enough! So far and no further!" Man, made in the image of God, has been endowed by Him with the power of creating. But in his little universe, too, matter is constantly getting out of hand, threatening to overwhelm and crush out soul. By means of the Sabbath, called זכרון למעשה בראשית, "a memorial of Creation," we are endowed with the Divine power of saying "Enough!" to all rebellious claims of our environment, and are reminded of our potential victory over all material forces that would drag us down.

blessed the sabbath. Made it a day of blessing to those who observe it. See note on Gen. II, 3. The Sabbath was something quite new, which had never before existed in any nation or in any religion—a standing reminder that man can emancipate himself from the slavery of his worldly cares; that man was made for spiritual freedom, peace and joy (Ewald). "The Sabbath is one of the glories of our humanity. For if to labour is noble, of our own free will to pause in that labour which may lead to success, to money, to fame is nobler still. To dedicate one day a week to rest and to God, this is the prerogative and the privilege of man alone" (C. G. Montefiore).

and hallowed it. Endowed it with sanctifying powers. The sanctity of the Sabbath is seen in its traces upon the Jewish soul. Isaiah speaks of the Sabbath as "a delight"; and the Liturgy describes Sabbath rest as "voluntary and congenial, happy and cheerful." "The Sabbath planted a heaven in every Jewish home, filling it with long-expected and blissfully-greeted peace; making each home a sanctuary, the father a priest, and the mother who lights the Sabbath candles an angel of light" (B. Jacob). The Sabbath banishes care and toil, grief and sorrow. All fasting (except on the Day of Atonement, which as the Sabbath of Sabbaths transcends this rule of the ordinary Sabbath) is forbidden; and all mourning is suspended on the Sabbath day. Each of the three Sabbath-meals is an obligatory religious act in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the LORD blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it.

(מצוה); and is in the olden Jewish home accompanied by זמירות, Table Songs. The spiritual effect of the Sabbath is termed by the Rabbis the "extra soul," which the Israelite enjoys on that day.

Ignorant and unsympathetic critics condemn the Rabbinic Sabbath-laws with their numberless minutiae as an intolerable "burden." These restrictions justify themselves in that the Jew who actually and strictly obeys these injunctions, and only such a Jew, has a Sabbath. And in regard to the alleged formalism of all these Sabbath laws, a German Protestant theologian of anti-Semitic tendencies has recently confessed: "Anyone who has had the opportunity of knowing in our own day the inner life of Jewish families that observe the Law of the fathers with sincere piety and in all strictness, will have been astonished at the wealth of joyfulness, gratitude and sunshine, undreamt of by the outsider, which the Law animates in the Jewish home. The whole household rejoices on the Sabbath, which they celebrate with rare satisfaction not only as the day of rest, but rather as the day of rejoicing. Jewish prayers term the Sabbath a 'joy of the soul' to him who hallows it; he 'enjoys the abundance of Thy goodness.' Such expressions are not mere words; they are the outcome of pure and genuine happiness and enthusiasm" (Kittel).

Without the observance of the Sabbath, of the olden Sabbath, of the Sabbath as perfected by the Rabbis, the whole of Jewish life would in time disappear. And only if the olden Sabbath is maintained by those who observe it, and regained by those who have lost or abandoned it, is the permanence of Israel assured.

Fifth Commandment

HONOUR OF PARENTS

This Commandment follows the Sabbath command, because the Sabbath is the source and the guarantor of the family life; and it is among the Commandments engraved on the First Tablet, the laws of piety towards God, because parents stand in the place of God, so far as their children are concerned. Elsewhere in Scripture, the duty to one's parents stands likewise next to the duties towards God (Lev. xix, 3).

12. honour thy father and thy mother. By showing them respect, obedience and love. Each parent alike is entitled to these. For although "father" is here mentioned first, in Lev. xix, 3 we read, "each one shall fear (i.e. reverence) his mother and his father." And this obligation extends beyond the grave. The child must revere the memory of the departed parent in act and feeling. Respect to parents is among the primary human duties; and no excellence can atone for the lack of such respect. Only in cases of extreme rarity (e.g. where Godless parents would guide children towards crime) can disobedience be justified. Proper respect to parents may at times involve immeasureable hardship; yet the duty remains. Shem and Japhet throw the mantle of charity over their father's shame: only an unnatural child gloats over a parent's disgrace or dishonour. See note on Gen. ix, 23 (Genesis, p. 85) and Prov. xxx, 17. The greatest achievement open to parents is to be ever fully worthy of their children's reverence and trust and love.

that thy days may be long. i.e. the honouring one's parents will be rewarded by happiness and blessing. This is not always seen in the life of the individual; but the Commandment is addressed to the individual as a member of society, as the child of a people. The home is infinitely more important to a people than the schools, the professions or its political life; and filial respect is the ground of national permanence and prosperity. If a nation thinks of its past with contempt, it may well contemplate its future with despair; it perishes through moral suicide.

12. Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

13. Thou shalt do no murder.

SECOND TABLE: DUTIES TOWARDS FELLOW MEN

The first five Commandments have each an explanatory addition; the last five are brief and emphatic Thou shalt not's. Our relation to our neighbours requires no eludication; since we feel the wrongs which others do to us, we have a clear guide how we ought to act towards others. These duties have their root in the principle "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself," applied to life, house, property and honour.

THE SIXTH COMMANDMENT

THE SANCTITY OF HUMAN LIFE

13. thou shalt do no murder. The infinite worth of human life is based on the fact that man is created "in the image of God." God alone gives life, and He alone may take it away. The intentional killing of any human being, apart from capital punishment legally imposed by a judicial tribunal, or in a war for the defence of national and human rights, is absolutely forbidden. Child-life is as sacred as that of an adult. In Greece, weak children were exposed; that is, abandoned on a lonely mountain to perish. Jewish horror of child-murder was long looked upon as a contemptible prejudice. "It is a crime among the Jews to kill any child," sneered the Roman historian Tacitus.

Hebrew law carefully distinguishes homicide from wilful murder. It saves the involuntary slayer of his fellow-man from vendetta; and does not permit composition, or money-fine, for the life of the murderer. Jewish ethics enlarges the notion of murder so as to include both the doing of anything by which the health and well-being of a fellow-man is undermined, as well as the omission of any act by which a fellow-man could be saved in peril, distress or despair. For the prohibition of suicide, see note on Gen. IX, 5.

14 שָׁקֶר׃ ס לֹא תַחְמֹד בֵּית רֵעֶךָ
ס לֹא תַחְמֹד אֵשֶׁת רֵעֶךָ וְעַבְדּוֹ וַאֲמָתוֹ וְשׁוֹרוֹ וַחֲמֹרוֹ
וְכֹל אֲשֶׁר לְרֵעֶךָ׃ פ שביעי

Seventh Commandment

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE

adultery. "Is an execrable and God-detested wrongdoing" (Philo). This Commandment against infidelity warns husband and wife alike against profaning the sacred Covenant of Marriage. It involves the prohibition of immoral speech, immodest conduct, or association with persons who scoff at the sacredness of purity. Among no people has there been a purer home-life than among the Jewish people. No woman enjoyed greater respect than the Jewish woman; and she fully merited that respect.

Eighth Commandment

THE SANCTITY OF PROPERTY

thou shalt not steal. Property represents the fruit of industry and intelligence. Any aggression on the property of our neighbour is, therefore, an assault on his human personality. This Commandment also has a wider application than theft and robbery; and it forbids every illegal acquisition of property by cheating, by embezzlement or forgery. "There are transactions which are legal and do not involve any breach of law, which are yet base and disgraceful. Such are all transactions in which a person takes advantage of the ignorance or embarrassment of his neighbour for the purposes of increasing his own property" (M. Friedlander).

Ninth Commandment

AGAINST BEARING FALSE WITNESS

The three preceding Commandments are concerned with wrongs inflicted upon our neighbour by actual deed: this °Thou shalt not commit adultery.

Thou shalt not steal.

Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.

14. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbour's.* vii a

°In English Bibles, each of these Commandments forms a verse by itself—14, 15, 16 and 17.

Commandment is concerned with wrong inflicted by word of mouth.

thou shalt not bear false witness. The prohibition embraces all forms of slander, defamation and misrepresentation, whether of an individual, a group, a people, a race, or a Faith. None have suffered so much from slander, defamation and misrepresentation as the Jew and Judaism. Thus, modernist theologians still repeat that, according to this Commandment, the Israelite is prohibited only from slandering a fellow-Israelite; because, they allege, the Heb. word for "neighbour" (רע) here, and in "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself" (Lev. XIX), does not mean fellow-man, but only fellow-Israelite. This is a glaring instance of bearing false witness against Judaism; and is proved to be so by XI, 2 ("Let every man ask of his neighbour, jewels of silver, etc") where the word neighbour cannot possibly mean an Israelite, but distinctly refers to the Egyptian. In this Commandment, as in all moral precepts in the Torah, the Heb. word neighbour is equivalent to fellow-man.

Tenth Commandment

AGAINST COVETOUS DESIRES

14. covet. i.e. to long for the possession of anything that we cannot get in an honest and legal manner. This Commandment goes to the root of all evil actions—the unholy instincts and impulses of predatory desire, which are the spring of nearly every sin against a neighbour. The man who does not covet his neighbour's goods will not bear false witness against him; he will neither rob nor murder, nor will he

Without such self-control, there can be no worthy human life; it alone is the measure of true manhood or womanhood. " Who is strong "? ask the Rabbis. " He who controls his passions," is their reply.

This Commandment is somewhat differently worded in the Decalogue which is repeated by Moses in his Farewell Addresses to Israel. That difference, together with the other slight variations in that Decalogue from the original in this chapter of Exodus, will be dealt with in the Commentary on Deuteronomy.

Note D

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS OR THE DECALOGUE

No religious document has exercised a greater influence on the moral and social life of man than the Divine Proclamation of Human Duty, known as the Decalogue. These few brief commands—only 120 Hebrew words in all—cover the whole sphere of conduct, not only of outer actions, but also of the secret thoughts of the heart. In simple, unforgettable form, this unique code of codes lays down the fundamental rules of Worship and of Right for all time and for all men.

I

The Decalogue in Judaism

From early times the basic importance of the Ten Commandments was duly recognised in Israel. The Teachers of the Talmud emphasised their eternal and universal significance by means of parable, metaphor and all the rare poetic imagery of Rabbinic legend. The Tables on which the Ten Commandments were written, they said, were prepared at the eve of Creation—thus ante-dating humanity, and, therefore, independent of time or place or racial culture; and they were hewn from the sapphire Throne of Glory—and, therefore, of infinite worth and preciousness. The Revelation at Sinai, they taught, was given in desert territory, which belongs to no one nation exclusively; and it was heard not by Israel alone, but by the inhabitants of all the earth. The Divine Voice divided itself into the 70 tongues spoken on earth, so that all the children of men might understand its world-embracing and man-redeeming message. Each command, as it rang out from Sinai's top, filled the world with aroma. The dead in Sheol were revived, and betook themselves to Sinai; yea, even the souls of all the unborn generations in Israel were assembled there. As the Divine Commandments rang out from Sinai's height, no bird sang, no ox lowed, the ocean did not roar, and no creature stirred; all Nature was rapt in breathless silence at the sound of the Divine Voice asserting the supremacy of Conscience and Right in the Universe. The Rabbis held the sixth of Sivan, the day of the Revelation at Mount Sinai, to be as momentous as the day of Creation itself; for without the coming into existence of Moral Law, the creation of the material universe would have been incomplete, nay, meaningless. At the same time, the Teachers of the Talmud were most careful to emphasise that the Ten Commandments did not contain the Whole Duty of Man, as some Jewish sectaries in the days of the Second Temple contended. The Decalogue laid down the foundations of Religion and Morality, but was not in itself the entire structure of Human Duty.

The Rabbinic view of the Decalogue was shared by the religious teachers and philosophers in the Middle Ages, and is to-day held by the followers of all schools of Judaism. Saadyah and Yehudah Hallevi, Rashi and Abarbanel, the Karaites and the Cabalists,all agree in regarding the Ten Commandments as the Fundamentals of the Faith, as the Pillars of the Torah and its Roots. In modern times, various exponents of Judaism have shown that all the ritual observances prescribed in the Torah are visible embodiments of the general truths enshrined in the Decalogue; and that, in fact, the whole content of Judaism as Creed and Life can be arranged under the ten general headings of the Commandments.

II

The Decalogue outside Israel

It is interesting to note the place that the Decalogue held in the religious life of Humanity outside the Synagogue. One of the most renowned of the Church Fathers spoke of the Decalogue as " the heart of the Law "; and this remained the opinion of Western Christendom for over 1,500 years. Luther's words—" Never will there be found a precept comparable or preferable to these commands, for they are so sublime that no man could attain to them by his own power "—are typical of thought in the Reformed Churches. The Humanists, the Deists and even the Freethinkers spoke in reverence of the Law of Sinai. Two generations ago, Renan wrote: " The incomparable fortune which awaited this page of Exodus, namely, to become the code of universal ethics, was not unmerited. The Ten Words are for all peoples; and they will be, during all centuries, the commandments of God." And historians of civilisation are generally agreed that, low as the ethical standards of the world at present undoubtedly are, it is certain that they would be even lower, but for the supreme influence of the Ten Commandments.

Quite a different attitude towards the Decalogue began with the rise of Bible Criticism. Too often it has been one of undisguised hostility. This hostility is based on alleged historical and moral reasons. One example of each of these alleged reasons will suffice to show their groundlessness. Thus, during the greater part of the nineteenth century, Critics denied that the Decalogue was Mosaic, because of the prohibition of image-worship in the Second Commandment. The prevalence of image-worship during the period of the Judges and Monarchy, they maintained, proved that no prohibition of image-worship could have been promulgated in the days of Moses. Now it is quite true that the law against image-worship was for many centuries disregarded in large sections of ancient Israel; in the same way as throughout fourteen centuries after the rise of Christianity, the prohibition of image-worship was "deliberately ignored by the entire Christian Church down to the Reformation, and is still treated as null and void by the major portion of Christendom" (Canon Charles). But it is never safe to argue that, because any law is openly broken or tacitly disregarded, such a law does not, therefore, exist. All experience, whether in ancient or modern societies, is against such an assumption. Eminent Bible Scholars fully recognise this; and men like Professors Burney and Sellin admit "that no reasonable ground can be discovered against the Mosaic origin of the Decalogue."

Not more convincing are the moral objections which Critics level against the Decalogue, e.g., that it deals only with outward actions. They disregard the Tenth, the most inward of all the Commandments; or they deliberately deny that "Thou shalt not covet" seeks to restrain the unlawful, inward desire for something that is another's. According to them, "it emphasises not so much the feelings, as the practical steps which might be taken to give effect to them" (Bennett). The reason for such an astounding explanation is given in the new Anglican Commentary as follows: "A commandment which suggests so high a standard of morals as 'Thou shalt not covet' is out of place in the Decalogue"! "It is questionable," adds the editor of that Commentary, "whether the Decalogue should be so constantly and nakedly propounded as the summary of the Moral Law." The motive behind this hostility of modernist ecclesiastics to the Decalogue, and to the whole of the Hebrew Scriptures, is a twofold one. In the first place, if the Tenth Commandment is given its right and honest interpretation, wherein is the superiority of the Gospels over the Torah ? And this alleged superiority of Christianity to Judaism they are determined to maintain at all costs. And in the second place, they believe they will save the New Testament by discrediting the "Old." A vain hope. Rejection oı the Decalogue leads to rejection of all morality and religion.

III

The Moral Chaos of our Times

Attacks on the Decalogue are singularly inopportune at the present day. For our age and generation stand in especial need of a Divine Confirmation of the Moral Law. The nineteenth century loved to speak of itself as the Age of Science. Now "Science equips men, but does not guide him. It illumines the world for him to the region of the most distant stars ; but it leaves night in his heart. It is invincible ; but indifferent, neutral, un-moral" (Darmesteter). That century widely heralded the discovery that man came from the beast ; and very soon after that discovery, many of the literary and artistic leaders took it upon themselves to convince their contemporaries that it was only natural for man to return to the beast. A powerful Paganism began its assault against the ancient organised Morality. It dethroned God in the sphere of human conduct, derided all moral inhibitions, and declared instinct and inclination to be the true guides to human happiness. The twentieth century is bettering the instruction begun in the nineteenth. The so-called new Psychology preaches repression of instincts to be a danger to personality ; and it regards as natural the unbridled gratification of impulses which civilised mankind has always been taught should be controlled or disciplined. A new ethic has arisen, as subversive as it is godless, which bids each man, woman or child do that which seems right in his or her own eyes. It teaches that all moral laws are man-made ; and that all can, therefore, be unmade by man. There is, in consequence, on every side a questioning of the sacredness of human life, a scoffing at the holiness of purity, and an angry repudiation of the idea of property. In some lands, this has led to social and political upheavals, resulting in immemorial human institutions being torn up by the roots. Even in English-speaking countries there is to-day an impatience with moral authority; and men deny, at any rate, doubt, the reality of ethical distinctions. Things are tolerated, extenuated, nay encouraged—in fiction, on the stage, in everyday life—that only a generation ago would have been the subject of unqualified condemnation. The pilot's stars of moral guidance seem no longer to be fixed stars; and for the many voyagers over the ocean of life, the clouded heavens offer no guidance at all.

Amid this spiritual confusion and moral chaos, Judaism remains clear-eyed and unmoved. It clings unswervingly to the Divine origin of the Decalogue; and continues to proclaim that there is an everlasting distinction between right and wrong, an absolute 'Thou shalt' and 'Thou shalt not" in human life, a categorical imperative in religion—high above the promptings of passion, the peradventure of inclination, or the fashion of the hour. Weak and erring man needs an authoritative code in matters of right and wrong, laying down with unmistakable clearness the chief heads of duty, and denouncing the chief classes of sins. Such a Divine affirmation of the Moral Law was at all times a vital necessity for mankind, in order to set aside doubt, and to silence that perverse casuistry which is always ready to call good evil, and evil good. God is not only our Father. He is also our Law-giver; and in the Decalogue, He has made known to the children of men the foundations on which alone human welfare and happiness can be built.

IV

Revelation and the Decalogue

Judaism stands or falls with its belief in the historic actuality of the Revelation at Sinai.

Revelation, in the first instance, means the unveiling of the character and will of God to the children of men. This is implied in the Theistic position. If we think of the Universe as merely an aggregate of blind forces, then there is, of course, no room for communication of any kind between God and man. But the moment we assert the existence of a Supreme Mind as the Fountain and Soul of all the infinite forms of matter and life, revelation, or communication between God and man, becomes a logical and ethical necessity. The exact manner of this super-Natural communication between God and man, will be conceived differently by different groups of believers. Some will follow the Biblical accounts of Revelation in their literal sense ; others will accept the interpretation of these Biblical accounts by Rabbis of Talmudic days, Jewish philosophers of the Middle Ages, or Jewish religious thinkers of modern times. No interpretation, however, is valid or in consonance with the Jewish Theistic position, which makes human reason or the human personality the source of such revelation. A noted philosopher of religion has recently given striking expression to this truth in the words : " All Revelation is supernatural. There can be no such thing as a purely natural revelation. We cannot really know God except as He desires to be known and makes Himself apprehensible. No view of God that grew up ' of itself ' in the human mind, owing nothing to God's self-disclosing action, could have any value " (Wobbermin).

Revelation is thus but the obvious inference and corollary of the character of the Deity held by all who believe in a Personal God and Father in Heaven, in prayer to Whom, in worship of Whom, and in communion with Whom, the highest moments of our lives are passed and lived. This close relationship between God and man, this interplay of spiritual forces and energies, whereby the human soul responds to the Self-manifesting Life of all Worlds, attains in Israel's Prophets, that overmastering certainty, which enables them to declare, " Thus saith the Lord." Theirs is an absolute conviction that the thoughts which arose in their minds about Him and His will, and the commands and exhortations which they issued in His name, really came to them at His prompting and were invested with His authority. Maimonides compared revelation to illumination by lightning on a dark night. Some Prophets were granted only one such lightning-flash from the Divine ; in the case of others, these lightning-flashes were oft repeated ; whereas to Moses was accorded continuous, unintermittent Light. Not in dreams or visions or occasional flashes of Divine intuition was the manner of revelation in his case, but " face to face " ; i.e. in the form of self-luminous thought and complete self-consciousness. In his mind, the Rabbis say, the Divine Message was reflected as in a clear mirror (אספקלריה מאירה). The supreme revelation in the life of the Lawgiver, however, that of the Covenant at Mount Sinai, he shared with the whole of Israel. To all of them was then vouchsafed the psychic experience of a direct communion with God. Even as at the shores of the Red Sea when, in the words of the Sages, an ordinary maidservant was able to perceive what an Ezekiel in his moments of ecstasy could not attain to—so, at Sinai, a mystic Vision gripped the spirit of the awe-struck People, filling their souls with reverence and certitude and Light.

V

Israel, the People of Revelation

A study of Israel's amazing story will strengthen any unbiased seeker of the Truth in the conviction that Israel's Vision of the Divine is different not only in degree but in kind from that of any other nation; and that, therefore, there has indeed been a unique impact of the Spirit of God upon the soul of Israel. In fact, from the very first there must have been a predisposition in the nature of the Jewish people to receive the Message of Sinai. The Rabbis point out that all the precepts of the Decalogue had been practised by the Patriarchs and had become the family tradition of their children. Before giving the Torah to Israel, Rabbinic legend furthermore tells us, God offered it to the other nations of the world; everyone of them, however, refused it for one reason or another. Thus, the children of Edom asked, "What is written in this Torah?" When God named its principal commandment, Thou shalt not kill—their decisive answer was, "We cannot accept it." Other peoples objected to the seventh and eighth commandments—immorality and the appropriation of other men's possessions being the expression of their national bent. None of them, it seems, was against Religion as such, so long as Religion confined itself to general principles. What they all objected to was the definite, concrete "do not's" of the Decalogue. "We have no desire for the knowledge of Thy ways," they exclaimed; "give your Torah to Israel." Then God came to Israel; and Israel's reply was, All that the Lord hath spoken we will do and we will obey.

So all-compelling has been the recognition of Israel's national genius for the Life of the Spirit that it has crystallised itself into the doctrine of the Election and Mission of Israel (I. Epstein). "Israel is the People of Revelation," says a modernist Jewish thinker. "It must have had a native endowment to produce and rear the succession of Prophets. Hence we do not speak of the God of Moses, nor of the God of the Prophets, but of the God of Israel" (Geiger). "Had there been no Israelites there would be no Torah," said Yehudah Hallevi seven centuries before him. "Israel's pre-eminence is not derived from Moses, it is Moses whose pre-eminence is due to Israel. The Divine love went out towards the descendants of the Patriarchs. Moses was merely the Divinely chosen instrument through whom God's Blessing was to be assured unto them."

Medieval poet and modernist thinker alike agree that Israel was from its birth predestined to become a Kingdom of Priests. Its career as a Holy Nation dates from the historically actual, mystical experience at the foot of Sinai. Without the Covenant at Sinai, the Exodus would have had little meaning: the story of Israel, like that of other kindred Semitic tribes, would have lost itself in the sands of the desert. With the Covenant at Sinai, everlasting life was planted in Israel's soul; and the story of Israel issues in eternity.

the wife and her children. In Jewish law, the children share the status of the mother. If the Israelite had been permitted to take them into freedom with him, it would have impaired the purity of the race, and created a body of half-castes.

5. plainly say. Or, "firmly say." The master attempts to dissuade the Israelite slave from preferring bondage to freedom, but the latter is resolute in his intention.

my wife, and my children. Although it is natural for a man to become attached to his wife and offspring even in the circumstances here described, yet such conduct must have highly injurious results to the Hebrew state. It would tend to produce a class of dependent slaves; and, instead of the community consisting of free and equal citizens, it would be divided into a ruling and a servile class (Kalisch).

6. unto the judges. lit. "unto God." The judges pronounce sentence in the name of God (Deut. I, 17).

The slave's declaration had to be made publicly before the judges, in order to prevent the master from boring his servant's ear by force, and alleging that it was by the servant's desire.

ear that heard the Divine utterance, for unto Me the children of Israel are servants (Lev. xxv, 55), and had yet preferred a human master, let that ear be bored." The drilling of the ear to the door of the house may also have symbolised the attaching of the slave to the household, and may have served as permanent evidence that the slave had remained in service of his own free will. This boring of the ear was thus something altogether different from the inhuman custom in modern times, of branding slaves by a red-hot iron, marked with certain letters, and then pouring ink into the furrows to make the inscription more conspicuous.

7. a maidservant. Or, "a bondwoman"; to be the secondary wife for the master or his son. In an age of polygamy, the position of concubine, or second wife, was not a degraded one. Her offspring had equal rights in matters of inheritance with the children of the first wife (Deut. xxi, 10–14).

a strange people. Better, a foreign people (AJ). The master must either allow her to be redeemed by her relatives, or he must keep her. The abominable practice against which this law is directed was not confined to Hebrew masters or to ancient times. Thus, William of Malmesbury, speaking of the days before the Norman Conquest, complains of the horrible custom of Saxon masters who, after associating with the maid servants on their estates, sold them to a life of shame or into foreign slavery.

he shall have no power. The Talmud refers "he" to both the master and the father: the master has acted deceitfully in that he has not kept faith with her; the father in that he sold her at all.

dealt deceitfully with her. By not carrying out the purpose for which he had acquired her.

9. deal with her after the manner of daughters. "Treat her as a daughter" (Moffatt). Whether as wife to the father or to the son, the bondwoman is to be treated like a freeborn girl who marries. The rights due to her are enumerated in the next verse.

11. these three. The three obligations mentioned in the preceding verse (Abarbanel).

do. 8. If she please not her master, who hath espoused her to himself, then shall he let her be redeemed: to sell her unto a strange people he shall have no power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her. 9. And if he espouse her unto his son, he shall deal with her after the manner of daughters. 10. If he take him another wife; her food, her raiment, and her duty of marriage, shall he not diminish. 11. And if he do not these three unto her, then shall she go out for nothing, without money.

12. He that smiteth a man, so that he die, shall surely be put to death. 13. And if a man lie not in wait, but God deliver him into his hand; then I will appoint thee a place whither he shall flee. 14. And if a man come presumptuously upon his neighbour, to slay him with guile; thou shalt take him from mine altar, that he may die.

12–14. Laws concerning Murder

13. lie not in wait. The Torah draws a distinction between intentional and accidental homicide.

God deliver him. The modern mind, whilst agreeing that all things are ultimately controlled by God's will, does not attribute results to the immediate action of God. Not so the Biblical idiom. Nothing happens except by God's will; so if the murderer had no intention of killing his victim, the death must be due to His decree. English law retains the same idea, and uses the term "act of God"; cf. note on the hardening of Pharaoh's heart, p. 44.

a place. Of shelter from the vengeance of the next-of-kin. Special cities were to be set apart for this purpose when the Israelites had settled in Canaan (Num. xxxv, Deut. xix).

14. from mine altar. Even if it was a priest who officiated at the altar, he was not to escape his punishment, if his act was other than unintentional homicide (Talmud).

Among the Greeks, an altar gave asylum to every murder. In the Middle Ages, the Church offered "sanctuary" to criminals of every description.

15–17. Crimes against Parents; Kidnapping

15. smiteth. The Rabbis rule that only when the blow left a bruise was the death penalty incurred.

16. stealeth a man. Kidnapping for the purpose of selling the victim into slavery in a foreign land (cf. the story of Joseph). It, therefore, meant both loss of liberty and spiritual death to the victim, if an Israelite. It was only towards the end of the eighteenth century that the slave trade, i.e. organised kidnapping on a vast scale, with the hideous cruelties attendant on it, began to be recognised in Western European countries as something unspeakably vile.

or if he be found. lit. "and he be found." Prompted by the desire to reduce capital punishment as much as possible, the Rabbis cling to the literal translation of these words. The victim must have been seen by witnesses in the hands of the kidnapper and also have been sold, before the crime was punishable by death.

17. curseth. The Rabbis declared that for capital punishment to be incurred, the son must have used the Divine Name itself in cursing his parents.

put to death. By a court of law, and after judicial trial, not by the parents themselves. In Rome, a father was allowed to put to death a grown-up son, even for no reason whatsoever.

15. And he that smiteth his father, or his mother, shall be surely put to death.

16. And he that stealeth a man, and selleth him, or if he be found in his hand, he shall surely be put to death.

17. And he that curseth his father, or his mother, shall surely be put to death.

18. And if men contend, and one smiteth the other with a stone, or with his fist, and he die not, but keep his bed: 19. if he rise again, and walk abroad upon his staff, then shall he that smote him be quit: only he shall pay for the loss of his time, and shall cause him to be thoroughly healed.*ii

20. And if a man smite his servant, or his maid, with a rod, and he die under his hand; he shall with a rod. Better, with the rod, i.e. the instrument customarily used (Prov. x, 13; xiii, 24) and sufficient to secure obedience from the rebellious slave, but not to injure him severely. The master was allowed to chastise his slave, but not in a brutal manner so as to endanger his life.

22 יוֹם אוֹ יוֹמַיִם יַעֲמֹד לֹא יֻקַּם כִּי כַסְפּוֹ הוּא׃ ס וְכִי־

surely be punished. There was no fixed penalty; the judges had to determine each case on its own merits. The Mechilta declares that the master was to be beheaded for such brutality. All this is in marked contrast to Roman and other ancient law, which gave the master the right of life and death over his slave.

21. a day or two. The master is not then punished, as it is clear that he had intended only to chastise the slave. Similar considerations have in all ages weighed in judging a parent whose child died in consequence of a correction. The death is then looked upon as an unfortunate accident, nothing more.

he is his money. "This bare fact was presumptive evidence that the master had not intended to inflict serious injury, inasmuch as that would have involved pecuniary loss to himself" (H. Adler). In the circumstances, therefore, the financial loss was sufficient punishment for him.

22. a woman. Either she was near the men who were fighting, or she had endeavoured to separate them.

no mischief. i.e. no fatal injury (Mechilta).

as the judges determine. If the husband makes an exorbitant claim, the sum to be paid was to be fixed by the court.

23. life for life. The Rabbis ruled that since no homicide was here intended, it was a case for monetary compensation. That the words "life for life" are merely a legal term meaning "fair compensation", is seen from the parallel passage in Lev. xxiv, 18, which says: "Whoever kills an animal shall pay for it: life for life." This only means "fair compensation"; otherwise, any man who slew an animal, would have to forfeit his own life in return! To remove all doubt as to the meaning of the legal term "life for life," the same paragraph (Lev. xxiv, 21) states, surely be punished. 21. Notwithstanding, if he continue a day or two, he shall not be punished: for he is his money.

22. And if men strive together, and hurt a woman with child, so that her fruit depart, and yet no mischief follow: he shall be surely fined, according as the woman's husband shall lay upon him; and he shall pay as the judges determine.
23. But if any mischief follow, then thou shalt give life for life, 24. eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot, 25. burning for burning, wound for wound, stripe for stripe.

26. And if a man smite the eye of his servant, or

"He that killeth a beast, shall make it good; and he that killeth a man shall be put to death."

24. eye for eye. This law of retaliation—"measure for measure"—existed among ancient peoples, and persists to our own day in capital punishment. In the Torah, likewise, this law of "measure for measure" is carried out literally only in the case of murder. "Ye shall take no ransom for the life of a manslayer which is guilty of death: but he shall surely be put to death," says Scripture (Num. xxxv, 31). Hence, it is evident that other physical injuries which are not fatal, are a matter of monetary compensation for the injured party. Such monetary compensation, however, had to be equitable, and as far as possible equivalent. This is the significance of the legal technical terms, "life for life, eye for eye, and tooth for tooth." See Additional Note E, p. 288.

25. wound. When blood is drawn.

stripe. When there is only a bruise. In computing compensation, the actual damage, the loss of time, the cost of the cure, the pain and the disfigurement, are all taken into consideration.

26. servant. The loss of any limb, from the most essential down to the least indispensable, gave the slave immediate freedom, if that loss was due to brutal treatment of the master. According to the Rabbinic interpretation, v. 26

stoned. In order to implant horror against murder, even the beast, although it had not a moral sense, was to be removed from existence, since it was the cause of the destruction of a human being, made in the image of God.

29. put to death. Not by the hand of a human tribunal, but "death by the hand of God" (Mechilta). Nachmanides quotes as a parallel, "And the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death" (Num. I, 51), where the punishment for sacrilege is left to God.

Whether he have gored a son, or have gored a daughter, according to this judgement shall it be done unto him. 32. If the ox gore a manservant or a maidservant; he shall give unto their master thirty shekels of silver, and the ox shall be stoned.

ransom. lit. "covering"; a payment for the next of kin to forgive such intentional bloodshed.

31. son . . . daughter. For the explanation of this puzzling verse, and the light it throws on the true meaning of the lex talionis ("measure for measure"), as well as on the immeasurable moral difference between the civil legislation of the Torah and the Code of Hammurabi, see Additional Note E, p. 289.

32. manservant. A heathen slave (Mechilta). The valuation of an adult Israelite slave was fifty shekels (Lev. XXVII, 3).

35. And if one man's ox hurt another's that he die; then they shall sell the live ox, and divide the price of it; and the dead also they shall divide. 36. Or if it be known that the ox was wont to gore in time past, and his owner hath not kept him in; he shall surely pay ox for ox, and the dead beast shall be his own.

°37. If a man shall steal an ox, or a sheep, and kill it, or sell it; he shall pay five oxen for an ox, and four sheep for a sheep.

he make restitution.
5. If fire break out, and catch in thorns, so that the shocks of corn, or the standing corn, or the

MORAL OFFENCES

XXII, 15—XXIII, 9

15, 16. Seduction

15. entice. Induces her to be a consenting party. If he violates her against her will, he pays her father fifty shekels of silver and is obliged to marry her, without the possibility of a subsequent divorce (Deut. xxii, 28f).

not bethrothed. If the girl was betrothed, their crime is on a par with adultery, should the offence have taken place within a city. If it happened in a field, the man alone suffers capital punishment (Deut. xxii, 25f). On betrothal, see note on Lev. xxi, 3.

pay a dowry. Or, "endow her," to be his wife. "In this way virgins were shielded from permant ignominy in consequence of a momentary crime" (Kalisch). The monetary payment prescribed in this verse would provide against the seducer escaping his obligations. Without it, he might demand her in marriage without paying the dowry (mohar), thinking that, in the circumstances, the father would be anxious to grant the request. Originally this mohar was paid to the father; cf. Gen. xxxiv, 12. In later times, it was received not by the father but by the bride, in order to enable her to enter with proper dignity into the house of her future husband.

16. refuse. According to the Rabbis, the same law applies if the girl declines to marry him.

dowry of virgins. Fifty shekels (Deut. xxii, 29).

14. If the owner thereof be with it, he shall not make it good: if it be an hired thing, it came for its hire.

15. And if a man entice a virgin that is not betrothed, and lie with her, he shall surely pay a dowry for her to be his wife. 16. If her father utterly refuse to give her unto him, he shall pay money according to the dowry of virgins.

17. Thou shalt not suffer a sorceress to live.

17. WITCHCRAFT

sorceress to live. Not because there was any reality to witchcraft, but because it was a negation of the unity of God and an abominable form of idolatry. It is noteworthy that the Septuagint translates the Heb. word for sorceress by "poisoner." Ancient witchcraft was steeped in crime, immorality and imposture; and it debased the populace by hideous practices and superstitions. Hence the place of this command in this chapter. It is preceded by provisions against sexual license (v. 16) and followed by condemnation of unnatural vice and idolatry (v. 18 and 19). The wording of the command is in an unusual form. We should have expected, "A sorcerer shall surely be put to death." Some commentators, therefore, explain it as a prohibition of resorting to the sorceress, and thus enabling her to thrive in her nefarious avocation. The law applied to the sorcerer as well (Lev. xx, 27).

It is fashionable to trace all the horrors of the persecution of witches in medieval times to this verse. There is no justification for this. Witchcraft as a sinister danger in Jewish social life ceases to count long before the Destruction of the Second Temple. (The incident in connection with Simon ben Shetach is no proof to the contrary. Both Jewish and non-Jewish scholars—Derenbourg, Essai, 69; Israel Lévi, Revue des Etudes Juives, xxxv, 213; and Strack, Einleitung[5], 118—have made it the subject of investigation, and are agreed that it is merely Haggadic). Later Jewish teachers (Samuel Ibn Chofni and Ibn Ezra) are among the earliest to deny the existence of demons or the efficacy of witchcraft. The hideous cruelties in the medieval trials of witches would have been impossible in Jewish judicial procedure. Torture to extort confession was unknown in Jewish law; and no confession on the part of the accused, that would have involved capital punishment, was allowable. "No man can in law brand himself a criminal" (אין אדם משים עצמו רשע) is a principle in Jewish criminal law. Christianity, furthermore, which disregarded portions of the Decalogue (e.g. the Second Commandment, with respect to the prohibition of image-worship; and the Fourth Commandment, with respect to the Seventh day as the Sabbath) would certainly not have been guided in its attitude towards witchcraft by any single verse in the "Old" Testament, if the New Testament had not been a demon-haunted book. Down to quite modern times the Church ascribed reality to the works of witches. In Germany alone, no less than 100,000 women and children are said to have suffered a cruel death during the horrible hunt of witches that disgraced the Sixteenth Century. So late as 1716, a woman and her daughter of nine years were hanged at Huntingdon for raising storms by witchcraft. The last witch-burning in a civilized country took place in Peru in 1888. Speaking of the witch-finding mania in Stuart England, G. M. Trevelyan writes: "In its origin the witch-hunt was stirred up by no section; it arose out of a profound and universal belief. Learning, headed by the pedant King, was master of the hounds; science with Bacon, and law with Coke, pointed the trail; imagination and poetry blew the horn with Shakespeare and his brother-playwrights; religion blessed the chase that she had set on foot; while the discordant pack of vulgar beliefs, fears and hatreds came yelling on their prey". Prof. Davis adds: "The Protestant's study of the Bible mostly supplied him with some texts that bolstered up an already existing belief" (Oxford History of England, Early Stuarts).

"The Egyptians frankly hated strangers" (Holzinger); and the Greeks coined the infamous term "barbarian" for all non-Greeks. The love of alien is still universally unheeded in modern times. Lev. XIX, 34, expressly demands in regard to the stranger, "Thou shalt love him as thyself."

23. my wrath shall wax hot. The punishment of hard-heartedness against the weak is pronounced with extraordinary emphasis, and a severe " measure for measure " is threatened (Kalisch).

that is poor. A loan to prevent a poor man falling into destitution is considered one of man's most meritorious deeds, and among the greatest of lovingkindnesses that can be shown to the living. This feeling towards the poor has led to the institution of a Free Loan (Gemillus Chasodim) Society in every well-organised Jewish community.

lent for commercial purposes, to enable the borrower to increase his capital and develop his business; and it is as natural and proper that a reasonable payment should be made for this accommodation, as that it should be made for the loan (i.e. the hire) of a house, or any other commodity. But this use of loans is a modern development: in ancient times money was commonly lent for the relief of poverty brought about by misfortune or debt; it partook thus of the nature of charity; to take interest on money thus lent was felt to be making gain out of a neighbour's need" (Driver).

25. pledge. In Deut. XXIV, 6, it is forbidden to take a hand-mill or a mill-stone as security, because it is an indispensable article in a house. It is precepts like these that caused Huxley to declare: "There is no code of legislation, ancient or modern, at once so just and so merciful, so tender to the weak and poor, as the Jewish law."

26. I will hear. Just as God hears the cry of the widow and orphan (v. 22). The chivalry to the poor ordained in these verses will appear even more striking when we recall the barbarous treatment of the debtor in ancient Rome. If the debtor was unable to make repayment within thirty days after the expiration of the term agreed upon, the Law of the Twelve Tables permitted the creditor to keep him in chains for 60 days, publicly exposing the debtor and proclaiming his debt. If no person came forward to pay the debt, the creditor might sell him into slavery or put him to death. If there were several creditors they might cut him to pieces, and take their share of the body in proportion to their debt.

27. Respect towards God and Rulers

27. thou shalt not revile God. Some of the Rabbis interpreted this as referring to blasphemy, others understand elohim as "judges" (cf. xxi, 6; xxii, 7). Josephus and Philo explain thus, "Let no one blaspheme those gods which other citizens esteem as such"; i.e. do not speak disrespectfully of the religious beliefs of the followers of other faiths.

a ruler. The authorities of the State must be spoken of with respect. As to the connection of this with the preceding verse, Philippsohn remarks: "The last verses treat of the poor. They are warned, even in their most desperate need, not to blaspheme God or entertain and give utterance to feelings of revolt against their rulers."

27. Thou shalt not revile God, nor curse a ruler of thy people. 28. Thou shalt not delay to offer of the abundance of thy fruits, and of thy liquors. The firstborn of thy sons shalt thou give unto me. 29. Likewise shalt thou do with thine oxen, and with thy sheep: seven days it shall be with its dam; on the eighth day thou shalt give it me. 30. And ye shall be holy men unto me: therefore ye shall not eat any flesh that is torn of beasts in the field; ye shall cast it to the dogs.

29. seven days. Maimonides explains that the animal is "as if it had no vitality before the end of that period; and not until the eighth day can they be counted among those that enjoy the light of the world."

30. UNLAWFUL MEAT.

30. holy men. On the association of the idea of holiness with forbidden food, see on Lev. XI, 44. All the preceding laws, as well as those following, are in the singular: this verse alone is in the plural. The philosopher Moritz Lazarus calls attention to the fact that whenever the duty or ideal of holiness is spoken of in the Torah, the plural is invariably used (e.g. "Ye shall be holy," Lev. XIX, 2), because mortal man can only attain to holiness when co-operating with others in the service of a great Cause or Ideal, as a member of a Community, Society, or "Kingdom." Of God alone can we say, the Holy One.

Chapter XXIII. 1–3. Truth in Justice

1. take up a false report. i.e. utter a groundless report; forbids originating a calumny. The Rabbis explain it as a warning not to listen to a calumny, or join others in spreading it. Slander, they say, kills three—the person slandered, the slanderer, and the person who takes up and passes on the slander. They also apply the words of the text to evidence given at a trial. Such evidence must not include a statement of which the witness is not absolutely certain. The Talmud, on the basis of this verse, rules that a litigant must not state his case to the Court in the absence of the other litigant.

the wicked. Better, a guilty person; the Heb. word denotes the party who is in the wrong.

unrighteous witness. lit. "a witness of violence." The meaning is, Do not make common cause with the guilty person to give evidence which will bring about his acquittal.

2. a multitude. This verse is a warning not to follow a majority blindly for evil purposes, especially to pervert justice. Because the majority of judges or witnesses are agreed on an opinion, which opinion he knows to be unjust, he should not abandon his own view in order to fall into line with the others. One, with God and the Right, are the true majority.

wrest judgment. "Pervert justice" (AJ). The Rabbis disregarded the literal meaning of the last three Heb. words, and took them to imply that, except when it is "to do evil," one should follow the majority.

3. favour a poor man. Out of false sympathy, or antipathy to the rich and powerful (Driver). The Biblical view of justice is remarkable for its unbending insistence on the strictest

Chapter XXIII

23 1. Thou shalt not take up a false report: put not thine hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness. 2. Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil; neither shalt thou bear witness in a cause to turn aside after a multitude to wrest judgement: 3. neither shalt thou favour a poor man in his cause.

4. If thou meet thine enemy's ox or his ass going astray, thou shalt surely bring it back to him again.

impartiality. If the matter of dispute is a question of money between a rich and a poor man, the judge is not to give a wrongful verdict in favour of the poor man on the plea that the rich man would not miss the sum involved. "Sympathy and compassion are great virtues, but even these feelings must be silenced in the presence of Justice" (Geiger).

4, 5. Love of Enemy

4. thine enemy's ox. Or any other animal belonging to him (Mechilta). This law is connected with the precepts concerning justice which immediately precede. Because your neighbour has done you an injury, so that you entertain a grievance against him, it is not right for you to allow it to influence your action when your duty towards him is clear. He has not ceased to be your fellowman, because he violates the law of neighbourly love towards you. Therefore, all envy or ill-will towards him is forbidden. No thought of vengeance (see on Lev. xix, 18) must be permitted to rise in your heart: his actions towards you must not be the standard of your conduct towards him. For the sake of your own human dignity there must be readiness to help him in his need, as in the typical instances adduced in the text.

Genuine, practical love of enemy is inculcated in this and following verse. As to the partisan statement in the New Testament, "ye have heard that it was said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour and hate thine enemy," that statement is absolutely baseless. "Thou shalt hate thine enemy," is nowhere found in the Torah. C. G. Montefiore rightly observes that we cannot think very highly of the morality of that New Testament author in inventing a sentence unknown to the Torah in order to depreciate the Torah. Canon Rawlinson admits that "hate thine enemy" was no injunction of the Mosaic Law, but maintains that it is a conclusion which Rabbinical teachers unwarrantably drew from it. This charge against the Rabbis is utterly false. It is Christian teachers who rarely preached, and still more rarely practised, love of those whom they branded as "enemies." C. G. Montefiore has given an excellent summary of Jewish opinion on this matter: "The adherents of no religion have hated their enemies more than Christians. The atrocities which they have committed in the name of religion, both inside and outside their own pale, are unexampled in the world's history. And even to-day it cannot be said that the various sects of Christians love one another, while anti-Semitism is a proof that they do not love those who are not Christians."

5. thou shalt surely release it with him. The general sense is clear. "If you see the ass of a man who hates you lying helpless under its load, you must not leave it all to him, you must help him to release the animal" (Moffatt). Assist your enemy, and with him relieve the animal of a portion of its burden, by loading it upon your own animal. This injunction has both the humanitarian motive towards the animal and the charitable motive towards the enemy. The greatest hero, say the Rabbis, is he who turns an enemy into a friend; and this can only be done by deeds of lovingkindness. "If thine enemy be hungry give him bread to eat, and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink . . . and the Lord shall reward thee" (Prov. xxv, 21, 22).

5. If thou see the ass of him that hateth thee lying under his burden, and wouldest forbear
to release it for him, thou shalt surely release it

6. Thou shalt not wrest the judgement of thy poor in his cause. 7. Keep thee far from a false matter; and the innocent and righteous slay
thou not: for I will not justify the wicked. 8.
And thou shalt take no gift: for a gift blindeth them that have sight, and perverteth the cause of the righteous. 9. And a stranger shalt thou

6–9. Impartiality in Justice

6. wrest the judgment. "As is well known, the maladministration of justice is, and always has been, a crying evil among Oriental nations" (Driver); but nowhere has there been such ringing denunciation of oppression of the poor and of denying justice to the victims of violence, as in Israel.

7. a false matter. In the administration of justice; but this warning has the wider application as a rule of life of the highest importance.

innocent and righteous. Take every possible precaution so as not to condemn an innocent person to death. According to Talmudical law, a condemned man must have a re-trial whenever new evidence is forthcoming; but if there has been an acquittal, there cannot be a fresh hearing of the case.

justify the wicked. Better, acquit a guilty person. The guilty will not escape punishment at the hand of God, even if the human tribunal fails to inflict it.

8. gift. Better, bribe.

perverteth. Or, "subverteth." "Destroys the case of a good man" (Moffatt).

10–12. THE SABBATH YEAR AND SABBATH DAY

The institution of the Sabbatical year is fully treated in Lev. XXV and Deut. XV. It is included here because, in one aspect, it reinforced the teaching of humanity to the poor and helpless (Ibn Ezra, Luzzatto).

11. shalt let it rest. Or, "release it." Heb. shamat, from which comes the name, shemittah, for the Sabbatical year, the Sabbath of the fields. "The soil enjoyed a regular rest, doubly necessary in the imperfect state of agriculture of those ages, and calculated considerably to enhance its fertility in the other years" (Kalisch).

may eat. In an ordinary year, the poor could gather up the gleanings of the field, and also take from the "corner" which had to be left unreaped (Lev. XIX, 9f). In the Sabbatical year, there was no harvesting. Proprietor, servants, the poor and the stranger, all had equal rights to the produce (Lev. XXV, 6). Even the beasts of the field are not forgotten.

12. "Even though the entire year be one of 'rest,' the weekly Sabbath day must be observed" (Mechilta). And as with the Sabbatical year, so with the Sabbath day; the law is restated here in order to emphasise its humanitarian teaching of affording complete rest to the servant, the stranger and the domestic animals.

not oppress: for ye know the heart of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.
10. And six years thou shalt sow thy land, and shalt gather in the increase thereof: 11. but the seventh year thou shalt let it rest and lie fallow; that the poor of thy people may eat: and what they leave the beast of the field shall eat. In like manner thou shalt deal with thy vineyard, and with thy oliveyard. 12. Six days thou shalt do thy work, and on the seventh day thou shalt rest: that thine ox and thine ass may have rest, and the son of thy handmaid, and the stranger, may be refreshed. 13. And in all things that I have said unto you take ye heed: and make no mention of the name of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth.
14. Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year. 15. The feast of unleavened bread be refreshed. Equivalent to the colloquial, "catch their breath." The word translated "refreshed" (וינפש) is connected with the word נפש "soul"; even the lowliest in Israel is to be reminded by the Sabbath day that he has a soul, that there is a higher life than mere drudgery; he is to receive spiritual refreshment on the Sabbath day.

13. make no mention. The Israelites could not serve God and any other deity at the same time: the very mention of the name of other gods is forbidden to them.

14–18. THE THREE ANNUAL PILGRIM FESTIVALS

The three pilgrimages which every adult Israelite had to make to the Sanctuary are more fully treated in Lev. XXIII and Deut. XVI.

הַמַּצּוֹת֮ תִּשְׁמֹר֒ שִׁבְעַ֣ת יָמִים֩ תֹּאכַ֨ל מַצּ֜וֹת כַּֽאֲשֶׁ֣ר צִוִּיתִ֗ךָ empty. This is explained in Deut. xvi, 17, "every man shall give as he is able, according to the blessing of the Lord thy God which He hath given thee." The pilgrim should bring with him offerings expressive of his gratitude for God's bounty.

16. feast of harvest. i.e. the feast of the first harvest. This is the festival of Pentecost. In Num. xxviii, 26, it is called יום הבכורים the day on which the first loaves made from the new corn were offered. In Deut. xvi, 10, it is called חג שבעות the Feast of Weeks, because it is kept seven complete weeks after the first day of Passover. Jewish Tradition describes it as זמן מתן תורתנו, the anniversary of the Giving of the Torah, the revelation of the Decalogue having taken place on the sixth day of Sivan.

feast of ingathering. The Festival of Tabernacles; see Lev. xxiii, 34, 39f.

the end of the year. i.e. of the agricultural year; see on Lev. xxiii, 24.

17. all thy males. i.e. adult males. Women are freed from all positive commandments depending on time, מצוות עשה שהזמן גרמא. Women could not be expected to leave their children unattended. Though it was not obligatory for them to do so, women were in the habit of accompanying their husbands to the Sanctuary; e.g. Elkanah and Hannah and Peninnah in I Sam. I; see further on xxxiv, 24.

time appointed in the month Abib (for in it thou camest out from Egypt); and none shall appear

the firstfruits of thy labours, which thou sowest in the field: and the feast of ingathering, at the end of the year, when thou gatherest in thy labours out of the field. 17. Three times in the year all thy males shall appear before the Lord GOD.

18. Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; neither shall the fat of my feast remain all night until the morning. 19. The first of the firstfruits of thy ground thou shalt bring into the house of the LORD thy God.
Thou shalt not seethe a kid in its mother's thou shalt not seethe. This command is repeated in XXXIV, 26 and Deut. XIV, 21. Upon these words, the Rabbis based the prohibition against eating meat and milk together in any way or form whatever. This prohibition was doubtless observed long before the age of the Rabbis; and in connecting it with this text, they merely sought a support in the Torah for an immemorial Jewish practice. Thus,

כ הִנֵּה אָנֹכִי שֹׁלֵחַ מַלְאָךְ לְפָנֶיךָ לִשְׁמָרְךָ בַּדָּרֶךְ וְלַהֲבִיאֲךָ
21 אֶל־הַמָּקוֹם אֲשֶׁר הֲכִנֹתִי׃ הִשָּׁמֶר מִפָּנָיו וּשְׁמַע בְּקֹלוֹ
22 אַל־תַּמֵּר בּוֹ כִּי לֹא יִשָּׂא לְפִשְׁעֲכֶם כִּי שְׁמִי בְּקִרְבּוֹ׃ כִּי
אִם־שָׁמוֹעַ תִּשְׁמַע בְּקֹלוֹ וְעָשִׂיתָ כֹּל אֲשֶׁר אֲדַבֵּר וְאָיַבְתִּי
23 אֶת־אֹיְבֶיךָ וְצַרְתִּי אֶת־צֹרְרֶיךָ׃ כִּי־יֵלֵךְ מַלְאָכִי לְפָנֶיךָ
וֶהֱבִיאֲךָ אֶל־הָאֱמֹרִי וְהַחִתִּי וְהַפְּרִזִּי וְהַכְּנַעֲנִי הַחִוִּי וְהַיְבוּסִי

Onkelos, who usually keeps close to the Hebrew text, renders, "ye shall not eat flesh and milk."

As to the original purpose of this law, opinions are divided. Some explain it that the command is levelled against idolatry and superstition (Maimonides); others state that it is a humanitarian ordinance intended to discourage a practice that would tend to harden the heart (Abarbanel, Luzzatto). "We no longer know by what revolting sight this prohibition may have been called forth, but evidently that phrase became a kind of memorial by which Israel should always be reminded of that considerate humanity which was to distinguish it from the barbarous nations" (Ewald). Ibn Ezra writes: "the reason of this prohibition is concealed from the eyes of even the wise." Mendelssohn's comment on this law is, "The benefit arising from the many inexplicable laws of God is in their practice, and not in the understanding of their motives."

20–23. An Exhortation

The summary of the entire Divine legislation—the Decalogue—has been followed by an outline of the most necessary moral, religious and civil precepts. An exhortation is now added, as is usual throughout the Torah, faithfully to adhere to these laws, with the promise of the special Providential guidance to the Holy Land, and a happy existence in it, as rewards of such obedience.

an angel. The Heb. word does not of necessity imply a supernatural being. It denotes, as does also the English word in its original signification, a messenger; and it is evident that an actual person is meant. Consequently, it is most natural to understand the word as a reference to Moses, with whom God had spoken "face to face," and who was able to communicate His will to the people

20. Behold, I send an angel before thee, to keep thee by the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared. 21. Take ye heed of him, and hearken unto his voice; be not rebellious against him: for he will not pardon your transgression; for my name is in him. 22. But if thou shalt indeed hearken unto his voice, and do all that I speak; then I will be an enemy unto thine enemies, and an adversary unto thine adversaries. 23. For mine angel shall go before thee, and bring thee in unto the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Canaanite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite: and I will cut them off.

(Ralbag and Luzzatto). Moses would only command what God had ordained; therefore, loyalty to him would mean obedience of God. The prophets and priests are also sometimes called God's "angels"; cf. Mal. II, 7 (Genesis, p. 478).

the place. The Promised Land.

21. he will not pardon. Because he cannot pardon. Although he may desire to be lenient with you and overlook your faults, God will punish disobedience.

my name. God's "name," i.e. His Divine authority, was vested in His messenger; see on III, 13.

22. I will be an enemy. God would help them against their foes who stood in the way of their taking possession of Canaan.

23. mine angel. Not necessarily identical with the "angel" of v. 20. In point of fact, it was Joshua who completed this task; but he, like Moses, was Divinely appointed to the leadership (Deut. XXXI, 23).

Amorite. Cf. III, 17.

I will cut them off. God, and not the "angel," will assure the victory to them. The Israelites were ever to remember to Whom alone they owed their success. Ehrlich connects v. 23 and 24 and translates, "When mine angel shall go before thee . . . and I cut them off, thou shalt not bow down to their gods."

sickness. Cf. xv, 26.

26. I will fulfil. God will allow the individual to reach old age and not come to a premature end. It is analogous to "that thy days may be long" (xx, 12).

turn their backs. In flight.

28. hornet. Cf. Deut. vii, 20; Josh. xxiv, 12. The Israelites would be assisted in their campaign by swarms of stinging insects, which would harry and weaken the enemy.

24. Thou shalt not bow down to their gods, nor serve them, nor do after their works: but thou shalt utterly overthrow them, and break in pieces their pillars. 25. And ye shall serve the LORD your God, and he shall bless thy bread, and thy water; and I will take sickness away from the midst of thee.* vii 26. There shall none cast her young, nor be barren, in thy land:
the number of thy days I will fulfil. 27. I will send my terror before thee, and will discomfit all the people to whom thou shalt come, and I will make all thine enemies turn their backs unto thee.
28. And I will send the hornet before thee, which shall drive out the Hivite, the Canaanite, and the Hittite, from before thee. 29. I will not drive them out from before thee in one year;
lest the land become desolate, and the beast of the field multiply against thee. 30. By little and little I will drive them out from before thee,
until thou be increased, and inherit the land.

Some commentators take the Heb. word for "hornet" as a synonym of "terror" in the preceding verse, and regard it as a metaphor to describe the forces which God would employ to enable the Israelites to gain the victory.

29. beast of the field multiply. The same thought occurs again in Deut. VII, 22. If the Canaanites had been swept from the land in a single, continuous campaign, the Israelites would not have been sufficiently numerous to inhabit the whole country. In consequence the large areas left desolate would swarm with wild beasts. Thus, after the deportation of the Ten Tribes to Assyria, lions infested the desolate district; see II Kings XVII, 25.

30. by little and little. The conquest of Canaan was not completed until the end of David's reign.

33. a snare. A lure to destruction.

Chapter XXIV. Ratification of the Covenant

1. and he said unto Moses. After the Decalogue had been proclaimed in the hearing of the entire people, Moses again ascended the mountain (xx, 18), and received the commandments which form the Book of the Covenant (xx, 19–xxiii, 33). God commanded Moses to plaee these laws before the people, and then come to the mountain with Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy elders (xxiv, 1), though he alone was to ascend the mountain (v. 2). Moses did so. He communicated to the people the words of God (v. 3), and after having ratified the covenant with a sacrifice, he went up with the men named (v. 9), when they were shown

31. And I will set thy border from the Red Sea even unto the sea of the Philistines, and from the wilderness unto the River: for I will deliver the inhabitants of the land into your hand; and thou shalt drive them out before thee. 32. Thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor with their gods. 33. They shall not dwell in thy land, lest they make thee sin against me: for if thou serve their gods, it will surely be a snare unto thee.

Chapter XXIV

answered with one voice. As in xix, 8. "The unanimity, with which the Israelites here pledge themselves to the Divine worship partakes of the sublime; and we willingly forget for a moment, how little they remained faithful to this promise even in the time immediately following" (Kalisch).

4. pillars. These were to serve as a symbol that the twelve tribes had accepted the Covenant; cf. Gen. xxxi, 45f; Josh. xxiv, 27.

5. the young men. Onkelos renders, "the firstborn," in agreement with the Talmudical statement that before the institution of the priesthood, the duty of offering sacrifice devolved upon the firstborn. "Only the firstborn sons of the seventy elders can here be intended" (Ibn Ezra).

9–11. Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy elders go up into the Mount, and are vouchsafed a mystic vision of the Divine Glory. The reason why Joshua is not named here cannot be that he was one of the seventy elders (as Nachmanides declares), because it is evident from v. 13f that he was not included in that body. The explanation must be that Joshua was only present in his capacity of attendant on Moses, and represented no section of the people, as did the others.

10. and they saw. "And they beheld the majesty of the God of Israel, and beneath His majestic throne was work of precious stones, etc." (Onkelos). The idea which the verse conveys is that they did not directly see the Deity; but gazing upwards there appeared to them "a work of bright sapphire" (cf. Ezek. I, 26), clear as a cloudless sky, through which they "beheld God." What these men actually experienced is, of course, beyond human ken; but it is supposed that they fell into a trance in which this mystic vision was seen by them.

children of Israel he laid not his hand: and they

me into the mount, and be there: and I will give thee the tables of stone, and the law and thou mayest teach them. 13. And Moses rose and the law. Better, even the law. This rendering is supported by the phrase, "which I have written," since only the Decalogue had been committed to writing.

The Rabbis explain that the words, "tables of stone," refer to the Decalogue; "the law," to the Pentateuch; "the commandment," to the Mishna; "which I have written," to the Prophets and the other Sacred Writings of Scripture (the Hagiographa); "that thou mayest teach them," to the Talmud. All of these—they say—were given to Moses on Sinai. The purpose of this comment was to emphasise that the Oral Law—the Mishna and the Talmud—represents the Torah in the fullness of its spiritual content. This is the attitude of Traditional Judaism. Every interpretation of the Law given by a universally recognised authority is regarded as given on Sinai; for every shade of meaning which Divinely inspired interpreters discover in the Law, merely states explicitly what is implicitly and organically contained in it from the very beginning.

13. Joshua. See XVII, 9. Joshua accompanied Moses from the camp of Israel and remained in the lower part of the Mount (Ibn Ezra).

NOTE E

IS THE CODE OF HAMMURABI THE SOURCE OF THE MOSAIC CIVIL LAW?

For nearly a century there has been continuous archaeological rediscovery of ancient Civilisations that had for ages vanished from earth. To take one example: we possess to-day the actual originals of the code of laws, administrative orders and official letters of King Hammurabi, who was a contemporary of Abraham, and is mentioned in the early chapters of the Book of Genesis. This code of laws is one of the landmarks in world history, and has important bearings on the civil legislation of the Torah.

Mesopotamia. The original inhabitants of the Euphrates Valley—the domain of King Hammurabi—are generally spoken of as Sumerians. Thousands of years before any other people, they built brick-houses, devised a strong family organisation, and grouped themselves into city-states. The first schools in the world were established by them; and the Sumerians were the pioneers in alphabetic writing, architecture, weights and measures, and scientific irrigation. Their division of the circle into 360 degrees, and of the hour into sixty minutes of sixty seconds, has remained to this day.

The extraordinary fertility of their land made it the goal of invaders from the desert countries to the east and west. The vastest of these invading hordes in historic times, arrived about the 2500 B.C.E. from the Arabian Peninsula. The invaders overwhelmed the country, and founded the city of Babylon in the year 2300—the city that was destined in time to become the emporium of the East and mistress of the world. The new population thoroughly assimilated, and immeasurably advanced, the religion and culture of the original Sumerians. The zenith of this Babylonian civilisation was reached under the sixth king of the Semitic dynasty, King Amraphel, better known as Hammurabi (1945-1902 B.C.E.), whose great achievement was the codification of Babylonian law. A generation ago this Code of Hammurabi was rediscovered for the modern world.

Babylonian Society. Nothing can give us such an insight into the cultural and social life of the Babylonians 3,900 years ago as this collection of laws. Society, in ancient Babylonia, consisted of certain definite castes; king, court and priests, men of gentle birth (aristocrats and officers), commoners and slaves. The differences between the social grades can be seen by various regulations; e.g. where capital punishment for theft was commuted for by payment, the thief had to pay thirtyfold if the theft was from the royal estate; tenfold, if from a gentleman; fivefold, if from a commoner. The commoner was a free man, but subject to corvée, or forced unpaid labour, and liable to be sold into slavery for debt or for crime.

The slave was merely a chattel, with his owner's name branded or tattooed on his arm, and could not go beyond the city gates without a written pass from his master. A strict fugitive slave law was in operation, which, in some respects, was as harsh as the American fugitive slave law of "Uncle Tom" days. There were statutory rewards for the captor of the runaway slave; while anyone enticing a slave to escape, was punished by death. Contrast with this the commandment in Deuteronomy XXIII, 16, "Thou shalt not deliver unto his master a bondman that is escaped from his master unto thee."

If a slave married a free woman, the children were free. If a free man married a slave woman, even as a second wife, the children were free, and the slave woman also became free on her master's death. The first wife had the right to punish insolence, but only by degradation. Ishmael, the son of a free man and a bond-servant, Hagar, is free. When Hagar is insolent to Sarah, the latter may punish her as harshly as Abraham would permit, but she could no longer sell her.

The position of woman in Babylonian life was favourable. In marriage between different social grades, the wife maintained, and her children inherited, the higher status. On her marriage she brought a dowry to her husband, which remained tied to her for life. As wife, she could be witness, conduct business in her own name, and possess property which her husband's creditors could not take to pay any of his ante-nuptial debts.

Land laws and commerce. Land was private property, subject to an impost levied on the crop. Vast herds and flocks were owned. The shepherd gave a receipt for the animals entrusted to him, and was bound to return them with reasonable increase. He was allowed to use a certain number for food, and was not responsible for those killed by lion or lightning. Any loss due to his carelessness he had to repay tenfold. This illustrates Jacob's protest to Laban: "This twenty years have I been with thee; thy ewes and thy she-goats have not cast their young, and the rams of thy flocks have I not eaten. That which was torn of beasts I brought not unto thee; I bare the loss of it; of my hand didst thou require it, whether stolen by day or stolen by night" (Gen. XXXI, 38, 39).

In commerce, there was the all-pervading obligation of putting every business transaction in writing, signed, sealed, witnessed and in duplicate. There were detailed regulations for rent, lease and lease guarantees, administrators of property, safe-deposit, warehousing, partnership, commercial travellers and agents, transport and shipping. There were fixed tariffs for various classes of labourers, ox-drivers, harvesters, veterinary surgeons, shipbuilders, boatmen and branders. The physician's fee was fixed according to the social grade of the patient, the builder's according to the size of the house.

The value placed on human life in this Code is slight. Horrible mutilations abound—of eyes, ears, tongue and hand; and there are thirty-four crimes for which the death penalty is inflicted; among these, every kind of theft, including receiving and buying from servants. It is well, however, to compare with this list, and the horrible forms of death prescribed, the exceedingly cruel modes of execution in European countries down to quite modern times. Even in England, pocket-picking was punishable by death till the year 1808, and sheep-stealing until 1832!

Moses and Hammurabi. Much more interesting than the examination of the detailed regulations of the Code is the question, What is the influence of this oldest code of laws in the world on the Mosaic civil law?

It is now admitted that some of the stories of the Patriarchs can only be fully understood in the light of Hammurabi family and shepherd law. This is so, as we have seen in the Sarah-Hagar incident; likewise, the complaint of Jacob against Laban is in strict conformity with sections 261 to 267 of the Code of Hammurabi. As for the legal portions of Exodus, Leviticus and Deuteronomy, no feature can be definitely singled out as derived from Code Hammurabi. There are, however, some twenty-four instances of analogies and resemblances between the two Codes—in regard to the laws of kidnapping, burglary, deposit, assault, and various others; and especially in the lex talionis, life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth. Now, it is argued, in view of the fact that the Mosaic law is at least 400 years the younger of the two, these resemblances constitute strong evidence that the Hammurabi Code is the immediate or the remote source of the Mosaic civil and criminal legislation.

Many scholars, however, challenge this inference. They say that common laws are often due to common human experience, which is much the same everywhere. The history of the Patriarchs, they agree, has a Babylonian background; but this is so because they were of Babylonian descent. Abraham came from Ur of the Chaldees, a favourite city of his contemporary Hammurabi. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, all lived in Canaan, which was then under Babylonian sway. The Mosaic Law, however, is in no way indebted to the Babylonian. For it would be absolutely inexplicable why there are no Babylonian loan-words in its terminology, if the Babylonian law were the source of the Pentateuchal legislation. A higher culture always forces its use of language upon a primitive people which adopts that culture. Again, laws as the peculiar expression of a people's life, can only be imported where the habits of life of the two peoples are related, and where similar social and economic conditions exist. Now, Israel is the least Babylonian of peoples, being nomadic, rural, primitive; whereas Babylon has an intricate, highly industrialised, commercial city-civilisation. In Israel, the people is in possession of sovereign rights; the king is under the law. In Babylon, a limited monarchy would have been deemed a contradiction in terms. In Israel, the death penalty for property crimes is abolished; and, whether the theft be from king, noble, commoner or slave, the fine is the same. The slave is considered a human being. He is to go free for the loss of an eye, or even a tooth, at the hands of his master. The Babylonian Code closes with the case of the slave whose ear is to be cut off for desiring freedom; whereas the Mosaic Civil law (Exodus XXI, 2-6) opens with the case of the slave whose ear is to be bored as a mark of disgrace for refusing to go free when his six years of servitude are at an end! There is not a trace of the Biblical ideal of personal holiness in the Babylonian Code, or of the beneficence and consideration to the poor and needy, which is so characteristic of the Mosaic legislation. Deeper still is the abyss between this Code and the Mosaic Law in their respective attitudes to human freedom. The words of Henry George, spoken fifty years ago, concerning the Mosaic Law, still hold good:

> "The Hebrew commonwealth was based upon the individual—a commonwealth whose ideal it was that every man should sit under his own vine and fig-tree, with none to vex him or make him afraid; a commonwealth in which none should be condemned to ceaseless toil; in which for even the bond-slave there should be hope; in which for even the beast of burden there should be rest. It is not the protection of property, but the protection of humanity, that is the aim of the Mosaic Code. Its Sabbath day and Sabbath year secure, even to the lowliest, rest and leisure. With the blasts of the jubilee trumpets the slave goes free, and a re-division of the land secures again to the poorest his fair share in the bounty of the common Creator. The reaper must leave something for the gleaner; even the ox cannot be muzzled as he treadeth out the corn. Everywhere, in everything, the dominant idea is that of our homely phrase, 'Live and let live.'"

"Eye for eye" in Mosaic Law. Further, nothing can illustrate the fundamental difference of the legal systems of these two peoples better than their different application of the law of taliation, or the rule of "measure for measure." The enunciation of the principle of "life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth," is to-day recognised as one of the most far-reaching steps in human progress. It means the substitution of legal punishment, and as far as possible the exact equivalent of the injury, in place of wild revenge. It is the spirit of equity. The Church Father, Augustine, was one of the first to declare that taliation was a law of justice, not of hatred; one eye, not two, for an eye; one tooth, not ten, for a tooth; one life, not a whole family, for a life. The founders of International Law—Hugo Grotius, Jean Bodin and John Selden—all maintain that the rule "eye for an eye" enjoins, on the one hand, that a fair and equitable relation must exist between the crime and the punishment; and, on the other hand, that all citizens are equal before the law, and that the injuries of all be valued according to the same standard. "It is a law appropriate only for free peoples"—said one of the pioneers of modern Bible exegesis, John D. Michaelis—"in which the poorest inhabitant has the same rights as his most aristocratic assailant . . . It deems the tooth of the poorest peasant as valuable as that of the nobleman; strangely so, because the peasant must bite crust, while the nobleman eats cake." Of course, in primitive society, there was great danger of this principle becoming petrified into a hard and fast rule of terrible cruelty. In the Mosaic Law, however, monetary commutation had already begun. This is seen from the prohibition of accepting money-compensation for malicious murder: "Ye shall take no ransom for the life of a manslayer, which is guilty of death." (Numbers xxxv, 31). The literal application of "eye for eye, tooth for tooth" was excluded in Rabbinic Law; and there is no instance in Jewish history of its literal application ever having been carried out.

"Son for son, and daughter for daughter" in Code Hammurabi. Very different is the way in which this principle was applied in the Code of Hammurabi. The whole Code seems to be built on it; and instead of being merely a general maxim, as in Hebrew jurisprudence, it is taken literally and translated into cold prose; e.g. "If a man has caused the tooth of a man who is his equal to fall out, one shall make his tooth to fall out"; and similarly in fourteen other cases. It is true that here likewise the beginning of money-compensation appears; but not for the aristocrat or free-born, only for slaves. Furthermore, the taliation principle is extended and carried to grotesque extremes. For example, if the jerry-builder, by his faulty constructing of a house, causes the death of the owner, the jerry-builder is killed; but if he causes the death of the son or daughter of the owner, then not the jerry-builder, but his son or his daughter is killed! This illumines a passage in the Mosaic civil code which no one could ever explain till the discovery of the Hammurabi Code. In Exodus, xxi, 28-31, we read:

> "If an ox gore a man or a woman, that they die, the ox shall surely be stoned; but the owner of the ox shall be quit. But if the ox were wont to gore in time past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; the ox shall be stoned, and his owner also shall be put to death. If there be laid on him a ransom, then he shall give for the redemption of his life whatsoever is laid upon him. Whether he have gored a son or have gored a daughter, according to this judgment shall it be done unto him."

Now, what is the meaning of the last clause? Prof. David Mueller, whose treatise on the Code (Die Gesetze Hammurabis und ihr Verhaeltniss zur mosaischen Gesetzgebung, Vienna, 1903) is by far the best and most scholarly, reminds us that in the pre-Mosaic age, if a goring ox killed a man, the owner of the ox was killed; if, however, he killed a son or daughter, then not the owner of the ox, but his son or his daughter was killed. By this one unobtrusive clause, Whether he have gored a son or have gored a daughter, according to this judgment shall it be done unto him—the Torah sweeps away an infamous caricature of human justice. And that the meaning of this clause be for ever unmistakable, it again elsewhere declares (Deuteronomy XXIV, 6), "The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, neither shall the children be put to death for the fathers. Every man shall be put to death for his own sin."

No direct relation between the Codes. Now these differences certainly do away with the notion that Code Hammurabi is the source of the Mosaic Civil Law. The best authoritative opinion indeed holds that these two systems are independent codifications of ancient Semitic Common Law. The resemblances in the two codes are due to the common usage of the Semitic ancestors of both Babylonians and Hebrews. This common element was in Babylon developed into the Code of Hammurabi; but in Israel it was, under Providence, sifted and transmuted in such a way as to include love of stranger, protection of slave, the Ten Commandments, and the law, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself" (Leviticus XIX, 18, 34).

As to the influence of these Codes on the legislation of later ages, all trace of the Babylonian Code seems to have been lost with the passing of the Assyro-Babylonian Empire. It is far otherwise with Biblical Law. Woodrow Wilson called attention to the potent leaven of Judaic thought in the legislations of the Western peoples throughout the Christian era. "It would be a mistake," he writes,

> "to ascribe to Roman legal conceptions an undivided sway over the development of law and institutions during the Middle Ages. The laws of Moses as well as the laws of Rome contributed suggestions and impulse to the men and institutions which were to prepare the modern world; and if we could but have the eyes to see the subtle elements of thought which constitute the gross substance of our present habit, both as regards the sphere of private life and as regards the action of the State, we should easily discover how very much besides religion we owe to the Jew."

The discovery of the Hammurabi Code at the beginning of this century was most disturbing to Bible Critics. It had been to them one of the "finalities of scholarship" that the Pentateuch came after the Prophets in time and was not, and could not have been, Mosaic. Now it was seen that as early as the days of Abraham there existed not only written laws, but a Code full of most remarkable detail which shed a new light on the Patriarchs and on the Torah. And though in Liberal Jewish circles the discovery of this Babylonian Code was hailed as "a blow to Orthodoxy," because of its resemblances to the Mosaic Law, closer examination has made abundantly clear the everlasting difference between the two—in humanity, righteousness and holiness.

That discovery, followed as it soon was by the finding of the Assyrian and Hittite Codes, has impressed a much-needed lesson on Bible Critics; and that is, Wisdom is not of yesterday! "We must rid ourselves of the notion," wrote the late Prof. Baentsch of Jena, one of the foremost Biblical scholars of our times, "that the pre-Mosaic age in Israel was barbarous or semi-barbarous, with animistic tree, stone and ancestor worship; with fetishism, totemism, witchcraft and other such beautiful things. To-day, we know that the age of Abraham was the outcome of a religious development that goes back many thousands of years." Verily, the horizon of human history has been widened by millenia; and the evolutionary view of history, the view which holds that progress is always in a straight line, is seen to be both fatalistic and false. There are ebb and flow tides in the history of the human spirit; and periods of decline like the post-Homeric age in early Greece, or the barbarous period of the Judges in Israel, can no longer be used to disprove the existence of the Creative Epochs that preceded them. Once again (cf. Genesis, p. 111) we have seen that the words of the Psalmist, "Truth shall spring from the earth," have become literally fulfilled; and the very stones of the Euphrates and Tigris valleys have given their decisive testimony in vindication of the Torah.

The Sanctuary

With the exception of chaps. xxxii–xxxiv, which tell the story of the Golden Calf, the remainder of the Book of Exodus is concerned with the construction of the Sanctuary.

Israel had been redeemed from bondage, and God had proclaimed His laws unto them at Sinai. The communion of God with Moses and Israel was not, however, to cease with Israel's departure from Sinai. Moses is bidden to erect a Sanctuary that shall be a visible emblem to the people that God dwelleth among them.

In form, the Sanctuary was a portable structure, as it was to accompany the Israelites on their wanderings. It was primarily a tent, with a wooden frame-work to give it greater stability and security than ordinary tent-poles could give. The entire Sanctuary consisted of three parts :—

(1) There was the outer Court, enclosed by curtains supported on pillars. It was oblong in shape, 100 cubits by 50, and the entrance was on the eastern side ; see p. 320, 321.

(2) Within the Court, facing the entrance, was the Altar of Sacrifice ; and, behind it, towards the West, was the Laver for the Priests.

(3) In the Western portion of the Court was the Sanctuary proper, the Tabernacle. This was divided by a " Veil," or hanging curtain, into two chambers ; see p. 321. The first of these, which only the priests might enter, was the Holy Place, containing the Table, the Candlestick and the Altar of Incense. The second of the chambers was called the Holy of Holies, and contained the Ark of the Covenant. This was entered once a year by the High Priest on the Day of Atonement. Precious metals and finely woven coloured materials were employed in its construction. The nearer an object was to the Holy of Holies, the rarer and costlier the material; the objects further off being made of bronze and ordinary woven cloths.

The northern, western and southern sides of the Tabernacle were a wooden framework; the eastern side, i.e. the front, consisted of a screen. The entire Tabernacle was covered by a tent, and over the tent there were further coverings.

Practically all commentators are agreed that the Sanctuary was a symbol; and its purpose, to impress the children of men with spiritual teachings. What, however, were the spiritual teachings which the Tabernacle symbolised? This question offered full scope to the ingenuity of mystic interpreters, ancient and modern, Jewish and non-Jewish, who declared the Sanctuary to be an epitome of that which is presented on a larger scale in the Universe as a whole, and an emblem of Religion's profoundest teachings on Life and Eternity.

Their interpretations, however, are too remote from the spirit of the plain narrative to carry conviction. Much more helpful is the view of Maimonides that the main purpose of the Sanctuary was to wean the Israelites from idolatrous worship and turn them towards God. The Sanctuary and its ritual occupy so large a place both in the Torah and in the life of ancient Israel, because they formed part of the Divine scheme in moulding the Chosen People for its spiritual mission. The Sanctuary re-inforced the laws which Moses had been commanded to set before the children of Israel. It kept before them the thought that God was in their midst; and their life, individually and collectively, had to be influenced by that knowledge. As God was holy and as the Sanctuary was holy, so must the Israelites make the sanctification of their lives the aim of all their endeavours. The Sanctuary thus embodies the principle which is the central thought of the whole of the Divine revelation to Moses.

whose heart maketh him willing. Whosoever is stirred by a spontaneous desire to participate in the holy work. The beauty of the Tabernacle and the donation of material objects of value rendered necessary thereby, called forth the spirit of self-sacrifice. The construction of the Tabernacle with its demands for all treasures of the thought that invents and of the hand that labours; of wisdom and beauty; of wealth of wood, and weight of stone; of the strength of iron, and the light of gold—thus became an external sign of love and gratitude and surrender to God's will (Ruskin).

acacia wood. lit. "wood of Shittim," the Arabic name of the acacia tree. This tree grows abundantly in the Sinai Peninsula, but not further north. It is a most durable wood.

8, 9. Purpose of the Sanctuary

8. make me. i.e. "For My Name" (Rashi). It would only be a Sanctuary so long as it remained dedicated to the service of God.

sanctuary. Heb. mikdash. The same word occurs in the Song of Moses (xv, 13 and 17), and Ibn Ezra refers those phrases ("Thou hast guided them . . . to Thy holy habitation . . . the sanctuary which Thy hands have established") to Mt. Sinai, which is indeed treated as a sanctuary in xix and xx. "God, who on Sinai dwelt in a Sanctuary which His hands have made, is now to dwell in a Sanctuary which Israel would make; and the Tabernacle would be a wandering Sinai" (B. Jacob).

that I may dwell. Heb. ושכנתי; the verb is the one from which Shechinah, the Rabbinic term for the Divine Presence, is derived.

dwell among them. Note that the Torah does not say, "that I may dwell in it," but "among them," i.e. in the midst of the people. The Sanctuary was not the dwelling-place of God; cf. I Kings viii, 27. It was the symbol of that holiness which was to be the rule of life for the Israelites, if His Spirit was to abide with the community. They were to hold themselves aloof from everything that was defiling, because God was amongst them (Lev. xv, 31). The Sanctuary was, therefore, the fountain of holiness for the congregation of Israel.

light, spices for the anointing oil, and for the sweet incense; 7. onyx stones, and stones to be set, for the ephod, and for the breastplate. 8. And let them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them. 9. According to all that I shew thee, the pattern of the tabernacle, and the pattern of all the furniture thereof, even so shall ye make it.

10. And they shall make an ark of acacia wood:
two cubits and a half shall be the length there-
of, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof. 11. And

9. the pattern. Moses was given detailed instructions in his Vision. He was shown a model, as it were, of the construction, from which he was not to deviate.

tabernacle. Better, Dwelling. Heb. mishkan, the noun formed from the verb "dwell" used in the preceeding verse. The English word "tabernacle," is the usual translation of the Heb. ohel ("tent"), and designates that part of the Sanctuary which was protected by a tent, viz. the Holy Place and the Holy of Holies; see p. 320.

furniture. All the articles, vessels and utensils in connection with the tabernacle.

10–16. The Ark

The articles for the Holy of Holies are described first; and the beginning is made with the Ark, the most important article in the whole Sanctuary: the Tabernacle was the edifice constructed to contain the Ark (see on v. 16).

10. they shall make. As in v. 8. The following verses have "thou shalt;" i.e. Moses was to see that the command was duly carried out by others.

an ark. Also called, "ark of the covenant," "of the testimony," "of God," and "of the Lord."

cubit. lit. "the fore-arm," from the elbow to the tip of the middle finger—roughly eighteen inches; so that the Ark measured 3 feet 9 inches in length, and 2 feet and 3 inches in width and depth.

11. pure gold. Only the purest and most precious metal was used in connection with the Holy of Holies. The Ark was overlaid with gold inside, where it was not visible to the eye, as well as outside where it was visible; to teach us, that man must be as pure in mind and heart, as he appears pure in outward manner and bearing. Especially is it the duty of a scholar, continue the Rabbis, to be inwardly what he pretends to be outwardly (תוכו כברו).

crown. i.e. an ornamental rim or moulding.

12. two rings. For the purpose of transportation in the Israelites' wanderings in the Wilderness, the Ark was provided with four rings at its four feet, two on each side, through which two gilded poles of acacia wood were passed;

13. staves. Poles, by means of which the Ark was carried.

overlay them with gold. May mean either gilding, an art well-known in Egypt, or plating.

16. the testimony. i.e. the two Tables of the Law which were evidence of the Divine Covenant concluded with Israel. Cf. I Kings VIII, 9, "there was nothing in the ark save the two tables of stone." The imageless inmost shrine was a continuous proclamation of the spirituality of God. The knowledge that in the holiest part of the Sanctuary was deposited nothing but the original Tables of the Law, would ever impress the Israelites with the thought that thou shalt overlay it with pure gold, within and without shalt thou overlay it, and shalt make upon it a crown of gold round about.

12. And thou shalt cast four rings of gold for it, and put them in the four feet thereof; and two rings shall be on the one side of it, and two rings on the other side of it.
13. And thou shalt make staves of acacia wood, and overlay them with gold.
14. And thou shalt put the staves into the rings on the sides of the ark, to bear the ark withal.
15. The staves shall be in the rings of the ark: they shall not be taken from it.
16. And thou shalt put into the ark the testimony which I shall give thee.* ii
17. And thou shalt make a mercy-seat of pure gold: two cubits and a half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof.
18. And thou shalt make two cherubim

the moral laws engraved on them constituted the conditions of that Covenant between God and Israel.

17–22. The Mercy-seat and Cherubim

17. mercy-seat. Or, "ark-cover" (AJ). Heb. kapporeth. It was a slab of gold, of the same dimensions as the top surface of the Ark, and was set upon it. According to the Talmud, it was a handbreath in thickness. So much importance was attached to it, that in I Chron. XXVIII, 11, the Holy of Holies is called "the house of the kapporeth." The root of the word means not only "to cover," but also to "atone." It is, therefore, doubtful whether the kapporeth served no other purpose than that of a cover to the Ark.. It figures prominently in the ritual of the Day of Atonement (Lev. XVI, 2, 14f). The term "mercy-seat" was first used by Tindale.

18. cherubim. Apart from the mention of wings, there is no description offered of these emblematic figures. The Talmud, by a popular derivation of the Hebrew word,

19 מִקְשָׁה֙ תַּעֲשֶׂ֣ה אֹתָ֔ם מִשְּׁנֵ֖י קְצ֥וֹת הַכַּפֹּֽרֶת׃ וַ֠עֲשֵׂה כְּר֨וּב asserts that the cherubim had the faces of children. In Biblical poetry, the cherubim are an emblem of God's nearness to man. Thus the Psalmist speaks of God as "enthroned upon the cherubim" (Ps. LXXX, 2), when he invokes Him to help His people: that is, He is not far off in the heavens, and not powerless to aid, but a very present Helper in the day of distress and trouble.

beaten work. i.e. hammered out of one piece.

19. of one piece with. Heb. is simply "out of." The figures were not made separately and fastened to the mercy-seat, but both were fashioned out of the same mass of gold (Rashi).

20. covering the mercy-seat. The wings would thus veil the sight of the mercy-seat from the eyes of the High Priest when he entered the Holy of Holies on the Day of Atonement; and teach that no human being, even one who penetrated into the Holy of Holies, could attain to a full comprehension of God. There have been several mystical applications of the symbolism of the cherubim ("who had the faces of children") to educational problems. Children should be taught to aspire upwards ("spread out their wings on high"); to become protectors of the Ark of the Covenant ("covering the mercy-seat with their wings");

of gold; of beaten work shalt thou make them, at the two ends of the mercy-seat. 19. And make one cherub at the one end, and one cherub at the other end: of one piece with the mercy-seat shall ye make the cherubim on the two ends thereof.
20. And the cherubim shall spread out their wings on high, covering the mercy-seat with their wings, with their faces one to another; toward the mercy-seat shall the faces of the cherubim be.
21. And thou shalt put the mercy-seat above upon the ark; and in the ark thou shalt put the testimony that I shall give thee. 22. And there I will meet with thee, and I will commune with thee from above the mercy-seat, from between the two cherubim which are upon the ark of the testimony, of all things which I will give thee
in commandment unto the children of Israel.
23. And thou shalt make a table of acacia wood:
two cubits shall be the length thereof, and a cubit the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half the height thereof. 24. And thou shalt overlay it with pure gold, and make thereto a crown of their faces towards their fellow-man ("their faces one to another"); and their eyes towards the mercy-seat of God.

21. See v. 16.

22. will I meet with thee. Heb. ונועדתי; hence the whole sanctuary is called, אהל מועד "the Tent of Meeting," i.e. the place where God reveals His will, through Moses, to Israel.

23–30. The Table of Shewbread

23. table. A representation of this table is on the Arch of Titus.

24. a crown. An ornamental moulding, as in v. 11.

26. four rings. For purposes of transportation, as in v. 12.

flagons . . . bowls. Jars and chalices used for the libation of wine which accompanied the burning of the incense. The former would be the large flagons in which the wine was stored; the latter, the bowls used in the actual libation.

30. shewbread. lit. "bread of the Presence." It is described in Lev. XXIV, 5–9, where it is said to have consisted of twelve loaves of wheaten flour, corresponding in number to the tribes of Israel. It was placed on the table on the Sabbath, arranged in two rows, and left there until

And thou shalt make for it four rings of gold, and put the rings in the four corners that are on the four feet thereof. 27. Close by the border shall the rings be, for places for the staves to bear the table. 28. And thou shalt make the staves of acacia wood, and overlay them with gold, that the table may be borne with them. 29. And thou shalt make the dishes thereof, and the spoons thereof, and the flagons thereof, and the bowls thereof, to pour out withal: of pure gold shalt thou make them. 30. And thou shalt set upon the table shewbread before me alway.* iii s

the following Sabbath. When the loaves were removed, they were eaten by the priests. The symbolic meaning of the shewbread is a matter of conjecture. Maimonides confesses, "I do not know the object of the table with the bread upon it continually, and up to this day I have not been able to assign any reason to this commandment." Most commentators understand the Presence-bread as an expression of thankfulness and standing acknowledgment on the part of the children of Israel that God was the Giver of man's daily necessities.

cups. These were formed in the shape of an opened almond-blossom, the exterior being the "knops," and the interior the "flowers;" i.e. the outer and inner petals.

32. six branches. They curved to the same height as the central shaft, so that all the seven lamps were in a straight line. Seven represents the idea of completeness; and seven lamps therefore symbolise perfect light. See further on XXVII, 20f.

33. three cups. Each branch was divided into three parts by having a "cup" placed at the top end, and a third, and two-thirds of the way down towards the central shaft.

34–36. It is not quite certain from this description how these ornaments were arranged on the central shaft. The reconstruction on the page opposite is that of Riggenbach.

work of the cunning workman. Or, "work of a designer," or "pattern-weaver"; work requiring exceptional skill. The traditional explanation is that in this class of work, a design appeared on both sides of the fabric. Cunning is the old English word for "skilful."

2. length. The curtains were arranged in two sets of five, each set being 28 cubits in length and 20 cubits in breadth. The Tabernacle was 30 cubits long and 10 cubits in width and height. Consequently, as Josephus declares, the curtains "covered all the top and parts of the walls, on the sides and behind, so far as within one cubit of the ground"; because the two walls and top of the structure measured 30 cubits and the curtain only 28 cubits, leaving two cubits exposed. The length of the structure 30 cubits, and the western side, 10 cubits, would be exactly covered by the two sets of curtains, 20 cubits each in breadth. The eastern side, the entrance, was provided with a special screen; v. 36.

4. loops. Five curtains formed "a set," and at the edge of each set there were to be fifty loops, so that they could be coupled together by means of clasps.

6. the tabernacle shall be one. Ibn Ezra and others read a spiritual meaning into these instructions concerning the curtains. They were formed of separate pieces, yet they were so arranged that when they formed the covering of the Tabernacle they were a single whole. Similaly the community of Israel, comprising different tribes and families, must be linked together in peace and solidarity. God's people must form "a single band" to perform the will of their Father who is in Heaven.

7–14. The Curtains and Coverings of the Tent

7. of goats' hair. To protect the finely-spun curtains of the Tabernacle from dust and rain, there was a tent erected as an outer covering, and the sides of the tent were made of goats' hair cloth. There were eleven of these curtains. Why an additional one was required is explained in v. 9.

8. length. The goats' hair curtains were of the same breadth as the linen, but were two cubits longer to make up the deficiency of a cubit on each side (see on 2f).

9. double over. Two cubits' length of the curtain was folded back at the entrance on the east side, so as to form a kind of portal above the entrance.

10. Similar to v. 4f. It is not stated of what material the loops were to be made. They were probably of woven goats' hair. The clasps were of copper or bronze, because this outer covering was not part of the actual Tabernacle, like the curtains of linen, but only a protection against rain, dust and sun.

12 Since there were eleven hair-curtains as against ten of linen, and two cubits of the eleventh curtain had been accounted for in v. 9, the remaining two cubits were allowed to trail on the ground at the back of the edifice, on the west side.

13. The hair-curtains were two cubits longer than the linen, and this extra length provided for the cubit of the

8. The length of each curtain shall be thirty cubits, and the breadth of each curtain four cubits: the eleven curtains shall have one measure. 9. And thou shalt couple five curtains by themselves, and six curtains by themselves, and shalt double over the sixth curtain in the forefront of the tent. 10. And thou shalt make fifty loops on the edge of the one curtain that is outmost in the first set, and fifty loops upon the edge of the curtain which is outmost in the second set. 11. And thou shalt make fifty clasps of brass, and put the clasps into the loops, and couple the tent together, that it may be one. 12. And the over-hanging part that remaineth of the curtains of the tent, the half curtain that remaineth, shall hang over the back of the tabernacle. 13. And the cubit on the one side, and the cubit on the other side, of that which remaineth in the length of the curtains of the tent, shall hang over the sides of the tabernacle on this side and on that side, to cover it. 14. And thou shalt make a covering for the tent of rams' skins dyed red, and a covering of porpoise skins above.* iv boards on either side which was left exposed by the other curtains (2f). The sides were thus completely protected by the outer curtains.

14. As a further protection to the precious fabrics of the Tabernacle, there were two additional coverings of skin spread over the roof, and hanging down at the sides. According to some Rabbis, there was only one additional covering of ram's skins, with patches of porpoise skins.

15. boards. Either solid boards, or, as some have suggested, " frames;" i.e. two planks of wood joined by a cross-piece at the top and bottom.

standing up. The boards are to be placed vertically in position. The length of the board, ten cubits (15 feet) represents the height of the Tabernacle.

17. tenons. i.e. projecting pegs, which fitted into sockets. These tenons were "joined one to another," which may mean that they were fixed on to a plate of metal whereby they were held together.

18. twenty boards. Formed the length of the Tabernacle, each a cubit and a half in breadth. The total length was thus 30 cubits (45 feet).

south side. lit. "towards the Negeb," i.e. the arid Southern part of Palestine. Likewise in v. 22, "westward" is lit. "sea-ward," as the Mediterranean formed the Western horizon in Palestine. Bible Critics deduce from the use of such terms in this narrative that it was written after Israel had lived long enough in Canaan for the words

15. And thou shalt make the boards for the tabernacle of acacia wood, standing up. 16. Ten cubits shall be the length of a board, and a cubit and a half the breadth of each board. 17. Two tenons shall there be in each board, joined one to another: thus shalt thou make for all the boards of the tabernacle. 18. And thou shalt make the boards for the tabernacle, twenty boards for the south side southward. 19. And thou shalt make forty sockets of silver under the twenty boards; two sockets under one board for its two tenons, and two sockets under another board for its two tenons: 20. and for the second side of the tabernacle, on the north side, twenty boards: 21. and their forty sockets of silver; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board. 22. And for the hinder part of the tabernacle westward thou shalt make six boards. 23. And two boards shalt thou make for the corners of the tabernacle in the hinder part. 24. And they

to have acquired this sense. The argument is absurd; because it overlooks the fact that the Hebrew language did not originate in Egypt during the bondage, but that it had been in existence many many centuries before the Children of Israel went down to Egypt.

19. sockets. To receive the tenons or projecting pegs. These sockets were on the bases or pedestals which kept the boards erect. They also prevented the structure from resting upon the ground.

22. westward. There were only six boards to form the western wall, and these would occupy a space of nine cubits. It is certain that the width of the edifice was ten cubits, the same as the height. There is consequently still one cubit to be accounted for.

24. double. The remaining cubit (v. 22) was filled in by two boards, one fitted into each corner. These additional boards would naturally not protrude outside the building, but inside; and in this way they would be "double," since they overlapped the last of the twenty boards on each side. They would serve as buttresses and strengthen the corners.

the first ring. See v. 29.

25. eight boards. i.e., six mentioned in v. 22 and two in v. 23.

26. bars. Along each of the three walls of the Tabernacle, bars were fixed in three rows. The central bar was the entire length of the structure; but on the top and bottom rows, the bars were shorter.

29. places for the bars. Better, holders for the bars (AJ). These bars fitted into rings. The rings and bars were to join the walls fast together, "that the Tabernacle might not be shaken, either by the winds or by any other shall be double beneath, and in like manner they shall be entire unto the top thereof unto one ring: thus shall it be for them both; they shall be for the two corners. 25. And there shall be eight boards, and their sockets of silver, sixteen sockets; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board. 26. And thou shalt make bars of acacia wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle, 27. and five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the side of the tabernacle, for the hinder part westward. 28. And the middle bar in the midst of the boards shall pass through from end to end. 29. And thou shalt overlay the boards with gold, and make their rings of gold for places for the bars: and thou shalt overlay the bars with gold. 30. And thou shalt rear up the tabernacle according to the fashion thereof which hath been shewed thee in the mount.* v

31. And thou shalt make a veil of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen: with cherubim the work of the cunning workman means, but that it might preserve itself quiet and immoveable continually" (Josephus).

30. This verse (cf. xxv, 9, 40) perhaps implies that more detailed directions were given to Moses than are recorded in this Book; and this supplementary instruction filled in the gaps which occur in the written account, and explained its obscurities.

31–33. The Veil

31. veil. Its purpose was to form a partition between the Holy of Holies and the remaining part of the Tabernacle. It corresponded in fabric and design with the curtains (v. 1).

32. pillars. The veil was held up by four wooden posts with golden hooks. The posts fitted into silver sockets similar to those places under the boards (v. 19).

33. most holy. The Holy of Holies formed a perfect cube, being 10 cubits in height, length and breadth.

ark of the testimony. i.e. the Ark containing the two tables of stone (xxv, 10f).

35. thou shalt set. Rashi gives the traditional account of the arrangement of the furniture in the Tabernacle. The table of shewbread was set in the north, two and a half cubits from the wall; the candlestick in the south, an equal distance from the wall; and between the two was the golden altar of incense; see p. 321.

36. screen. Instead of the curtains, a special screen was made for the entrance. Its material was similar to the veil, except that no cherubim were embroidered thereon.

shall it be made. 32. and thou shalt hang it upon four pillars of acacia overlaid with gold, their hooks shall be of gold, upon four sockets of silver. 33. And thou shalt hang up the veil under the clasps, and shalt bring in thither within the veil the ark of the testimony: and the veil shall divide unto you between the holy place and the most holy. 34. And thou shalt put the mercy-seat upon the ark of the testimony in the most holy place. 35. And thou shalt set the table without the veil, and the candlestick over against the table on the side of the tabernacle toward the south: and thou shalt put the table on the north side. 36. And thou shalt make a screen for the door of the Tent, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, the work of the embroiderer. 37. And thou shalt make for the screen five pillars of acacia, and overlay them with gold; their hooks shall be of gold: and thou shalt cast five sockets of brass for them.* vi

37. five pillars. The screen, unlike the veil, which had four pillars, was supported by five. It would require this additional support because of the frequency with which it would be drawn aside to allow the priests to enter.

v. 3. הס׳ דגושה

CHAPTER XXVII

1–8. THE ALTAR OF BURNT-OFFERINGS

1. altar. The Rabbis explained the symbolism of the altar by making each letter of the Heb. name for altar (מִזְבֵּחַ) the initial of a word, thus: מחילה "forgiveness"—the altar was the channel whereby the Israelite could seek reconciliation with God from Whom he had become estranged by sin; זכות "merit"—gratitude, humility, contrition found an outlet on the altar, and by the exercise of these virtues, life was ennobled and "merit" acquired; ברכה "blessing"—by being true to the teachings that centred round the altar, man earns the Divine blessings and himself becomes a blessing to his fellowmen; חיים "life"—the altar points the way of the life everlasting, to the things that abide for evermore, truth, righteousness, holiness.

2. horns. There were projections at each of the four corners of the altar. The commonly accepted view is that they were pointed at the top. Josephus, describing the altar in the Second Temple, says, "it had corners like horns." The purpose of these horns can only be conjectured. The horn was the symbol of power, glory, salvation; and these horns no doubt typified to the worshipper the might of God and His ability to protect those who resorted to His altar.

CHAPTER XXVII

27 1. And thou shalt make the altar of acacia wood, five cubits long, and five cubits broad; the altar shall be foursquare: and the height thereof shall be three cubits.
2. And thou shalt make the horns of it upon the four corners thereof: the horns thereof shall be of one piece with it: and thou shalt overlay it with brass.
3. And thou shalt make its pots to take away its ashes, and its shovels, and its basons, and its fleshhooks, and its firepans: all the vessels thereof thou shalt make of brass.
4. And thou shalt make for it a grating of network of brass; and upon the net shalt thou make four brasen rings in the four corners thereof.
5. And thou shalt put it under the ledge round the altar beneath, that the net may reach halfway up the altar.

Consequently, a fugitive, unless he was a murderer, obtained safety by seizing hold of the altar-horns (see on XXI, 14).

of one piece with it. Cf. XXV, 19, 31.

overlay it with brass. Since fires would be constantly burning upon the altar.

3. ashes. Of the burnt animals and fuels.

shovels. To remove the ashes from the altar.

basons. Receptacles for the blood of the slain animals.

fleshhooks. Forks for handling the flesh of the sacrifices.

firepans. In which burning coal was carried from the altar of burnt-offering to the altar of incense.

5. ledge. Halfway round the altar there ran a ledge, probably made of copper, and this rested upon a brazen grating, 2½ feet in height. According to Tradition, this ledge was a cubit in width, and seems to have been used by the priests to stand on. Attached to the grating were rings to enable the altar to be carried.

v. 11. ועמדיו קרי

8. hollow with planks. The altar consisted of wooden planks covered with metal, so that the inside was hollow. Rashi explains that the command in xx, 21, "an altar of earth shalt make unto Me," signifies that a mound of earth, equal to the dimensions of the hollow of the altar, was heaped up, and the casing of the altar set over it.

9–19. The Court of the Tabernacle

9. court. i.e. an enclosure, but without a roof. It marked off the limits of the Sanctuary-precincts. Any Israelite, who was not ritually unclean, could enter the court. The material used for the enclosure was "fine twisted linen" (see on xxvi, 1), and the length was 100 cubits (150 feet).

10. The hangings were supported by twenty pillars, set five cubits apart; and since the height was five cubits (v. 18), the spaces created by the pillars were square.

sockets. See on xxvi, 19.

6. And thou shalt make staves for the altar, staves of acacia wood, and overlay them with brass.
7. And the staves thereof shall be put into the rings, and the staves shall be upon the two sides of the altar, in bearing it.
8. Hollow with planks shalt thou make it: as it hath been shewed thee in the mount, so shall they make it.* vii

9. And thou shalt make the court of the tabernacle: for the south side southward there shall be hangings for the court of fine twined linen an hundred cubits long for one side:
10. and the pillars thereof shall be twenty, and their sockets twenty, of brass; the hocks of the pillars and their fillets shall be of silver.
11. And likewise for the north side in length there shall be hangings an hundred cubits long, and the pillars thereof twenty, and their sockets twenty, of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets of silver.
12. And for the breadth of the court on the west side shall be hangings of fifty cubits: their pillars ten, and their sockets ten.
13. And the breadth of the court on the east side eastward shall be fifty cubits.
14. The hangings for the one side of the gate shall be fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets three.
15. And for the other side shall be hangings of fifteen cubits: their pillars three, and their sockets fillets. Narrow strips of binding material; binding-rods, connecting the pillars.

12. breadth. The court was twice as long as it was broad. There were twenty pillars along the length, and ten along the breadth.

continually. i.e. regularly, as a standing practice. Because no sunlight fell into the Sanctuary, there had always to be one light (cf. I Sam. III, 3). The lamp of the Sanctuary is represented in the Synagogue by the perpetual lamp burning before the Ark (the Ner Tamid). The Rabbis interpret the lamp as a symbol of Israel, whose mission it was to become "a light of the nations" (Isa. XLII, 7).

burnt wick, replace it with a fresh one and fill the lamp with oil. He was to light it in the evening.

CHAPTER XXVIII. THE VESTMENTS OF THE PRIESTS

After the instructions as to the building of the Sanctuary, Moses receives directions concerning the men who are to serve as priests. That sacred office was reserved for Aaron, his sons and their descendants. This chapter describes the garments which were to be worn by the priests when ministering in the Sanctuary. These garments distinguished the priest from the lay Israelite, and reminded him that even more than the layman he must make the ideal of holiness the constant guide of his life. These vestments also added to the solemnity and awe of the service of the Sanctuary.

1. that he may minister. The verb is in the singular, referring to the principal person in the group, Aaron.

cunning workman. See on XXVI, 1. The fabric of the ephod was the same as the curtains and veil of the Tabernacle, indicating the intimate connection between the High Priest and the Sanctuary. But in addition, there were gold threads woven into the material, probably as a symbol of royal power, because of the High Priest's position as the spiritual head of the community.

8. band. Around the waist, at the bottom of the ephod, was an artistically woven band, part of the ephod.

placed on the lower part of the shoulder-straps. Threads of blue passing through the rings tied them together. By these means the breastplate was kept firmly in its place on the breast of the High Priest.

29. for a memorial. "The stones on his heart are Aaron's silent prayer to God on behalf of his entire people" (B. Jacob.)

30. the Urim and the Thummim. lit. "the Lights and the Perfections"; which may mean, in accordance with Heb. idiom, "perfect lights." Were the Urim and the Thummim identical with the breastplate and the twelve brilliant stones, or were they distinct from it? At first view, the wording of this verse, "thou shalt put in the breastplate of judgement, the Urim and the Thummim," seems to favour the latter alternative; and many moderns think, "they were two sacred lots, used for the purpose of ascertaining the Divine Will on questions of national importance" (Driver). Rashi, likewise, supposes that it was some material upon which the Name of God was engraven, which the High Priest carried in the breastplate. Against this opinion it is urged that in chap. XXXIX, where the making of the breastplate is given in detail, nothing is said in regard the fashioning of the Urim and the Thummim. Thus, it rings of gold, and thou shalt put them upon the two ends of the breastplate, upon the edge thereof, which is toward the side of the ephod inward. 27. And thou shalt make two rings of gold, and shalt put them on the two shoulder-pieces of the ephod underneath, in the forepart thereof, close by the coupling thereof, above the cunningly woven band of the ephod. 28. And they shall bind the breastplate by the rings thereof unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it may be upon the cunningly woven band of the ephod, and that the breastplate be not loosed from the ephod. 29. And Aaron shall bear the names of the children of Israel in the breastplate of judgement upon his heart, when he goeth in unto the holy place, for a memorial before the LORD continually. 30. And thou shalt put in the breastplate of judgement the Urim and the Thummim; and they shall be upon Aaron's heart, when he goeth in before the LORD: and Aaron shall bear the judgement of the children of Israel upon his heart before the LORD continually. *iii seems that "the Urim and the Thummim" was the term whereby the twelve stones were denoted. The fact that the breastplate is called "the breastplate of judgement," indicates that the breastplate itself, and not something distinct from it, was the medium of the Divine communications. Our verse, therefore, merely summarises what has preceded, and declares that the Urim and the Thummim, viz., the twelve stones, must be added to the breastplate to make it complete as "the breastplate of judgement." Kalisch points out that in Lev. VIII, 8, where all the parts of the priestly robe are enumerated, the Urim and the Thummim

32 וְהָיָה פִי־רֹאשׁוֹ בְּתוֹכוֹ שָׂפָה יִהְיֶה לְפִיו סָבִיב מַעֲשֵׂה alone are mentioned, not the precious stones—a strong proof of the identity of both.

Scripture records that in times of doubt and national crisis during the earlier period of Israel's history, the people consulted the Urim and the Thummim for information and guidance (Num. XXVII, 21; I Sam. XXVIII, 6); but what the procedure was is nowhere explained. No recourse to the Urim and the Thummim is mentioned after the days of David. They remain one of the most obscure subjects connected with the High Priesthood.

31–35. The Robe

31. robe. A long garment worn by men of high rank. Whether the "robe" was always sleeveless is uncertain, but that of the High Priest was so. It is called "robe of the ephod," because the ephod was worn over it.

all of blue. The garment was woven of one kind of thread only; the colour blue was significant; cf. the thread of blue on the "fringes" (Num. XV, 38).

32. for the head. The robe had an opening only on top. It had, therefore, to be drawn over the head; and to prevent the material from tearing, the edge was strengthened by means of additional weaving.

33–35. The hem of the robe was adorned with balls of richly coloured material, of pomegranate shape. Between each pair of pomegranates was a golden bell. The Talmud states that there were 72 ornaments around the hem. The High Priest was on no account to officiate without donning his garments. The bells attached to the robe indicated

34. a golden bell and a pomegranate, a golden bell and a pomegranate, upon the skirts of the robe round about.
35. And it shall be upon Aaron to minister: and the sound thereof shall be heard when he goeth in unto the holy place before the LORD, and when he cometh out, that he die not.
36. And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and grave upon it, like the engravings of a signet, HOLY TO THE LORD.
37. And thou shalt to the congregation in the Court when he was performing his duties. Kalisch explains: "The whole people gave themselves up to prayer and repentance, whilst the High Priest stepped into the Holy of Holies to officiate in their name. It was therefore most appropriate that they should all know the moment when he entered the Holy of Holies."

36–43. THE PLATE, MITRE AND OTHER PRIESTLY GARMENTS

HOLY TO THE LORD. lit. "Holiness to the Lord." This inscription not only marked the dedication of the High Priest to the service of God, but also crystalised the aim and purpose of that service. It proclaimed the spiritual ideal of which the Sanctuary was the concrete emblem.

37. lace of blue. A thread of blue, attached to the extremities of the gold plate, kept it in position upon the forehead of the High Priest; but between the skin and the plate was the linen of the mitre (see v. 39).

38. Aaron shall bear. The meaning is probably this: What is presented to God must be without blemish, and the mode of presentation must be in agreement with the prescribed rites. Should there, however, be any imperfection in the sacrifice, or any error in the manner of offering, the High Priest assumes the responsibility. He is the custodian of the Sanctuary; and, by virtue of his sacred office, exemplified by the gold plate on his forehead, he can secure Divine acceptance of the offerings brought to the altar of God.

always on his forehead. Whenever he officiates as High Priest.

39. coat. A tunic. "This garment reached down to the feet, and was close to the body, and had sleeves that were tied fast to the arms" (Josephus).

fine linen. Or, "silk"; the colour was no doubt white, the colour of purity and holiness.

mitre. This is a doubtful translation. The root signifies, "to wind round"; and what is intended is possibly a kind of turban. Josephus writes: "its make is such that it seems to be a crown."

put it on a lace of blue, and it shall be upon the mitre; upon the forefront of the mitre it shall be. 38. And it shall be upon Aaron's forehead, and Aaron shall bear the iniquity of the holy things, which the children of Israel shall hallow in all their holy gifts; and it shall be always upon his forehead, that they may be accepted before the LORD. 39. And thou shalt weave the coat in chequer work of fine linen, and thou shalt make a mitre of fine linen, and thou shalt make a girdle, the work of the embroiderer. 40. And for Aaron's sons thou shalt make coats, and thou shalt make for them girdles, and headtires shalt thou make for them, for glory and for beauty. 41. And thou shalt put them upon Aaron thy brother, and upon his sons with him; and shalt anoint them, and consecrate them, and sanctify them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office. 42. And thou shalt make them linen breeches to cover the flesh of their nakedness; from the loins even unto the thighs they shall girdle. A sash. Josephus says it was four fingers in width. He adds: "It is embroidered with flowers of scarlet and purple and blue, and fine twisted linen."

40. Aaron's sons. The ordinary priests were to have a coat and girdle, similar to the High Priest. Instead of a mitre, they were to wear a cap on their heads.

41. put them upon Aaron. This ceremony of induction will be described in the next chapter.

consecrate them. lit. "fill their hand" (with the first sacrifices)—the technical term for installing a priest into his office.

42. breeches. These reached to the knees. There is no mention of covering for the feet.

holy place. Here this phrase denotes the Sanctuary in general, including the Court.

and die. God ruthlessly punishes any desecration of the Tabernacle by its ministers; cf. the fate of Nadab and Abihu, Lev. x, 1f.

CHAPTER XXIX. CONSECRATION OF THE PRIESTHOOD

The fulfilment of the regulations here laid down are given more fully in Lev. VIII, with which this chapter should be compared.

1. bullock. Of the sin-offering (Lev. VIII, 2). The priests must themselves have undergone atonement for their transgressions before they could perform the ceremonies that would help others to gain purification from sin.

two rams. One served as a burnt-offering (v. 18), and the other was the "ram of consecration" (v. 22).

Chapter XXIX

29 1. And this is the thing that thou shalt do unto them to hallow them, to minister unto me in the priest's office: take one young bullock and two rams without blemish, 2. and unleavened bread, and cakes unleavened mingled with oil and wafers unleavened anointed with oil: of fine wheaten flour shalt thou make them. 3. And thou shalt put them into one basket, and bring them in the basket, with the bullock and the two rams. 4. And Aaron and his sons thou shalt bring unto the door of the tent of meeting, and shalt wash them with water. 5. And thou shalt

2. unleavened bread. This, together with the cakes and wafers, constituted a "meal offering" (see on Lev. II).

3. bring them. To the court of the Sanctuary.

4. shalt wash them. See that they undergo ablution of entire body. The moral symbolism of the act of washing, as the first stage in the ceremony of induction, is obvious. "Clean hands and pure heart," according to the Psalmist (XXIV, 4), are an essential qualification in those who would draw near to God.

5. put upon Aaron the coat. The clothing of Aaron, and his sons, invested them with the visible emblems of their holiness and their functions, and marked them as distinct from the rest of the nation. "When the priests are clothed in their garments," says the Talmud, "their priesthood is upon them; when they are not clothed in their garments, their priesthood is not upon them." This Rabbinic dictum teaches the important truth that the priests did not differ from the rest of Israel. Only when they functioned in the Sanctuary were they, for the time being, distinct from the remainder of the community.

6. crown. Or, "diadem"; the gold plate (xxviii, 36).

7. anointing oil. Its composition is described in xxx, 22f. The soothing effect of oil on the skin scorched by the burning sun in the Orient made it to be regarded as a symbol of comfort and happiness. Hence, its place in the ceremony of the anointing of kings and priests. It became synonymous with the imparting of the Divine blessing.

pour it upon his head. Only in case of the High Priest. For an ordinary priest the oil was not poured, but smeared with the finger upon the head (see on Lev. viii, 12).

take the garments, and put upon Aaron the coat, and the robe of the ephod, and the ephod, and the breastplate, and gird him with the cunningly woven band of the ephod: 6. and thou shalt set the mitre upon his head, and put the holy crown upon the mitre. 7. Then shalt thou take the anointing oil, and pour it upon his head, and anoint him. 8. And thou shalt bring his sons, and put coats upon them. 9. And thou shalt gird them with girdles, Aaron and his sons, and bind headtires on them: and they shall have the priesthood by a perpetual statute: and thou shalt consecrate Aaron and his sons. 10. And thou shalt bring the bullock before the tent of meeting: and Aaron and his sons shall lay their hands upon the head of the bullock. 11. And thou shalt kill the bullock before the LORD, at the door of the tent of meeting. 12. And thou shalt take of the blood of the bullock, and put it upon the horns of the altar with thy finger; and thou shalt pour out all the blood at the

9. a perpetual statute. The priesthood was for all time to be restricted to the house of Aaron.

10–14. The sin-offering of Aaron and his sons.

10. lay their hands. Each shall lay his hand to designate the animal as the representative of the person who brought the sacrifice; see on Lev. I, 4. Aaron and his sons no doubt make a confession of sins while their hands were upon the head of the animal.

11. thou shalt kill. The slaying of the sacrifice need not be of necessity be done by a priest (see on Lev. I, 5).

12. The ritual which is now described is that which normally accompanied the sacrifice of a sin-offering (see Lev. IV, 4).

13. caul. Better, lobe (AJ).
burn. Heb. hiktir, the technical term for burning a sacrifice or incense.

15. the one ram. After the sin-offering which brought purification from sin, there was the burnt-offering which symbolised communion with God. The ritual of the burnt-offering is detailed in Lev. I and VIII, and will be explained in the notes on those chapters.

18. a sweet savour. i.e. a savour agreeable to God. "The burning of the offering is called 'a sweet savour unto the Lord'; and so it undoubtedly is, since it serves to remove sinful thoughts from our hearts. The effect of the offering upon the man who sacrificed it, is pleasant unto the Lord" (Maimonides).

19. the other ram. For the consecration sacrifice. All that has preceded is only preparatory to the rites of induction.

base of the altar. 13. And thou shalt take all the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul upon the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and burn them upon the altar. 14. But the flesh of the bullock, and its skin, and its dung shalt thou burn with fire without the camp: it is a sin offering. 15. Thou shalt also take the one ram; and Aaron and his sons shall lay their hands upon the head of the ram. 16. And thou shalt slay the ram, and thou shalt take its blood, and sprinkle it round about upon the altar. 17. And thou shalt cut the ram into its pieces, and wash its inwards, and its legs, and put them with its pieces, and with its head. 18. And thou shalt burn the whole ram upon the altar: it is a burnt offering unto the LORD: it is a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.* v 19. And thou shalt take the other ram; and Aaron and his sons shall lay their hands upon the head of the ram. 20. Then shalt thou kill the ram, and take of its blood, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot, and sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

20. ear . . . thumb . . . toe. The ear was touched with the blood, that it may be consecrated to hear the word of God; the hand, to perform the duties connected with the priesthood; and the foot, to walk in the path of righteousness. In a "kingdom of priests," the consecration of ear, hand and foot, should be extended to every member of that kingdom.

21. sprinkle. The double sprinkling of blood and oil typified the two main functions of the priesthood; to diffuse the light and joy of godliness, and impress upon the people the truth that atonement can be found for human wrongdoing.

22–30. Symbolised investiture of the priests with the authority to offer sacrifice. Typical offerings are to be placed upon their hands and waved before the altar, and finally burnt.

24. wave them. Turn the offering to all the four parts of heaven and earth, as a symbol that it was offered to the God of heaven and earth.

26. the breast. Was allowed to be retained by the officiating priests for food (Lev. VII, 34); hence, it is allocated to Moses who on this occasion filled the priests's office.

27. sanctify. Consecrate; i.e. set apart as the due of Aaron and his sons; see Lev. VII, 34f.

21. And thou shalt take of the blood that is upon the altar, and of the anointing oil, and sprinkle it upon Aaron, and upon his graments, and upon his sons, and upon the garments of his sons with him: and he shall be hallowed, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.
22. Also thou shalt take of the ram the fat, and the fat tail, and the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul of the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and the right thigh; for it is a ram of consecration:
23. and one loaf of bread, and one cake of oiled bread, and one wafer, out of the basket of unleavened bread that is before the LORD:
24. and thou shalt put the whole upon the hands of Aaron, and upon the hands of his sons; and shalt wave them for a wave offering before the LORD.
25. And thou shalt take them from their hands, and burn them on the altar upon the burnt offering, for a sweet savour before the LORD: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.
26. And thou shalt take the breast of Aaron's ram of consecration, and wave it for a wave offering before the LORD: and it shall be thy portion.
27. And thou shalt sanctify the breast of the wave offering, and the thigh of the heave offering, which is waved, and which is heaved up, of the ram of consecration, even of that which is for Aaron, and of that which is heave offering. Or, "contribution," by the worshipper to the priest.

purge the altar. On the Day of Atonement, the High Priest purified the Sanctuary and its contents of any defilement which may have been contracted during the year (Lev. XVI, 20). Consequently, before the altar was used for the public offerings, a ceremony of purification was performed.

37. whatsoever toucheth. Or, "whosoever toucheth": anyone approaching the altar must be pure (Ibn Ezra, Rashbam). The Rabbis take it to imply that an unblemished animal that became unfit for sacrifice in the precincts of the Sanctuary, if offered on the altar, thereby became holy and acceptable. Most modern commentators explain the words to mean, Whatsoever touched the altar, became thereby "holy"; i.e. the property of the Sanctuary, and had to be sacrificed.

38–42. The Daily Sacrifices

The chapter ends with a summary of the daily sacrifices that were to be offered for the community as a whole, and the chief duty of the priests just consecrated. The law is given in full in Num. XXVIII, 3–8.

And the other lamb thou shalt offer at even-and shalt do thereto according to the meal offer, ing of the morning, and according to the drink offering thereof, for a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD. 42. It shall be a continual burnt offering throughout your generations at the door of the tent of meeting before the LORD: where I will meet with you, to speak there unto thee. 43. Incense had a symbolic significance, as is evident from Ps. cxli, 2, "Let my prayer be set forth as incense before Thee." It became a metaphor for fervent and contrite Prayer. The Rabbis explained that the four letters of the Heb. word for incence קְטֹרֶת stood for קדושה, holiness; טהרה purity; רחמים, pity; and תקוה, hope—a wonderful summary of the prerequisites of Prayer and of its spiritual results in the lives of men.

IX. KI THISSA

(Chapters XXX, 11—XXXIV)

Chapter XXX

11–16. The Law of the Shekel

Whenever a census of the warriors was taken, every adult Israelite was to pay a half-shekel.

11. numbered. i.e. mustered, reviewed, as an army before going to the war.

12. a ransom. Heb. כפר. This technical expression for " ransom " occurs three times in the Torah, and each time it refers to the money paid by one who is guilty of taking human life in circumstances that do not constitute murder. Thus, the owner of the ox that had killed a man after the owner had received warning that the animal was dangerous, was charged with the death of a man; but as his crime was not intentional he was permitted to pay a ransom (כפר). Such a ransom was forbidden in the case of deliberate murder. This is the conception that underlies the law of the half-shekel in this chapter. The soldier who is ready to march into battle is in the eyes of Heaven a potential taker of life, though not a deliberate murderer. Hence, he requires " a ransom for his life " (B. Jacob).

IX. KI THISSA

30 11. And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
12. When thou takest the sum of the children of Israel, according to those that are numbered of them, then shall they give every man a ransom for his soul unto the LORD, when thou number-est them; that there be no plague among them, when thou numberest them. 13. This they shall give, every one that passeth over unto them
that are numbered, half a shekel after the shekel
of the sanctuary: (the shekel is twenty gerahs:)
half a shekel for an offering to the LORD. 14.
Every one that passeth over unto them that are numbered, from twenty years old and upward, shall give the offering of the LORD. 15. The rich

when thou numberest them. The soldier is to be impressed with the fact that, high as the aims for which he goes to battle may be, war remains a necessary evil. The ransom is, therefore, to be paid at the time of the mustering, long before the actual fighting begins.

plague. Heb. negeph. This word comes from the same root as the Heb. word for "slaughter in battle"; and a noted Karaite commentator translates the phrase, "that they suffer not defeat in battle."

when thou numberest them. According to the above explanation, this phrase would begin v. 13.

13. every one that passeth over. Before the officers mustering the forces for battle.

shekel of the sanctuary. The full weight shekel used in connection with sacred things.

offering to the LORD. Heb. terumah, "contribution"; the same phrase is used in Num. XXXI, 52.

14. twenty years. The Israelite's military age.

טו הֶעָשִׁיר לֹא־יַרְבֶּה וְהַדַּל לֹא יַמְעִיט מִמַּחֲצִית הַשָּׁקֶל

15. the rich shall not give more, and the poor shall not give less. All souls are of equal value in the eyes of God. Hence, all are to give the same ransom.

to make atonement for your souls. Heb. לכפר על נפשתיכם This phrase is an amplification of כפר, and is repeated in the next verse. Even a rationalist commentator like Ehrlich, rightly sees in the use of this last phrase one of the sublimest teachings of Scripture, unparalleled in any other sacred Book, ancient or modern. The same phrase is used in connection with the Midianite battle in Num. xxxi, 52. After signally defeating the Midianites, the victorious warriors come to the Tabernacle, bringing jewels and other valuable booty as an offering in order to make atonement for their souls before the Lord. "Other peoples sing songs of triumph after a victory over their enemies; why then did these warriors offer sacrifices of atonement for their souls at such an hour?" asks Ehrlich; "it is another indication of the horror of shedding human blood that the Torah inculcates. It is the same feeling that prompted the Jewish Sages to tell that the angels when about to break forth in song over the Egyptian hosts drowning in the Red Sea, were silenced by God in the words, 'My creatures are perishing, and ye are ready to sing!'"

16. for the service. In the Wilderness, the silver of the shekels was used for the bases of the pillars of the Sanctuary, and also for the hooks and binding-rings to keep the boards together (xxxviii, 27). It thus stood for the unity of both Sanctuary and People.

a memorial. i.e. that the Lord remember the children of Israel in grace and forgiveness, and grant them atonement for the blood shed in battle; cf. Num. xxxi, 54.

In later ages, the half-shekel became an annual tax devoted to maintaining the public services of the Temple; the daily worship was thus carried on by the entire People shall not give more, and the poor shall not give less, than the half shekel, when they give the offering to the LORD, to make atonement for your souls. 16. And thou shalt take the atonement money from the children of Israel, and shalt appoint it for the service of the tent of meeting; that it may be a memorial for the children of Israel before the LORD, to make atonement for your souls.

and not by the gifts of a few rich donors. The fact that the rich were not to give more, nor the poor less, than a half shekel taught that, "weighed in the balance of the Sanctuary" (which is the lit. meaning of בשקל הקדש), differences of rank and wealth do not exist. The fact, furthermore, that only a half-shekel was to be paid, taught that an individual's contribution to the community was but a fragment. For any complete work to be achieved on behalf of the Sanctuary, the efforts of all, high and low, rich and poor alike, are required.

The Jews outside Palestine were, throughout the ancient world, as zealous in their contribution of this Temple tax as the inhabitants of Judea. Anti-Semites, in consequence, even raised the cry that the Jews "were sending too much money out of the country." One of the Roman Provincial Governors who seized these offerings, was defended by Cicero in an anti-Jewish speech. After the destruction of the Temple, the Jews of the Empire were compelled to pay this contribution to the Temple of Jupiter at Rome! When this iniquitous tax was eventually abolished, the contribution from the Jews in the Diaspora was used for the support of the Rabbinical Academies in Palestine.

At the present day, the memory of the half-shekel is still kept alive by the reading of Exodus xxx, 11–17, on the Sabbath before the month of Adar, with a special Haftorah (see p. 578); as well as by donating on Purim half the current silver coin of the country for any worthy charitable cause. With the rise of the Jewish Nationalist Movement, the payment of the shekel has been revived as a token of sympathy with the aims of that movement.

This rule has been observed by the pious in all ages, who wash their hands before beginning any of the statutory services, which the Rabbis declare to be the present-day equivalents of the sacrifices. Many synagogues arrange lavers at the entrance for such a ceremonial washing of the hands by the worshippers.

22–23. The Anointing Oil

Olive oil was to be mixed with the essences of four aromatic herbs for use in the symbolic act of anointing; i.e. consecrating the Tent of Meeting and those that minister therein.

17. And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
18. Thou shalt also make a laver of brass, and the base thereof of brass, to wash withal: and thou shalt put it between the tent of meeting and the altar, and thou shalt put water therein.
19. And Aaron and his sons shall wash their hands and their feet thereat: 20. when they go into the tent of meeting, they shall wash with water, that they die not; or when they come near to the altar to minister, to burn an offering made by fire unto the LORD: 21. so they shall wash their hands and their feet, that they die not: and it shall be a statute for ever to them, even to him and to his seed throughout their generations.

22. Moreover the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 23. Take thou also unto thee the chief spices, of flowing myrrh five hundred shekels, and of sweet cinnamon half so much, even two hundred and fifty, and of sweet calamus two hundred and fifty, 24. and of cassia five hundred, after the shekel of the sanctuary, and of olive oil an hin:

Incense forms part of all forms of ancient ceremonial worship. On its symbolic significance, see note on XXX, 7. The Jewish mystics declare, "If men knew the sublime importance of the Holy Incense, they would set a crown of gold on each of the ingredients." Incense possesses anti-galbanum. Heb. חלבנה, the gum of a shrub, growing in Asia Minor and Persia. In contrast with the foregoing ingredients it did not have an agreeable odour. Its inclusion was intentional, say the Rabbis. As the galbanum is an essential ingredient of the sacred incense, even so is the prayer of the Congregation of Israel most acceptable to God when it includes the prayers of sinners and transgressors.

13–17. The Sabbath

13. my sabbaths. The work of constructing the Tabernacle that was now to commence was of the highest importance, and was work in the service of God; but it was not of greater importance than the Divinely-ordained Sabbath, and was not to be permitted to supersede it. Hence the repetition of the law of the Sabbath; cf. xxxv, 2.

a sign. The Sabbath was more than a day of rest. Its observance by the Israelite was a constantly recurring acknowledgment of God as the Creator of the Universe. It would be an open denial of God for an Israelite to desecrate the Sabbath, even in the construction of the Tabernacle; as well as a contradiction of the essential purpose of the Sanctuary, the sanctification of Israel's life in the service of God.

that ye may know. lit. "to know," and the subject has to be supplied. Rashi and Maimonides explain it to mean "that all nations shall know." Similarly Driver comments: "that all the world may recognise, by means of the Sabbath, that

12. And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 13. Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily ye shall keep my sabbaths: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the LORD which sanctify you. 14. Ye shall keep

The Golden Calf and the Idolatry of the People

1. delayed. The Rabbis explain that the people expected Moses to return on the fortieth day, inclusive of the day of his ascent; but he remained forty clear days on Mount Sinai. When he did not appear on the day they expected him, the people concluded that he was dead, and a feeling of utter helplessness possessed them. They demanded a visible god. That day was, according to Tradition, the 17th of Tammuz, a date which in the later history was connected with the overthrow of the Temple.

unto Aaron. When Moses departed from the camp, he left Aaron and Hur in charge (xxiv, 14). Why, then, is Aaron alone mentioned here? Tradition relates that Hur resisted the people's demand, and was put to death by them. Aaron, seeing the determination of the people, decided to work for gaining time till the arrival of Moses.

make us a god. R V Text translates, "make us gods."

which shall go before us. The "god" was to replace Moses as their leader.

CHAPTER XXXII

32 1. And when the people saw that Moses delayed to come down from the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aaron, and said unto him, Up, make us a god which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we know not what is become of him. 2. And Aaron said unto them, Break off the golden rings, which are in the ears of your wives, of your sons, and
of your daughters, and bring them unto me.
3. And all the people brake off the golden rings which were in their ears, and brought them unto Aaron. 4. And he received it at their hand, and fashioned it with a graving tool, and made it a molten calf: and they said, This is thy god, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the

2. break off. Aaron's intention may have been to cool their ardour, thinking they would hesitate to sacrifice their ornaments.

3. brake off. To Aaron's astonishment, the people at once complied with his request. "What a fickle people!" say the Rabbis; "one day they give their silver and gold for the Sanctuary of God; and on the morrow, they do the same for a Golden Calf."

4. fashioned it. The golden articles were first melted, so that a mass of metal was formed, and this was shaped by Aaron into the semblance of a calf. The latter was the object of worship among Israel's Semitic kinsmen (see on I, 7).

this is thy god. The RV Text translates, "These be thy gods."

ה הֶעֱלוּךָ מֵאֶרֶץ מִצְרָיִם׃ וַיַּרְא אַהֲרֹן וַיִּבֶן מִזְבֵּחַ לְפָנָיו וַיִּקְרָא

וַיַּגִּשׁוּ שְׁלָמִים וַיֵּשֶׁב הָעָם לֶאֱכֹל וְשָׁתוֹ וַיָּקֻמוּ לְצַחֵק׃ פ
7 וַיְדַבֵּר יְהוָה אֶל־מֹשֶׁה לֶךְ־רֵד כִּי שִׁחֵת עַמְּךָ אֲשֶׁר הֶעֱלֵיתָ

אֶל־מֹשֶׁה רָאִיתִי אֶת־הָעָם הַזֶּה וְהִנֵּה עַם־קְשֵׁה־עֹרֶף הוּא׃
י וְעַתָּה הַנִּיחָה לִּי וְיִחַר־אַפִּי בָהֶם וַאֲכַלֵּם וְאֶעֱשֶׂה אוֹתְךָ

5. to-morrow. The postponement, the Rabbis say, was due to Aaron's confident hope that Moses would appear by then, and the feast in honour of the calf would be changed into "a feast to the LORD." Yehudah Hallevi declares, "the people did not intend to give up their allegiance to God." They wanted a visible symbolic representation of the God who brought them out of Egypt. Their sin was not a breach of the First, but of the Second Commandment.

The conduct of Aaron throughout this incident is difficult to understand. There is, however, an explanation, though no excuse, for his behaviour. Tradition makes love of peace the outstanding trait of his nature. Always a lover of peace and a pursuer of peace, and thinking that resistance was futile, he acquiesced in the people's demand. There would doubtless have been many to side with him, but he feared division that might result in bloodshed.

6. on the morrow. After the altar had been erected.

to eat and to drink. Possibly a sacramental meal is intended (see on xxiv, 11).

to play. Or, "to make merry." By dancing and singing (cf. v. 18f), which usually figured in the religious celebrations of heathen peoples.

7. thy people. God disowns the sinful Israelites. He refuses to acknowledge them as His people. The Rabbis, on the other hand, understand "thy people which thou broughtest up out of the land of Egypt" as an allusion to land of Egypt. 5. And when Aaron saw this,

he built an altar before it; and Aaron made proclamation, and said, To-morrow shall be a feast to the LORD. 6. And they rose up early on the morrow, and offered burnt offerings, and brought peace offerings; and the people sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play.

7. And the LORD spake unto Moses, Go, get thee down; for thy people, which thou broughtest up out of the land of Egypt, have corrupted themselves: 8. they have turned aside quickly out of the way which I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshipped it, and have sacrificed unto it, and said,
These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt. 9. And the LORD said unto Moses, I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people: 10. now therefore let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them:
and I will make of thee a great nation. 11.

the mixed multitude. It was not God who had brought these out of Egypt, but Moses had allowed them to accompany the Israelites.

8. quickly. It was less than six weeks since they had heard the Voice of God declaring, "Thou shalt not make unto thee a graven image."

9. stiffnecked. Obstinate; here, persisting in its idolatry. The figure is taken from a stubborn ox that refuses to submit to the yoke.

10. let me alone. The Rabbis explain this to mean that Moses understood from these Divine words that his intercession alone could save the Israelites from the extermination which threatened them.

15–20. Moses returns to the Camp

16. the work of God. The horror which Moses experienced when he saw the Israelites dancing round their idol was so great that he shattered the Tablets, although they were made by God Himself.

11. And Moses besought the LORD his God, and said, LORD, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt with great power and with a mighty hand? 12. Wherefore should the Egyptians speak, saying, For evil did he bring them forth, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? Turn from thy fierce wrath, and repent of this evil against thy people. 13. Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, to whom thou swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, and all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for ever. 14. And the LORD repented of the evil which he said he would do unto his people.

15. And Moses turned, and went down from the mount, with the two tables of the testimony in his hand; tables that were written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written. 16. And the tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables. 17. And when Joshua heard the noise of the people as they shouted, he said unto Moses, There is a noise of war in

v. 19. מידיו ק

18. sing. i.e. answer in song; the answering voices of singers.

19. Moses' anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables . . . . and brake them. This represents one of the highest moments in the life of the Lawgiver. The Heb. term translated by "anger" covers both anger and indignation. Now, it was not anger that caused him to shatter the Tables. "He who breaks anything in anger is as if he were an idolater," say the Rabbis. Anger is selfish and blind, and a purely emotional reaction against an injury received. Thus, when a child hurts its foot against a stone, it is often so unreasonably angry as to strike the stone. Altogether different is the moral feeling of indignation that sweeps over us whenever we see a great wrong committed; not because it injures us, as is always the case in anger, but because the wrong is an outrage against justice and right. Such a feeling of righteous indignation filled Moses when he beheld a People that had been at Sinai, dancing before a golden calf! A mob guilty of such base and senseless ingratitude to God was, he felt, unworthy of the Divine Tables of the Law.

the camp. 18. And he said, It is not the voice of them that shout for mastery, neither is it the voice of them that cry for being overcome: but the noise of them that sing do I hear.
19. And it came to pass, as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that he saw the calf and the dancing: and Moses' anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and brake them beneath the mount. 20. And he took the calf which they had made, and burnt it with fire, and ground it to powder, and strewed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it. 21. And Moses said unto Aaron, What did this people unto thee, that thou hast brought a great sin upon them?
22. And Aaron said, Let not the anger of my lord wax hot: thou knowest the people, that they are set on evil. 23. For they said unto me, Make us a god, which shall go before us: for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we know not what is become made the children of Israel drink. The Talmud compares this act with the ordeal imposed upon a suspected wife (Num. v); the drink harmfully affecting anyone who had been guilty, and leaving the innocent immune.

21. brought a great sin upon them. The participation of Aaron in such an offence fills Moses with amazement; and he demands an explanation.

22. set on evil. Aaron puts the whole blame on others.

of him. 24. And I said unto them, Whosoever hath any gold, let them break it off; so they gave it me: and I cast it into the fire, and there came out this calf. 25. And when Moses saw that the people were broken loose; for Aaron had let them loose for a derision among their enemies: 26. then Moses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, Whoso is on the LORD's side, let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him.
27. And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Put ye every man his sword upon his thigh, and go to and fro from gate to gate throughout the camp, and slay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour. 28. And the sons of Levi did according to the word of Moses:
and there fell of the people that day about three thousand men. 29. And Moses said, Consecrate yourselves to-day to the LORD, yea,
every man upon his son, and upon his brother;
that he may bestow upon you a blessing this day. 30. And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses said unto the people, Ye have sinned
a great sin: and now I will go up unto the LORD; peradventure I shall make atonement

32. if thou wilt forgive. Words as, " I am content to live," must be supplied. This suppressing of part of a conditional sentence, is not unusual in Hebrew.

33. him will I blot out of my book. God will not permit Moses to suffer vicariously for others. Judaism recognises neither vicarious punishment nor vicarious atonement. " The soul that sinneth, it shall die"—unless by repentance and good deeds it gains the Divine forgiveness.

I have spoken unto thee: behold, mine angel

they made the calf, which Aaron made.

2. before thee. i.e. before Israel, to whom this message was to be delivered.

3. lest I consume thee. The Divine Presence could only abide in the midst of a holy people. Another act of treason on their part might well bring about their utter destruction.

4. these evil tidings. That God's spirit would not dwell with them (Rashi).

5. that I may know. A consoling message to the people. They had shown their remorse by stripping themselves of their ornaments. If they persevered in this chastened frame of mind, God would show His mercy and turn to them with favour.

the tent. Despite the use of the definite article, the allusion cannot be to the "Tent of Meeting" mentioned in xxvii, 21, as that was not yet in existence. It may point back to Moses' tent, which is referred to in xviii, 7, where Moses used to receive the people who came to him with their disputes.

I give it: 2. and I will send an angel before thee:
and I will drive out the Canaanite, the Amorite,
and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite: 3. unto a land flowing with milk and honey: for I will not go up in the midst of thee; for thou art a stiffnecked people:
lest I consume thee in the way. 4. And when the people heard these evil tidings, they mourned:
and no man did put on him his ornaments.
5. And the LORD said unto Moses, Say unto
the children of Israel, Ye are a stiffnecked people: if I go up into the midst of thee for one moment, I shall consume thee: therefore now put off thy ornaments from thee, that I may know what to do unto thee. 6. And the children of Israel stripped themselves of their ornaments from mount Horeb onward.

7. Now Moses used to take the tent and to pitch it without the camp, afar off from the camp; and he called it, The tent of meeting.
And it came to pass, that every one which sought the LORD went out unto the tent of meeting, which was without the camp. 8. And it came to pass, when Moses went out unto without the camp. Because the camp had been defiled by the Golden Calf, and the sins of the people had removed the Divine Presence from their midst; but Moses, who was innocent of guilt, was not for that reason debarred from communion with God.

The Heb. term, naar may also denote an unmarried man (Ehrlich); he was, therefore, able permanently to remain in charge of the tent. No children of Joshua are mentioned in the genealogical table in I Chron. VII, 27.

with Moses. 10. And all the people saw the pillar of cloud stand at the door of the Tent:
and all the people rose up and worshipped,
every man at his tent door. 11. And the LORD

camp: but his minister Joshua, the son of Nun,
a young man, departed not out of the Tent.*iii

Tables of the Law lay shattered at the foot of Sinai, Moses again ascended the mountain, and prostrated himself in prayer before God. After forty days, he returns unto Israel, when, in addition to new Tables of the Law, he brings a Heavenly commentary on that Law, the thirteen attributes of the Divine Nature, שלוש עשרה מדות each a synonym of the everlasting mercy of God.

12. whom thou wilt send. Moses, deprived of the assurance of God's Presence, feels that the task imposed upon him, "Bring up this people," is far too difficult to undertake. He, therefore, pleads for the Divine assistance.

"The glory of the Lord is in this instance the same as He Himself; and the expression Thy glory has been substituted for the word Thyself, as a tribute of homage" (Maimonides).

19. my goodness. God's moral attributes. The revelation of these Attributes of love and mercy is the source of the sublime principle of the Imitation of God, הדבקת במדותיו של הקב״ה. This Jewish ideal, "one of the most advanced triumphs of Religion," goes back to the Divine demand in

Lev. XIX, 2. "Ye shall be holy, the LORD your God am holy." Israel is not only to serve God, but to imitate Him. Mortal man, however, cannot imitate God's infinity, omnipotence or eternity. That side of His nature, which is beyond human comprehension, is also beyond human imitation. But we can know His "goodness," and we can follow His ways of mercy and forgiveness. Thus, pity is a Divine attribute; and man is never nearer to the Divine than in his compassionate moments. God's merciful qualities are, therefore, the most real links between God and Man. "Even as I am merciful, be thou merciful; even as I am gracious, be thou gracious," is the Rabbinic translation of the great commandment of the Imitation of God.

proclaim the name of the LORD. The term "Name" has here the same significance as in III, 13f, and denotes the Divine essence, nature, and character.

I will be gracious. God will show mercy to those who deserve it. Who these are, is not expressly stated; but fallen and penitent Israel is intended (Driver). The Heb. idiom employed here, is the same as in "send by the hand of him whom thou wilt send" (IV, 13).

20. see my face. Moses desires to know what no human being can fathom, what no human language can express. His request, however, is not due to curiosity, but in order to confirm the promise in v. 14.

and live. The expression that a mortal cannot see God and live is frequently found in Scripture.

21. upon the rock. Of Sinai.

goodness pass before thee, and will proclaim the name of the LORD before thee; and I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy.
20. And he said, Thou canst not see my face: for man shall not see me and live. 21. And the LORD said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon the rock: 22. and it shall come to pass, while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee in a cleft of the rock, and will cover thee with my hand until I have passed by: 23. and I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my back: but my face shall not be seen.*v

23. my face shall not be seen. When God passes by, presumably in the form of fire (see XXIV, 17), Moses will be sheltered in "a cleft of the rock." He will thus not see "the face," the full Manifestation of the Divine radiance; but only its afterglow, "the back," so to speak. It is, of course, quite impossible to penetrate the full mystery of these words, conveying sublime truths concerning the Divine nature in the ordinary language of man. Many interpreters deduce from this passage the teaching that no living being can see God's face, i.e. penetrate His eternal essence. It is only from the rearward that we can know Him. Even as a ship sails through the waters of ocean and leaves its wake behind, so God may be known by His Divine "footprints" in human history, by His traces in the human soul.

CHAPTER XXIV

1. hew thee two tables. The vision of God which was now to be granted to Moses marks the re-establishment of the Covenant between God and Israel that had been annulled by the apostasy in connection with the Golden Calf. Therefore, the broken Tables of the Law are replaced by new Tables.

3. no man. Neither Aaron (XIX, 17), nor the elders (XXIV, 9) were to be with him on the mountain. Moses alone was this time to witness the Revelation. The Rabbis remark that the first Tables were given amid great pomp and upheaval, physical and psychic; and they were destroyed. The Second Revelation was given in silence, to one human soul, alone in mystic communion with His Maker; and these Tables endured, for the salvation of Israel and mankind.

4. went up. Tradition relates that Moses ascended on the first day of Ellul, and remaining on the Mount forty days,

Chapter XXXIV

will write upon the tables the words that were on the first tables, which thou brakest. 2. And be ready by the morning, and come up in the morning unto mount Sinai, and present thyself there to me on the top of the mount. 3. And no man shall come up with thee, neither let any man be seen throughout all the mount;
neither let the flocks nor herds feed before that mount. 4. And he hewed two tables of stone like unto the first; and Moses rose up early in the morning, and went up unto mount Sinai, as the Lord had commanded him, and took in his hand two tables of stone. 5. And the Lord descended on the tenth of Tishri, the Day of Atonement, on which day he brought the tidings of God's perfect pardon unto the sinful people.

5–7. The Revelation of God's Nature in the Thirteen Attributes

God's "ways" are now proclaimed unto Moses in the thirteen characteristic qualities of the Divine Nature, enumerated in v. 6 and 7. Judaism has been very chary of definitions of God. He is the En sof, the Infinite, the Undefinable. However, the Thirteen Attributes give us a definition of God in ethical terms. All schools of Jewish thought agree that these momentous and sublime attributes enshrine some of the most distinctive doctrines of Judaism. The Rabbis made v. 6 and 7, containing the Thirteen Attributes of Divine Mercy, the dominant refrain in all prayers of repentance.

v. 7. נן רבתי

5. stood. The subject is "the Lord" (Ibn Ezra, Nachmanides).

6. proclaimed. God reveals the "name of the Lord," i.e. His characteristic qualities, to Moses. The Rabbis held that there are thirteen distinct attributes in these two verses; though there are differences as to their precise enumeration. The enumeration in the following comments is in accordance with the views of Rabbenu Tam, Ibn Ezra, Mendelssohn and Reggio.

the Lord, the Lord. Heb. Adonay, Adonay (I and II). Adonay denotes God in His attribute of mercy; and the repetition is explained in the Talmud as meaning, "I am the merciful God before a man commits a sin, and I am the same merciful and forgiving God after a man has sinned. Whatever change has to be wrought, must be in the heart of the sinner; not in the nature of the Deity. He is the same after a man has sinned, as He was before a man has sinned."

God. Heb. el (III). The all-mighty Lord of the Universe, Ruler of Nature and mankind.

full of compassion. Heb. rachum (IV); full of affectionate sympathy for the sufferings and miseries of human frailty.

and gracious. Heb. ve-channun (V); assisting and helping; consoling the afflicted and raising up the oppressed. "In man these two qualities manifest themselves fitfully and temporarily; he is מרחם וחונן. It is otherwise in God: in Him, compassion and grace are permanent, inherent and necessary emanations of His nature. Hence, He alone can be spoken of as rachum ve-channun" (Mendelssohn).

slow to anger. Heb. erech appayim; (VI); not hastening to punish the sinner, but affording him opportunities to retrace his evil courses.

descended in the cloud, and stood with him
there, and proclaimed the name of the LORD.
6. And the LORD passed by before him, and proclaimed, The LORD, the LORD, a God full of compassion and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy and truth; 7. keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin: and that will by no means acquit the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, upon the third and upon the fourth generation. 8. And Moses made haste, and bowed plenteous in mercy. Heb. rav chesed (VII); granting His gifts and blessings beyond the deserts of man.

and truth. Heb. ve-emess (VIII); eternally true to Himself, pursuing His inscrutable plans for the salvation of mankind, and rewarding those who are obedient to His will. Note that "chesed," lovingkindness, precedes "emess," truth, both here and generally throughout Scripture; as if to say, "Speak the truth by all means; but be quite sure that you speak the truth in love." It makes all the difference in the world whether, in judging our fellowmen, and "speaking the truth" of our neighbour, we put lovingkindness in the first, or whether we put it in the second, place.

7. keeping mercy unto thousands. Heb. notzer chesed la-alafim (IX). Remembering the good deeds of the ancestors to the thousandth generation, and reserving reward and recompense to the remotest descendants.

forgiving iniquity. Heb. noseh avon (X); bearing with indulgence the failings of man, and by forgiveness restoring him to the original purity of his soul. The Heb. for "iniquity" is avon; sins committed from evil disposition.

transgression. Heb. pesha (XI); evil deeds springing from malice and rebellion against the Divine.

sin. Heb. chattaah (XII); shortcomings due to heedlessness and error.

9 אַ֫רְצָה וַיִּשְׁתָּחוּ׃ וַיֹּאמֶר אִם־נָא מָצָאתִי חֵן בְּעֵינֶיךָ אֲדֹנָי will by no means acquit the guilty. i.e. He will not allow the guilty to pass unpunished. Heb. venakkeh lo yenakkeh (XIII). The Rabbis explain: venakkeh "acquitting—the penitent; lo yenakkeh, but not acquitting—the impenitent." He is merciful and gracious and forgiving; but He will never obliterate the eternal and unbridgeable distinction between light and darkness, between good and evil. God cannot leave repeated wickedness and obstinate persistence in evil entirely unpunished. His goodness cannot destroy His justice. The sinner must suffer the consequences of his misdeeds. The unfailing and impartial consequences of sin help man to perceive that there is no "chance" in morals; The punishments of sin are thus not vindictive, but remedial.

visiting . . upon the children. See XX, 5. This law relates only to the consequences of sin. Pardon is not the remission of the penalty, but the forgiveness of the guilt and the removal of the sinfulness. The misdeeds of those who are God's enemies are visited only to the third and fourth generation, whereas His mercy to those who love Him is unto a thousand generations.

8–9. Moses' Prayer

8. made haste. Upon learning the prominent place that mercy held in the Divine Nature, Moses immediately supplicates God to exercise His quality of mercy in favour of Israel.

his head toward the earth, and worshipped. 9.
And he said, If now I have found grace in thy sight, O Lord, let the Lord, I pray thee, go in the midst of us; for it is a stiffnecked people;
and pardon our iniquity and our sin, and take us for thine inheritance.*vi 10. And he said, Behold, I make a covenant: before all thy people
I will do marvels, such as have not been wrought in all the earth, nor in any nation: and all the people among which thou art shall see the work of the LORD, for it is a terrible thing that I do with thee. 11. Observe thou that which I command thee this day: behold, I drive out before thee the Amorite, and the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite. 12. Take heed to thyself, lest thou

9. our iniquity. Moses identified himself with his people. He speaks of "our" iniquity. Similarly in the Liturgy of the Synagogue, especially in the Confession of the Day of Atonement, the prayers are composed in the plural ("we have sinned," etc.); for the Rabbis exhort, "The individual should associate himself with the Community in all his supplications."

for thine inheritance. i.e. by Thy presence in Israel's midst, acknowledge the people as Thine.

v. 14. ר רבתי

12. a snare. Fraternisation with the heathen would inevitably lead to idol-worship, and bring disaster upon the Israelites, as proved abundantly in the time of the Judges.

13. break down. All forms of heathenish worship are to be obliterated.

pillars. See on XXIII, 24. Wooden poles, around which immoral orgies were carried on.

Asherim. "Probably wooden symbols of a goddess Ashera" (RV Margin), the Venus of the Phoenicians, Ashtoreth, Astarte. Immoral rites were practised at these shrines.

14. name. i.e. character (cf. XXXIII, 19).

call thee. i.e. invite thee.

eat of their sacrifice. To partake of the flesh of a heathen sacrifice would be tantamount to apostasy, since religious ideas were associated with a sacrificial meal.

16. take of their daughters. The dangers of intermarriage from the spiritual point of view were recognised by the Patriarchs (Gen. XXIV and XXVIII). They are emphasised make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land whither thou goest, lest it be for a snare

in the midst of thee: 13. but ye shall break down their altars, and dash in pieces their pillars, and ye shall cut down their Asherim: 14. for thou shalt worship no other god: for the LORD, whose name is Jealous, is a jealous God: 15. lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land, and they go a whoring after their gods,
and do sacrifice unto their gods, and one call thee and thou eat of his sacrifice; 16. and thou take of their daughters unto thy sons, and their daughters go a whoring after their gods, and make thy sons go a whoring after their gods.
17. Thou shalt make thee no molten gods. 18.

by Moses (Deut. VII, 3f) and by Joshua (Josh. XXIII, 12). The danger, though of a different character, is just as real to-day. The training of every Jewish child should be such that he remain part of Israel, that he continue the work of Israel, and that he make the building of a home in Israel the ambition of his youth and manhood. Intermarriage would then be out of the question for any son or daughter of Israel. Unlike other peoples, Israel does not wage any wars; and rarely, therefore, does it require its children to lay down their lives in its defence; but Judaism expects that its sons and daughters should feel themselves bound, even though the duty involve the sacrifice of precious affections, to refrain from courses of conduct that undermine the stability of Israel. "Every Jew who contemplates marriage outside the pale must regard himself as paving the way to a disruption which would be the final, as it would be the culminating, disaster in the history of his people" (M. Joseph).

17. molten gods. The "pillars" and "asherim" having been condemned as objects of worship, the warning against molten gods of silver and gold is repeated (XX, 23).

19. v. קמץ בז״ק

18–26. The commands in these verses concern exclusively the relation between God and man. For these verses speak of the Covenant which had been broken, not by any neglect of duties towards fellowmen, but of Israel's duty towards God.

18. feast of unleavened bread. The reminder that Israel owes freedom and national existence to the redemptive power of God. Its due observance would prevent Israel's going astray after other gods.

19. firstlings. See XIII, 12 and XXII, 28f. Ibn Ezra rightly explains that this law is mentioned here because it is connected with the Exodus from Egypt. The sparing of the firstborn of the Israelites (XII, 13) was commemorated by the dedication of the firstborn, human and animal, to God; see XIII, 2f, 15.

20. a lamb. See XIII, 13.

none shall appear. Cf. XXIII, 15. These words are taken to refer to the Feast of Unleavened Bread, and also to the Feast of Weeks and of Ingathering (v. 22f).

The feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep.
Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, at the time appointed in the month Abib: for in the month Abib thou camest out from Egypt.
19. All that openeth the womb is mine: and all thy cattle that is male,
the firstlings of ox and sheep.
20. And the first-ling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb: and if thou wilt not redeem it, then thou shalt break its neck. All the firstborn of thy sons thou shalt redeem. And none shall appear before me empty.
21. Six days thou shalt work, but on the seventh day thou shalt rest: in plowing time and in harvest thou shalt rest.
22. And thou shalt observe the feast of weeks, even of the firstfruits of wheat harvest, and the feast of ingathering at the year's end.
23. Three times in the year shall all thy males appear before the Lord God,
the God of Israel.
24. For I will cast out nations before thee, and enlarge thy borders: neither the words of the covenant. Better, with the words of the covenant (Ibn Ezra) Moses wrote down all these commands, whilst God Himself inscribed the Decalogue upon the second Tables; see v. 1 and Deut. x, 1. The Heb. particle את here means " with " ; otherwise it would have been repeated before each of the two phrases.

Starting from this verse, the German poet Goethe conjectured in 1773 that the regulations in v. 14–26 could be grouped as ten laws, and these ten laws were the original Ten Commandments! In his later and riper years (Wahrheit und Dichtung, Book xii), he spoke of this alleged discovery of his as " a freakish notion," due to his insufficient knowledge. Since his day, however, Wellhausen and other Bible Critics, have revived the preposterous idea of the youthful poet as to a Second Decalogue, the "moral" Decalogue as they call it, as distinct from the alleged "ritual" Decalogue in this chapter. Leading Bible scholars, however, see the obvious intention of the narrative indicated in v. 1 ("I will write upon the tables of stone the words which were upon the first tables, which thou brakest"). They, furthermore, recognise that it is only by arbitrary and baseless guesswork that the precepts in v. 14–26 can be arranged so as to make ten.

The medieval artists, therefore, including Michael Angelo, were thus misled into representing Moses as with horns protruding from his forehead!

(CHAPTERS XXXV—XXXVIII, 20)

CHAPTER XXXV

We now enter upon the final section of the Book of Exodus dealing with the actual construction of the Sanctuary. Instead of giving a brief notice announcing the execution of the Divine command, Scripture describes in detail how every instruction was faithfully and lovingly carried out.

1. assembled. The Rabbis, assuming that Moses would lose no time in starting upon the work, declare that the assembly occurred on the 11th of Tishri, immediately after his descent from Sinai on the day which was to become the Day of Atonement (see on xxxiv, 4).

all the congregation. Not only the elders but the entire community; teaching that the Sanctuary was the concern of every individual in the camp.

2, 3. THE SABBATH

2. an holy day. lit. "holiness." The exhortation which God had given to Moses concerning the holiness of the Sabbath which must not be violated even for the sacred purpose of building the Tabernacle (xxxi, 13f), is repeated by Moses to the Congregation.

X. VAYYAKHEL

Chapter XXXV

35 1. And Moses assembled all the congregation of the children of Israel, and said unto them,
These are the words which the Lord hath commanded, that ye should do them. 2. Six days shall work be done, but on the seventh day
there shall be to you an holy day, a sabbath of solemn rest to the Lord: whosoever doeth any work therein shall be put to death. 3. Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations
upon the sabbath day.
4. And Moses spake unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, saying, This is the thing which the Lord commanded, saying, 5.
Take ye from among you an offering unto the Lord: whosoever is of a willing heart, let him
bring it, the Lord's offering; gold, and silver,

3. kindle no fire. This command has been understood by certain Jewish sects to prohibit the use of light or fire on the Sabbath; the Rabbis, however, apply it only to cooking and baking. In connection with the Manna, it had already been pointed out that there must be no preparation of food by fire on the Sabbath (xvi, 23).

your habitations. This excludes the Sanctuary. Lamps and the fire on the altar were there attended to on the Sabbath.

upon the sabbath day. On Festivals (barring the Day of Atonement, which is the "Sabbath of Sabbaths") kindling of fire is permitted.

4. commanded, saying. "Saying" is not here the equivalent of "namely," but of "to say;" i.e. that I should say to you.

5. from among you. Better, from you.

brass. Better, bronze.

20. And all the congregation of the children of Israel departed from the presence of Moses.*ii
21 And they came, every one whose heart stirred him up, and every one whom his spirit made willing, and brought the LORD's offering, for the work of the tent of meeting, and for all the service thereof, and for the holy garments. 22. And they came, both men and women, as many as were willing hearted, and brought brooches, and earrings, and signet-rings, and necklaces, all jewels of gold; even every man that offered an offering of gold unto the LORD. 23. And every man, with whom was found blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goats' hair, and rams' skins dyed red, and porpoise-skins, brought them. 24. Every one that did offer an offering of silver and brass brought the LORD's offering: and every man, with whom was found acacia wood for any work of the service, brought it. 25. And all the women that were wise hearted did spin with their hands, and brought that which they had spun, the blue, and the purple, the scarlet, and the fine linen. 26. And all the women whose heart stirred them up in wisdom spun the goats' hair. 27. And the rulers brought the onyx stones, and the stones to be set, for the ephod, and for the breastplate; 28. and the spice, and the oil; for the light, and for the anointing oil, and

30. see, the LORD hath called by name. The artist is "called"; i.e. specially endowed by native gift for his task; predestined, in a sense, for his artistic mission. The Rabbis explain the opening words, "See, the Lord hath called, etc." to mean that the nomination of Bezalel for his important task should be ratified by the community, as no leader may be set over a congregation without its approval.

Hur. The Rabbis identified him with the Hur of XVII, 10, XXIV, 14; and held that he was killed by the people for resisting their demand for the golden calf.

in wisdom . . . understanding . . . knowledge. i.e. displaying itself in artistic skill, whether that skill be the result of imitation, or the artist's own initiative and inspiration.

for the sweet incense. 29. The children of Israel brought a freewill offering unto the LORD; every man and woman, whose heart made them willing to bring for all the work, which the LORD had commanded to be made by the hand of Moses.*iii (ii)

30. And Moses said unto the children of Israel, See, the LORD hath called by name Bezalel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah; 31. and he hath filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship; 32. and to devise cunning works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, 33. and in cutting of stones for setting, and in carving of wood, to work in all manner of cunning workmanship. 34. And he hath put in his heart that he may teach, both he, and Oholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the

An eminent painter of the nineteenth century has well expressed it: "My intention has not been so much to paint pictures that will charm the eye, as to suggest great thoughts that will appeal to the imagination and the heart, and kindle all that is best and noblest in humanity. I even think, that in the future, art may yet speak, as great poetry itself, with the solemn and majestic ring in which the Hebrew prophets spoke to the Jews of old, demanding noble aspirations, condemning in the most trenchant manner private vices, and warning us in deep tones against lapses from morals and duties" (F. W. Watts).

33. cunning workmanship. Or, "skilled workmanship." We are accustomed to limit Divine inspiration to thoughts expressed in words. This is not the Scriptural view. The worker in metals, the cutter of precious stones, and the carver of wood can likewise produce work that is inspired.

34. that he may teach. lit. "to teach," i.e. direct and tribe of Dan. Bezalel belonged to Judah, the leading tribe: Oholiab, to one of the smaller tribes. The selection, declares the Midrash, was significant. In the service of God, the great and the small should be united.

35. embroiderer. Or, "weaver in colours."

Proper understanding and appreciation of these verses should modify current views on Judaism and its relation to Art. The opinion is often expressed that there is no art in Judaism; that the Jew lacks the aesthetic sense; and that this is largely due to the influence of the Second Commandment which prohibited plastic art in Israel. Defenders of the Jew and Judaism usually reply that Judaism was determined to lift the God-idea above the sensual, and to represent the Divine as spirit only; that Art was not Israel's predestined province; that whereas the legacy of Greece was Beauty, the mission of Israel was Righteousness. Neither friend nor foe do full justice to the facts of the case. There is not such a clear-cut difference between the races as is generally assumed. Greek Art itself is now seen to be of Semitic origin; and Semites have produced many a monument of surpassing beauty in the world of Art. And is not poetry, too, a province of Art? Surely, the Books of Psalms, Isaiah and Job need fear no comparison with any literary product of man. And the above applies not merely to the Bible age. The Rabbis too had a passionate love of beauty. They prescribed a special tribe of Dan. 35. Them hath he filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of workmanship, of the engraver, and of the cunning workman, and of the embroiderer, in blue, and in purple, in scarlet, and in fine linen, and of the weaver, even of them that do any workmanship, and of those that devise cunning works.

Benediction at the sight of a beautiful tree or animal, as well as on beholding the first blossoms of spring (Authorised Prayer Book, p. 291). Some of them conceived the whole of Creation as a process of unfolding beauty; and spoke of God as the Incomparable Artist (אין צור כאלהינו—אין צייר כאלהינו). The highest artist, in the eyes of Jewish teachers of all generations, is not the greatest master in self-expression, but in self-control; he who fashions himself into a sanctuary. Such a view sounds strange in modern ears. One of the saddest phenomena of the age is the misuse of Art for the perversion of Youth. Art is a divine gift, and must be divinely used. "When the Hebrew spirit prevails over the Greek, he strips it of its pagan sensuality, so that its beauty stands revealed untarnished by barbaric or ungodly associations" (Solomon J. Solomon)

Corresponding to xxvi, 15–29.

20. And he made the boards for the tabernacle of acacia wood, standing up. 21. Ten cubits was the length of a board, and a cubit and a half the breadth of each board. 22. Each board had two tenons, joined one to another: thus did he make for all the boards of the tabernacle. 23. And he made the boards for the tabernacle; twenty boards for the south side southward; 24. and he made forty sockets of silver under the twenty boards; two sockets under one board for its two tenons, and two sockets under another board for its two tenons. 25. And for the second side of the tabernacle, on the north side, he made twenty boards. 26. and their forty sockets of silver; two sockets under one board, and two sockets under another board. 27. And for the hinder part of the tabernacle westward he made six boards. 28. And two boards made he for the corners of the tabernacle in the hinder part. 29. And they were double beneath, and in like manner they were entire unto the top thereof unto the first ring: thus he did to both of them in the two corners. 30. And there were eight boards, and their sockets of silver, sixteen sockets; under every board two sockets. 31. And he made bars of acacia wood; five for the boards of the one side of the tabernacle, 32. and five bars for the boards of the other side of the tabernacle, and five bars for the boards of the tabernacle for the hinder part westward. 33. And he made the middle bar to pass through in the midst of the boards from the one end to the other. 34. And he overlaid

38. their chapiters and their fillets. Better, their capitals and their sockets. In the parallel passage (xxvi, 37), it is, "overlay them (i.e. the pillars) with gold." In addition to the verbal instructions given on Sinai, Moses was granted a vision wherein he saw a pattern of what was required. Hence many of the directions are not given in full detail. We have, therefore, to assume that the word "them" is used vaguely, and Moses understood that not the whole of the pillars, but only the tops, were to be overlaid with gold.

cubit and a half the breadth of it, and a cubit

he made staves of acacia wood, and overlaid them with gold. 5. And he put the staves into the rings on the sides of the ark, to bear the ark. 6. And he made a covering of pure gold:
two cubits and a half was the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof. 7. And he

1–8. The Altar of Burnt-Offering and Laver

Corresponding to xxvii, 1–8, and xxx, 18–21.

8. the mirrors. These were made of burnished copper. According to a Rabbinic tradition, Moses at first wished to reject the offering of the mirrors because they ministered to feminine vanity; but God reminded him how the Israelite woman had shared the bitterness of her husband's bondage in Egypt and done her utmost to cheer him. Moses, thereupon, agreed to accept the mirrors, but utilised the metal for the laver, and not for the structure of the actual Tabernacle.

38 1. And he made the altar of burnt offering of acacia wood: five cubits was the length thereof, and five cubits the breadth thereof, foursquare; and three cubits the height thereof. 2. And he made the horns thereof upon the four corners of it; the horns thereof were of one piece with it: and he overlaid it with brass. 3. And he made all the vessels of the altar, the pots, and the shovels, and the basons, the fleshhooks, and the firepans: all the vessels thereof made he of brass. 4. And he made for the altar a grating of network of brass, under the ledge round it beneath, reaching halfway up. 5. And he cast four rings for the four ends of the grating of brass, to be places for the staves. 6. And he made the staves of acacia wood, and overlaid them with brass. 7. And he put the staves into the rings on the sides of the altar, to bear it withal; he made it hollow with planks.

8. And he made the laver of brass, and the base thereof of brass, of the mirrors of the women which assembled to minister at the door of the tent of meeting.

9. And he made the court: for the south side southward the hangings of the court were of fine twined linen, an hundred cubits: 10. their pillars were twenty, and their sockets twenty, of brass; the hooks of the pillars and their fillets

XI. PEKUDEY

(Chapter XXXVIII, 21–XL)

With minute care these chapters of Exodus describe the concluding stages of the construction of the Sanctuary. v. 21–31 of this chapter give the total amount of the precious metals used.

21. tabernacle of the testimony. So called because of the Tables of the Decalogue that were deposited there; cf. xxv, 16.

for the service of the Levites. Or, "being the work of the Levites, under the hand, etc."

Ithamar. The superintendent of the Tabernacle (Num. iv, 28).

22. Bezalel. Tribute is paid in this and the following verse to the faithful manner in which the two principal architects executed their work.

24. talents. See on xxv, 39. A talent equalled 3,000 shekels.

XI. PEKUDEY

38 21. This is the sum of the things for the tabernacle, even the tabernacle of the testimony, as they were counted, according to the commandment of Moses, for the service of the Levites, by the hand of Ithamar, the son of Aaron the priest. 22. And Bezalel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah, made all that the LORD commanded Moses. 23. And with him was Oholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan, an engraver, and a cunning workman, and an embroiderer in blue, and in purple, and in scarlet, and fine linen.

24. All the gold that was used for the work in all the work of the sanctuary, even the gold of the offering, was twenty and nine talents, and seven hundred and thirty shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary. 25. And the silver of them that were numbered of the congregation was an hundred talents, and a thousand seven hundred and threescore and fifteen shekels, after shekel of the sanctuary. See on xxx, 13. It has been computed that the total quantity of gold was worth about £160,000.

25. that were numbered. Cf. xxx, 12f. The silver weighed 301,775 shekels; and since each male adult contributed half a shekel, the census showed a total of 603,000; cf. Num. I, 46. This suggests that the computations recorded here were not made at this time, but after the erection of the Tabernacle.

27. for casting the sockets. See on XXVI, 19.

29. brass of the offering. The quantity of copper was about three tons.

30. brasen altar. There is no mention of the laver, which was likewise made of copper. The reason is that the material for this came from a special source; see v. 8 above.

1–31. THE PRIESTS' VESTMENTS

2–7. THE EPHOD

Corresponding to XXVIII, 6–12.

3. beat the gold. This verse does not occur in the parallel

the shekel of the sanctuary: 26. a beka a head, that is, half a shekel, after the shekel of the sanctuary, for every one that passed over to them that were numbered, from twenty years old and upward, for six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty men.
27. And the hundred talents of silver were for casting the sockets of the sanctuary, and the sockets of the veil; an hundred sockets for the hundred talents, a talent for a socket. 28. And of the thousand seven hundred seventy and five shekels he made hooks for the pillars, and overlaid their chapiters, and made fillets for them. 29. And the brass of the offering was seventy talents, and two thousand and four hundred shekels. 30. And therewith he made the sockets to the door of the tent of meeting, and the brasen altar, and the brasen grating for it, and all the vessels of the altar, 31. and the sockets of the court round about, and the sockets of the gate of the court, and all the pins of the tabernacle, and all the pins of the court round about.

v. 4. קצותו ק׳

2. And he made the ephod of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen. 3. And they did beat the gold into thin plates, and cut it into wires, to work it in the blue, and in the purple, and in the scarlet, and in the fine linen, the work of the cunning workman. 4. They made shoulderpieces for it, joined together: at the two ends was it joined together. 5. And the cunningly woven band, that was upon it, to gird it on withal, was of the same piece and like the work thereof; of gold, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen; as the LORD commanded Moses.

6. And they wrought the onyx stones, inclosed in ouches of gold, graven with the engravings of a signet, according to the names of the children of Israel. 7. And he put them on the shoulder-pieces of the ephod, to be stones of memorial for the children of Israel; as the LORD commanded Moses.

8. And he made the breastplate, the work of the cunning workman, like the work of the ephod; of gold, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen. 9. It was foursquare; they made the breastplate double: a span was the length thereof, and a span the breadth thereof, being double. 10. And they set in it four rows of stones: a row of ruby, topaz, and emerald was the first row. 11. And the second row, a carbuncle, a sapphire, and a diamond. 12. And the third row, a jacinth, an agate, and an amethyst. 13. And the fourth row, a beryl, an onyx, and a jasper: they were inclosed in ouches of gold in their settings. 14. And the stones were according to the names of the children of Israel, twelve, according to their names; like the engravings of a signet, every one according to his name, for the twelve tribes. 15. And they made upon the breastplate chains like cords, of wreathen work of pure gold. 16. And they made two ouches of gold, and two gold rings; and put the two rings on the two ends of the breast-plate. 17. And they put the two wreathen chains of gold on the two rings at the ends of the breast-plate. 18. And the other two ends of the two wreathen chains they put on the two ouches, and put them on the shoulderpieces of the ephod, in the forepart thereof. 19. And they made two rings of gold, and put them upon the two ends of the breastplate, upon the edge thereof, which was toward the side of the ephod inward. 20. And they made two rings of gold, and put them on the two shoulderpieces of the ephod underneath, in the forepart thereof, close by the coupling thereof, above the cunningly woven band of the ephod. 21. And they did bind the breastplate by the rings thereof unto the rings of the ephod with a lace of blue, that it might be upon the cunningly woven band of the ephod, and that the breastplate might not be loosed from the ephod; as the LORD commanded Moses.*iii(vi)

22. And he made the robe of the ephod of woven work, all of blue; 23. and the hole of the robe in the midst thereof, as the hole of a coat of mail, with a binding round about the hole of it, that it should not be rent. 24. And they made upon the skirts of the robe pomegranates of blue,
and purple, and scarlet, and twined linen. 25.
And they made bells of pure gold, and put the bells between the pomegranates upon the skirts of the robe round about, between the pome-

27. And they made the coats of fine linen of woven work for Aaron, and for his sons, 28. and the mitre of fine linen, and the goodly headtires of fine linen, and the linen breeches of fine twined linen, 29. and the girdle of fine twined linen, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, the work of the embroiderer; as the LORD commanded Moses.

30. And they made the plate of the holy crown of pure gold, and wrote upon it a writing, like the engravings of a signet, HOLY TO THE LORD. 31. And they tied unto it a lace of blue, to fasten it upon the mitre above; as the LORD commanded Moses.

32. Thus was finished all the work of the tabernacle of the tent of meeting: and the children of Israel did according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did they.*iv

33. And they brought the tabernacle unto Moses, the Tent, and all its furniture, its clasps, its boards, its bars, and its pillars, and its sockets; 34. and the covering of rams' skins dyed red, and the covering of porpoise-skins, and the veil of the screen; 35. the ark of the testimony, and the staves thereof, and the mercy-seat; 36. the table, all the vessels thereof, and the shewbread; 37. the pure candlestick, the lamps thereof, even the lamps to be set in order, and all the vessels

40. all the instruments. See on XXVII, 19.

42. the children of Israel. i.e. the wise-hearted among them. Credit is here given to the nameless donors and workers, who made the achievement of Bezalel and Oholiab possible.

43. blessed them. i.e. expressed his thanks by invoking a blessing upon them. The time had been short, the task great and arduous, but the labourers, fired by holy enthusiasm and zeal, had joyfully completed the work they had undertaken. They fully earned the gratitude and benediction of their leader. Moses does not pronounce his blessing at the beginning of the sacred enterprise. Beginnings are easy; completions are as hard as they are rare. The number of those who never begin a good work is perhaps not larger than those that begin, waver, and steal thereof, and the oil for the light; 38. and the golden altar, and the anointing oil, and the sweet incense, and the screen for the door of the Tent; 39. the brasen altar, and its grating of brass, its staves, and all its vessels, the laver and its base; 40. the hangings of the court, its pillars, and its sockets, and the screen for the gate of the court, the cords thereof, and the pins thereof, and all the instruments of the service of the tabernacle, for the tent of meeting; 41. the finely wrought garments for ministering in the holy place, and the holy garments for Aaron the priest, and the garments of his sons, to minister in the priest's office. 42. According to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so the children of Israel did all the work. 43. And Moses saw all the work, and, behold, they had done it; as the LORD had commanded, even so had they done it: and Moses blessed them.*v (vii)

And thou shalt set the golden altar for incense before the ark of the testimony, and put the screen of the door to the tabernacle. 6. And thou shalt set the altar of burnt offering before the door of the tabernacle of the tent of meeting. 7. And thou shalt set the laver between the tent of meeting and the altar, and shalt put water therein. 8. And thou shalt set up the court round about, and hang up the screen of the gate of the court. 9. And thou shalt take the anointing oil, and anoint the tabernacle, and all that is therein, and shalt hallow it, and all the furniture thereof: and it shall be holy. 10. And thou shalt anoint the altar of burnt offering, and all its vessels, and sanctify the altar: and the altar shall be most holy. 11. And thou shalt anoint the laver and its base, and sanctify it. 12. And thou shalt bring Aaron and his sons unto the door of the tent of meeting, and shalt wash them with water. 13. their anointing. Only the High Priest had in every case to be anointed when inducted into his office. For the other priests, the anointing of the first priests, the sons of Aaron, was held to suffice; and the consecration of the ordinary descendant of the sons of Aaron consisted merely in being clothed in the priestly garments.

16. thus did Moses. The fulfilment of the command, so far as the erection of the Tabernacle was concerned, is described in the verses that follow. The induction of Aaron and his sons is narrated in Lev. VIII.

18. And Moses reared up the tabernacle, and laid its sockets, and set up the boards thereof, and put in the bars thereof, and reared up its pillars.
19. And he spread the tent over the tabernacle, and put the covering of the tent above upon it; as the LORD commanded Moses.

20. And he took and put the testimony into the ark, and set the staves on the ark, and put the mercy-seat above upon the ark:
21. and he brought the ark into the tabernacle, and set up the veil of the screen, and screened the ark of the testimony; as the LORD commanded Moses.

22. And he put the table in the tent of meeting, upon the side of the tabernacle northward, without the veil.
23. And he set the bread in order upon it before the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses.

24. And he put the candlestick in the tent of meeting, over against the table, on the side of the tabernacle southward.
25. And he lighted the lamps before the LORD; as the LORD commanded Moses.

Tradition declares that the broken pieces of the First Tables were also deposited in the Ark.

36. went onward. Still another purpose was served by the cloud: it was a signal for the People when to halt and when to proceed on their journey.

26. And he put the golden altar in the tent of meeting before the veil: 27. and he burnt thereon incense of sweet spices; as the LORD commanded Moses.*vii

28. And he put the screen of the door to the tabernacle. 29. And he set the altar of burnt offering at the door of the tabernacle of the tent of meeting, and offered upon it the burnt offering and the meal offering; as the LORD commanded Moses.

30. And he set the laver between the tent of meeting and the altar, and put water therein, to wash withal. 31. And Moses and Aaron and his sons washed their hands and their feet thereat; 32. when they went into the tent of meeting, and when they came near unto the altar, they washed: as the LORD commanded Moses.

33. And he reared up the court round about the tabernacle and the altar, and set up the screen of the gate of the court. So Moses finished the work.*m

34. Then the cloud covered the tent of meeting, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle. 35. And Moses was not able to enter into the tent of meeting, because the cloud abode thereon, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle. 36. And when the cloud was taken up from over the tabernacle, the children of Israel went onward, throughout all their journeys: 37. but if the cloud were not taken up, then they journeyed not till the day that it was taken up. 38. 38. fire therein. i.e. with fire shining in the cloud by night (cf. Num. IX, 15f). Without this fire, the cloud would not have been perceptible at night.

The Book of Exodus thus closes with the fulfilment of the promise in XXIX, 43, 45. Moses' appeal had been effective, and God's protecting and sanctifying Presence in the midst of His people, would lead them to their appointed destination.

The Tabernacle, after it had accompanied the Israelites in their wanderings in the Wilderness, was most probably first set up in the Holy Land at Gilgal (Josh. IV, 19). Before the death of Joshua, it was erected at Shiloh (Josh. XVIII, 1). Here it remained as the national Sanctuary throughout the time of the Judges (Judg. XVIII, 31 ; I Sam. IV, 3). But its external construction was at this time somewhat changed, and doors, seem to have taken the place of the entrance curtain (I Sam. III, 15). After the time of Eli, it was removed to Nob in the district of Benjamin, not far from Jerusalem (I Sam. XXI, 1–9). Thence, in the time of David, it was removed to Gibeon (I Kings III, 4). It was brought from Gibeon to Jerusalem by Solomon (I Kings VIII, 4). When the Temple of Solomon was built, the Tabernacle of the Wilderness had performed its work of protecting the Ark of the Covenant during all the migrations of Israel. The promise that the Lord would choose out a place for Himself in which His name should be preserved and His service should be maintained was then fulfilled.

According to Jewish custom, the completion of any of the Five Books of the Torah is marked in the Synagogue by the congregation exclaiming Be strong, be strong, and let us strengthen one another—an echo of the words of the ancient warrior, "Be of good courage and let us play the men, for our people and the cities of our God." (II Sam. X, 12). Be strong, i.e. to carry out the teaching contained in the Book just completed.

The Massoretic Note states the numbers of verses in Exodus to be 1209; its Sedrahs (parshiyyoth) 11; its Sedarim, smaller divisions according to the Triennial Cycle, 29; and its Chapters, 40.

THE HAFTORAHS

FOR

THE BOOK OF EXODUS.

Before reading the Lesson from the Prophets, the following is said by the Maftir :—

בָּרוּךְ אַתָּה יְיָ אֱלֹהֵינוּ מֶלֶךְ הָעוֹלָם אֲשֶׁר בָּחַר בִּנְבִיאִים טוֹבִים וְרָצָה בְדִבְרֵיהֶם הַנֶּאֱמָרִים בֶּאֱמֶת בָּרוּךְ אַתָּה יְיָ הַבּוֹחֵר בַּתּוֹרָה וּבְמשֶׁה עַבְדּוֹ וּבְיִשְׂרָאֵל עַמּוֹ וּבִנְבִיאֵי הָאֱמֶת וָצֶדֶק:

Before reading the Lesson from the Prophets, the following is said by the Maftir :—

Blessed art thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, who hast chosen good prophets, and hast found pleasure in their words which were spoken in truth.

Blessed art thou, O Lord, who hast chosen the Law, and Moses thy servant, and Israel thy people, and prophets of truth and righteousness.

[Sephardim conclude each Haftorah with the words :—

Our Redeemer! The Lord of Hosts is his name, the Holy One of Israel.]

After the Lesson from the Prophets, the Maftir says the following :—

Blessed art thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, Rock of all worlds, righteous through all generations, O faithful God, who sayest and doest, who speakest and fulfillest, all whose words are truth and righteousness. Faithful art thou, O Lord our God, and faithful are thy words, and not one of thy words shall return void, for thou art a faithful and merciful God and King. Blessed art thou, O Lord, God, who art faithful in all thy words.

Have mercy upon Zion, for it is the home of our life, and save her that is grieved in spirit speedily, even in our days. Blessed art thou, O Lord, who makest Zion joyful through her children.

Gladden us, O Lord our God, with Elijah the prophet, thy servant, and with the kingdom of the house of David, thine anointed. Soon may he come and rejoice our hearts. Suffer not a stranger to sit upon his throne, nor let others any longer inherit his glory ; for by thy holy name thou didst swear unto him, that his light should not be quenched for ever. Blessed art thou, O Lord, the Shield of David.

For the Law, for the divine service, for the prophets, and for this Sabbath day, which thou, O Lord our God, hast given us for holiness and for rest, for honour and for glory,—for all these we thank and bless thee, O Lord our God, blessed be thy name by the mouth of every living being continually and for ever. Blessed art thou, O Lord, who sanctifiest the Sabbath.

The Haftorah (the Heb. term is haphtarah, "conclusion"), is the Lesson from the Prophets recited immediately after the Reading of the Law. Long before the destruction of the Second Temple, the custom had grown up of concluding the Reading of the Torah on Sabbaths, Fasts and Festivals with a selection from the "Earlier Prophets" (Joshua, Judges, Samuel and Kings) or from the "Later Prophets" (Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and the Book of the Twelve Prophets). We possess no historical data concerning the institution of these Lessons. A medieval author on the Liturgy states that a little more than two thousand years ago (168 B.C.E.), Antiochus Epiphanes, king of Syria and Palestine, forbade the reading of the Torah under penalty of death. The Scribes, thereupon, substituted a chapter of the Prophets cognate to the portion of the Law that ought to have been read. But whatever be the exact origin of the Haftorah, there is always some similarity between the Sedrah and the Prophetic selection. Even when the latter does not contain an explicit reference to the events of the Sedrah, it reinforces the teaching of the weekly Reading upon the mind of the worshipper by a Prophetic message of consolation and hope.

upon 40 years, from 740-701 B.C.E. These years were the most stirring that the kingdom of Judah had yet passed through; and, throughout that entire period, he was the dominant figure in the land. The momentous event of his time was the rise of Assyria. From being a mere garrison province of Babylon in northern Mesopotamia, Assyria had become a world power. The kingdoms of Syria and Israel fell before the Assyrians in 721; and only as by a miracle was Jerusalem delivered from their grasp in 701.

With the downfall of the kingdom of Israel, Judah became the sole representative and repository of true Religion; and in the fate of that tiny land, the moral destinies of the whole world were involved. In this time of upheaval and spiritual travail, Isaiah brought to King and People the message of the holiness, omnipotence, and sovereignty of God ("Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of His glory.") With passionate fervour he sought to instil his own vital faith in God and Providence into the heart of his brethren, and interpret for them the crises of history in the light of Divine guidance and Righteousness. His efforts brought him into violent conflict with the war party of his day; and, throughout his life, he remained an implacable enemy of shallow 'patriots' and opportunist politicians. According to one tradition, he perished in the heathen reaction under King Manasseh.

Great in thought and great in action, Isaiah united the profoundest religious insight with wide knowledge of men and affairs. The princely personality of the man is reflected in his style. His words are instinct with power, and he is the master of the sublime in universal literature. His moral passion, moreover, marks him as one of the world's greatest orators. See also p. 50 .

The connection between the Sedrah and Haftorah is apparent. Israel had suffered in Egypt, but Israel's task-masters had received adequate punishment; and Israel's affliction in Isaiah's day was as nothing compared with the fate that would befall its foes. Israel in Egypt chafed at Redemption's delay, tiring of the visits of Moses and Aaron; Israel of Isaiah's age gibed at the monotony of Prophetical teaching, and doubted the validity of Divine promise. The Egyptian Deliverance revealed the truth that Justice and Righteousness triumph in God's universe; so in days to come, the men of a later age would see that the hand of God moves in the destinies of men, and that His purposes cannot be gainsaid.

6. in days to come. Or, "in the generations to come." The word for "days" or "generations" must be supplied in the Heb. text.

fill the face of the world with fruit. Israel is saved, and saving the world. The prophet dreams for Israel the ascendancy of noble example to the other nations; as in Isa. II, 2f.

7. smitten him. i.e. Israel. Severe as Israel has been punished, its punishment was mild in comparison to that meted out to Israel's enemies, such as Pharaoh (Kimchi). The implied answer is No.

8. in measure. According to their sins, but tempered with mercy.

7. Hath he smitten him as he smote those that smote him? or is he slain according to the slaughter of their slain? 8. In measure, by sending her away, thou dost contend with her; he hath removed her with his rough blast in the day of the east wind.

9. Therefore by this shall the iniquity of Jacob be expiated, and this is all the fruit of taking away his sin; when he maketh all the stones of the altar as chalkstones that are beaten in sunder, so that the Asherim and the sun-images shall rise no more. 10. For the defenced city is solitary, an habitation deserted and forsaken, like the wilderness: there shall the calf feed, and there shall he lie down, and consume the branches

when he maketh. Better, that he should make.

Asherim and the sun-images. The Asherah was probably the sacred pole, or symbol of fertility, found in ancient shrines. The sun-images were pillars dedicated to the worship of the sun-god.

10, 11. Repentance can bring forgiveness, but it does not imply immunity from punishment. The "solitary city" is Jerusalem, deserted and forsaken, with grass and boughs growing in the streets, food for calves and fuel for its needy inhabitants. They are "a people of no understanding." The time of punishment, in shape of exile must, therefore, inevitably come.

Through intemperance the "prophets" lack the capacity to discern the real significance of their own visions, or to understand and convey the teachings of their great predecessors. The priests, who were forbidden while on duty to take any wine or strong drink, from the same cause give feeble and irresolute guidance.

When the orgy is at its height, Isaiah enters and expresses his abhorrence of the scene" (Skinner).

9. whom will he teach. This and the following verse should be in inverted commas. The revellers, who resent the monotonous lessons of this Prophetic pedagogue, as they think him, are mocking Iasiah over their cups. "Does he take us for mere children, that he gives us these platitudes and repetitions?"

CHAPTER XXIX, 22, 23

Jewish custom ordains that in every public Scriptural Reading hope shall triumph. The Prophetic message must not end in despair. These verses hark back to Israel's early history; they look forward to the future as a time of restoration, when the people shall by their lives sanctify the Holy One of Jacob.

SHEMOTH—(FOR SEPHARDIM)

JEREMIAH I–II, 3

The call of Jeremiah has been aptly chosen by the Sephardim as the Haftorah for the Sedrah dealing with the call of Moses: diffidence and hesitancy in assuming the well-nigh superhuman task that Heaven assigned to them, are common to both. The final verses of the Haftorah (II, 2, 3), poetically recalling the wanderings in the Wilderness, form another link with the Sedrah.

Jeremiah was born of a priestly family about the year 650 B.C.E. His Prophetic call came to him in the reign of Josiah, king of Judah, in the year 626. He witnessed the fall of Nineveh and the annihilation of the Assyrian Empire in 606; the death of Josiah, Judah's righteous king, in 605; and lived through the two sieges of Jerusalem in 597 and 586, with the attendant destruction of the Jewish state and the consequent transportation of the greater portion of his people to "the rivers of Babylon." We last hear of him in Egypt, carried thither by fugitive Judeans; and legend relates that he died a martyr's death at the hands of his brethren. Whatever basis there may be for this legend, it is but too true that Jeremiah the Prophet lived a martyr's life. For the greater part of his career, he was one man against the whole nation. By nature timid and shrinking, he proclaimed the Divine message fearlessly to ruler, noble, priest and people alike.

Jeremiah is the spiritual heir of the great Prophets that preceded him. He combines the tenderness of Hosea, the fearlessness of Amos, and the stern majesty of Isaiah. Like them, he is first of all a preacher of repentance; threatening judgement and, at the same time, holding out the promise of restoration. But even in his darkest moments, when he utterly despairs of the future of Jewish state, his faith and trust in God do not forsake him. "Though all be lost," he seems to say to Israel, "turn to God in perfect trust, call Him your Father, and His love will regenerate you." To Jeremiah, Religion is an inward thing, a personal relation between the individual and his Maker, a relation that is untouched by national prosperity and can only be deepened by national ruin. "The history of Israel begins with the migration of Abraham from the Euphrates to the Jordan; its classical period closes with the compulsory migration of the exiles from the Jordan back to the Euphrates. If Israel had been merely a race like others it would never have survived this fearful catastrophe, and would have disappeared in the Babylonian exile" (Cornill). That it did not so disappear was due to the activity of two men—Jeremiah and his disciple Ezekiel. Jeremiah's message to his despairing brethren in Babylon, "Seek the welfare of the city wherein ye dwell, and pray unto the LORD for it: for in its welfare shall be your peace," has been of incalculable influence in the civic life of all Jews throughout the world.

2. Josiah. He reigned from 626–605. He put down the idolatries, abominations and immoralities that had been introduced by Manasseh, and led a great religious revival in Israel. Unfortunately Judah's position between two great empires, Egypt and Babylon, was a most precarious one. Josiah took the side of Babylon, and was slain in the battle of Megiddo by Pharaoh Necho. Jeremiah and the whole people mourned for him "as one mourneth for an only son."

Zedekiah. The youngest son of Josiah, and the last king of Judah. He was well-disposed, but weak and devoid of any true religious zeal. In the eleventh year of his reign, Jerusalem was taken and burned by the Babylonians. He was blinded, taken to Babylon, and died there in prison.

politics and its career was inextricably bound up with Assyria, Babylon and Egypt (Peake).

6. I am a child. Not necessarily in years. The Heb. word has a wider sense, indicating a child in fitness or experience. These words express the shrinking self-distrust of a sensitive nature, and the humility that characterises truly great minds; cf. the reply of Moses in the Sedrah, IV, 10.

7. say not. Whatever his limitations may be, they matter not, for he is to be God's messenger; and, whatever opposition or even persecution may be his lot, he would be Divinely supported.

9. touched my mouth. Symbolic of Divine inspiration. The message he would bring would not be his message, but the message of God.

11, 12. The Symbol of the Almond Tree

11. an almond tree. Heb. shaked, and the Heb. for "watching" is shoked. There is more than a play on words here. The almond tree is so named in Hebrew, because, blossoming early in January, it is the first to awake from winter's sleep. On seeing it, the thought flashes across the Prophet's mind that God is awake and watches over His word to fulfil it, without delay. This assurance at the outset of his career, that God would surely execute His purpose, was to steady him, when in the course of his ministry he found himself doomed again and again to disappointment.

13–16. The Symbol of the Caldron word of the LORD came unto me the second time, saying, What seest thou? And I said, I from the north. 14. Then the LORD said unto me, Out of the north evil shall break forth upon all the inhabitants of the land. 15. For, lo, I will call all the families of the kingdoms of the north,

saith the LORD; and they shall come, and they

15. shall set every one his throne. The neighbourhood of the city gate was the place where trials were ordinarily held. Here the rulers of the invading army will sit in judgement on the conquered people. This was literally fulfilled; see Jer. XXXIX, 3.

lest I dismay thee before them. If thou fearest them, thou wilt fail before them (Kimchi). If he delivers his stern message in fear and trusting, the confidence of those opposed to him would be strengthened, and there would be no hope of his words finding credence. Jeremiah can only conquer if he does not for one moment lose courage—a warning needed by the Prophet whose life would be full of anguish and martyrdom.

18. the people of the land. Heb. am ha-aretz; probably the National Assembly—"the ancient Hebrew Parliament" (Sulzberger); see Genesis, p. 192.

thy loins, and arise, and speak unto them all that I command thee: be not dismayed at them,

I have made thee this day a defenced city, and an iron pillar, and brasen walls, against the whole land, against the kings of Judah, against the princes thereof, against the priests thereof, and against the people of the land. 19. And they shall fight against thee: but they shall

God reminds Israel of her loyalty and affection in the Wilderness. Hosea had spoken of the relation between God and His people under the image of a marriage union. Jeremiah pictures Israel's loyalty to God as that of an affectionate bride, who follows the chosen of her heart even into a wilderness.

It was only such love that could cause them gladly to follow the call of God into the Unknown, on a novel quest of the Divine, that was to fill man's earthly existence with new hopes; on an unheard-of adventure in Religion, that was to turn the current of history and humanise mankind.

of the nation were deported to Babylon in 597 B.C.E. He seems to have lived a peaceful and honoured life in Chaldea. The exiles had their own houses and lands, and their own government by Elders. They seem readily to have entered into the "modern" life of Babylon, under the firm and not unjust rule of Nebuchadnezzar. In common with Jeremiah, he held that the future of the nation lay with the exiles, and he devoted his extraordinary genius to saving these exiles, as Israelites, for Israel. He follows events in the Holy Land with feverish anxiety, and warns his brethren against the alliance with Egypt.

25. shall have gathered. A leading doctrine in Ezekiel's message is that God will restore and purify His people.

26. do them despite. Or, "have them in disdain" (AJ).

they shall know that I am the Lord. The result of such restoration and purification of Israel will vindicate the supreme power of the God of Israel. A repentant and restored Israel would reveal to all the nations the "Name" of God; i.e. the real character and majesty of the God of Israel. On the meaning of this phrase, see p. 104.

CHAPTER XXIX. THE ORACLE AGAINST EGYPT

Egypt, the house of bondage and oppression for Israel in the days of its youth, was again the enemy during the last years of the Jewish state. It was "a broken reed," and was as perfidious as it was decadent.

1. in the tenth year. Of the reign of Zedekiah, the last king of Judah; 587 B.C.E.

tenth month. i.e. Tebeth (January–February), about seven months before the destruction of Jerusalem.

2. son of man. A favourite expression of Ezekiel, and equivalent to man or mortal.

Pharaoh. Pharaoh Hophra.

3. the great dragon. The crocodile; which infested the Nile and was worshipped as a god. It is here the symbol of Egypt.

my river is mine own. It is this insolent pride of Egypt in its land and River, this self-deification on the part of the Pharaohs, that was an assured forerunner of its fall.

29 1. In the tenth year, in the tenth month, in the twelfth day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, 2. Son of man, set thy face against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and prophesy against him, and against all Egypt:
3. speak, and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD:
Behold, I am against thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt, the great dragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers, which hath said, My river is mine own, and I have made it for myself. 4. And I will put hooks in thy jaws, and I will cause the fish of thy rivers to stick unto thy scales; and I will bring thee up out of the midst of thy rivers, with all the fish of thy rivers which stick unto thy scales. 5. And I will leave thee thrown into the wilderness, thee and all the fish of thy rivers: thou shalt fall upon the open field; thou shalt not be brought together, nor gathered: I have given thee for meat to the beasts of the earth and to the fowls of the heaven. 6. And all the inhabitants of Egypt shall know that I am the LORD, because they have been a staff

4. hooks in thy jaws. The crocodile is really less formidable than he appears to be, and is an easy prey to such as assail him with skill; the same will be true of Egypt.

fish of thy rivers. The subjects or allies of Egypt will be involved in its ruin.

6. a staff of reed to the house of Israel. An exact picture of the deceptive character of Egypt's relationship with Israel. By promises of assistance she incited Israel to rebel against Assyria and Babylon, but always failed at the critical hour to redeem her promise.

against thy rivers, and I will make the land of Egypt an utter waste and desolation, from Migdol midst of the countries that are desolate, and her cities among the cities that are laid waste shall be a desolation forty years: and I will scatter

the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries. 13. For thus saith the Lord GOD: At the end of forty years will I gather the Egyptians from the peoples whither they were scattered: 14. and I will bring

It shall be the basest of the kingdoms; neither shall it any more lift itself up above the nations: and I will diminish them, that they shall no more rule over the nations: 16. And it shall be no more the confidence of the house of Israel, bringing iniquity to remembrance, when they turn to look after them: and they shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

Son of man, Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon caused his army to serve a great service against Tyre: every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled: yet had he no wages, nor his army, from Tyre, for the service that he had served against it: 19. therefore thus saith the Lord GOD: Behold, I will give the land of Egypt unto Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; and he shall carry off her multitude, and take her spoil, and take her prey; and it shall be the wages for his army. 20. I have given him the land of Egypt as his recompence for which he served, because they wrought for me, saith the Lord GOD.

21. In that day will I cause an horn to bud forth unto the house of Israel, and I will give thee the opening of the mouth in the midst of them; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

the other in Babylon, denounced the sin and folly of seeking help from Egypt. This is one of the last prophecies uttered by Jeremiah. It forms part of his Ode of Triumph upon the humiliating defeat of Pharaoh at the great battle of Charchemish in 605 B.C.E., and foretells the total collapse of Egypt before the power of Babylon.

14. declare ye. All Egypt is called upon to stand forth and prepare to repel the coming invader. Migdol is a frontier town in the north, also Tahpanhes; and Noph (Memphis) is the capital of Upper Egypt; see Map, facing p.

15. why is thy strong one swept away. The Heb. for "strong one" is in the plural, "the plural of majesty," and refers to the king, not to the people. The Septuagint divides the Heb. word for "swept away" into two, reading "Why is Apis fled? The mighty one stood not, etc." Apis was the sacred bull, the symbol of Osiris, the chief Egyptian deity worshipped at Memphis, and was called the mighty one.

16. they fell one upon another. The Egyptian armies in the panic of defeat.

BESHALLACH

JUDGES IV, 4–V, 31

In the Sedrah, the deliverance from Egypt is celebrated in the Song of Moses and Miriam. The Haftorah brings the deliverance from later heathen oppression under the leadership of Deborah, and her Song of triumph and praise.

These chapters of the Book of Judges, take us back to an early period in Israel's history, the days after the death of Joshua, when the tribes were compelled to wage a hard and often desperate struggle against the remaining warlike Canaanites. It was a barbaric period, without national unity and devoid of religious authority. "In those days there was no king of Israel: every man did that which was right in his own eyes." But God does not utterly forsake His people. An overwhelming national calamity, or foreign oppression, would bring forth a Champion, who would repel or destroy the foe, or rescue the people from the threatened calamity. Such Champions, known as Shofetim ("Judges"), were Gideon, Jephthah, Samson, and the most remarkable of all, Deborah. The story of her achievement has come down to us in two versions, Lappidoth, she judged Israel at that time. 5.

And she sat under the palm tree of Deborah between Ramah and Beth-el in the hill country of Ephraim; and the children of Israel came up to her for judgement. 6. And she sent and called Barak the son of Abinoam out of Kedesh-naphtali, and said unto him, Hath not the LORD, in prose and in verse. From them we can reconstruct the mortal danger from which her victory saved Israel. That victory was one of the "decisive battles" of the world. It settled the destiny of Palestine, and a great many other things, for all time. Moreover, under the inspiration of Deborah's lofty patriotism, most of the tribes for the first time combined in face of a common danger. Those wild years forged the bonds of a nationality that has survived unprecedented shocks till the present day.

draw unto thee to the river Kishon Sisera, the captain of Jabin's army, with his chariots and his multitude; and I will deliver him into thine hand. 8. And Barak said unto her, If thou wilt go with me, then I will go: but if thou wilt not go with me, I will not go. 9. And she said, I will surely go with thee: notwithstanding the journey that thou takest shall not be for thine honour; for the LORD shall sell Sisera into the hand of a woman. And Deborah arose, and went with Barak to Kedesh. 10. And Barak called Zebulun and Naphtali together to Kedesh; and there went up ten thousand men at his feet: and Deborah went up with him. 11. Now Heber the Kenite had severed himself from the Kenites, even from the children of Hobab, the father in law of Moses, and had pitched his tent as far as the terebinth in Zaanannim, which is by Kedesh. 12. And they told Sisera that Barak the son of Abinoam was gone up to mount Tabor. 13. And Sisera gathered together all his chariots, even nine hundred chariots of iron, and all the people that were with him, from Harosheth of the Gentiles, unto the river Kishon. 14. And Deborah said unto Barak, Up; for this is the day in which the LORD hath delivered Sisera into thine hand: is not the LORD gone out before thee? So Barak went

And the LORD discomfited Sisera, and all his chariots, and all his host, with the edge of the sword before Barak; and Sisera lighted down from his chariot, and fled away on his feet. 16. But Barak pursued after the chariots, and after the host, unto Harosheth of the Gentiles: and all the host of Sisera fell by the edge of the sword; there was not a man left.

17. Howbeit Sisera fled away on his feet to the tent of Jael the wife of Heber the Kenite: for there was peace between Jabin the king of Hazor and the house of Heber the Kenite. 18. And Jael went out to meet Sisera, and said unto him, Turn in, my lord, turn in to me; fear not. And he turned in unto her into the tent, and she covered him with a rug. 19. And he said unto her, Give me, I pray thee, a little water to drink; for I am thirsty. And she opened a bottle of milk, and gave him drink, and covered him. 20. And he said unto her, Stand in the door of the tent, and it shall be, when any man doth come and inquire of thee, and say, Is there any man here? that thou shalt say, No. 21. Then Jael Heber's wife took a tent-pin, and took an hammer in her hand, and went softly unto him, and smote the pin into his temples, and it pierced through into the ground; for he was in a deep sleep; so he swooned and died. 22. Chapter V

Deborah's Song of Deliverance and Praise

"The Song of Deborah holds a high place among Triumphal Odes in the literature of the world. It is a work of that highest art which is not studied and artificial, but spontaneous and inevitable. It shows a development and command of the resources of the language for ends of poetical expression, which prove that poetry had long been cultivated among the Hebrews" (Moore).

2. for that the leaders took the lead in Israel. Or, "when the locks grew long in Israel"; i.e. when men took the vow and consecrated themselves to the war of liberation. "Wearing the hair long was the mark of a vow not to do certain things until a specified object had been attained" (Cooke); cf. Num. vi, 5.

said unto him, Come, and I will shew thee the man whom thou seekest. And he came unto her; and, behold, Sisera lay dead, and the tent-pin was in his temples. 23. So God subdued on that day Jabin the king of Canaan before the children of Israel. 24. And the hand of the children of Israel prevailed more and more against Jabin
the king of Canaan, until they had destroyed Jabin king of Canaan.

(Sephardim begin here.)

5 1. Then sang Deborah and Barak the son of Abinoam on that day, saying,

2. For that the leaders took the lead in Israel,
For that the people offered themselves willingly, Bless ye the LORD.

3. Hear, O ye kings; give ear, O ye princes;
I, even I, will sing unto the LORD;
I will sing praise to the Lord, the God of Israel.

4. LORD, when thou wentest forth out of Seir,
When thou marchedst out of the field of Edom, high ways were unoccupied. Israel was in hiding, and all travel on the highways was stopped. The people had to abandon their villages because of the harrying armed bands of Canaanites.

7. I arose a mother in Israel. The Rabbis deem these expressions too removed from that self-effacing humility which is the mark of true inspiration. However, the Heb. may also be taken as an old grammatical form, and translated, "till thou, Deborah, didst arise, a mother in Israel."

8. was there a shield or spear. The people had no proper weapons with which to defend themselves.

Jael's murder is viewed as an act of national deliverance, without which the victory might have been fruitless; it, therefore, receives high praise. Judged by standards of peace, her act was one of treacherous cruelty; but every nation glorifies similar, and worse, deeds in its history. Our own age, in which the most enlightened nations have, for reasons of policy or patriotism, committed or condoned crimes and inhumanities on an immeasurably greater scale, is not entitled to condemn the praise bestowed upon the fierce deed of this wild Bedouin woman.

24. Blessed of women shall Jael be,
The wife of Heber the Kenite,
Blessed shall she be of women in the tent.
25. He asked water, and she gave him milk;
She brought him butter in a lordly dish.
26. She put her hand to the tent-pin,
And her right hand to the workmen's hammer;
And with the hammer she smote Sisera, she smote through his head,
Yea, she pierced and struck through his temples.
27. At her feet he bowed, he fell, he lay:
At her feet he bowed, he fell:
Where he bowed, there he fell down dead.
28. Through the window she looked forth, and cried,
The mother of Sisera cried through the lattice,
Why is his chariot so long in coming?
Why tarry the wheels of his chariots?
29. Her wise ladies answered her,
Yea, she returned answer to herself,

25. lordly dish. A bowl fit for nobles.

Its climax "is as weird as it is fantastic, the figure of Sisera's mother mumbling to herself of the 'spoil of damsels, divers colours and embroidery,' which her son is to bring home, and which we already know he never will." as the sun when he goeth forth in his might. Invincible, annihilating the darkness of the night—a marvellously effective ending to one of the most magnificent lyrical poems in any language. The Rabbis based the following teaching on this verse : " Whosoever does not persecute them that persecute him, whosoever takes an offence in silence, he who does good for its own sake, he who is cheerful under his sufferings—they are the friends of God ; and of them Scripture says, " They that love Him shall be as the sun, when he goeth forth in his might."

A damsel, two damsels to every man;
To Sisera a spoil of divers colours,
A spoil of divers colours of embroidery,
Of divers colours of embroidery on both sides, on the necks of the spoil?
31. So let all thine enemies perish, O Lord:
But let them that love him be as the sun when he goeth forth in his might.
And the land had rest forty years.

Isaiah VI–VII, 6 and IX, 5, 6

For the life and message of Isaiah, see p. 458.

The Sedrah describes the Revelation on Sinai that was to turn Israel into a Holy Nation, and guide the children of men in the paths of Reverence and Righteousness. The Haftorah brings the revelation that came to Isaiah in his early manhood, when, one day in the Temple, he heard the Seraphim sing, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts, the whole earth is full of His glory." This cry out of eternity, proclaiming the ineffable holiness, the supreme majesty, and universal sovereignty of God, has been called the quintessence of all the teachings of the Prophets. It is the quintessence of the teachings of all true Religion.

1–5. The Call of Isaiah

1. in the year that king Uzziah died. After a prosperous reign of over a half-century (790–740 b.c.e). He had greatly increased the wealth and power of the kingdom of Judah (II Chron. xxvi, 1–15); and his death filled all minds with misgivings. "What will become of Judah now that Uzziah is gone"? was on the lips of all. In that year Isaiah "saw the Lord", and realised that though mortal rulers come and go, God is in His heaven. This vision marks the beginning of Isaiah's ministry.

V. YITHRO

Isaiah vi–vii, 6 and ix, 5, 6

6 1. In the year that king Uzziah died I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple. 2. Above him stood the seraphim: each one had six wings;
with twain he covered his face, and with twain
he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly.
3. And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory. 4. And the foundations of the

1. I saw the Lord. In prophetic ecstasy (Kimchi). The unseen spiritual world opens to Isaiah's inner eye; the Temple walls seem to him to expand into a Heavenly Palace; and he beholds God enthroned as the Sovereign of every being on earth or in heaven. "How God reveals Himself to His chosen messengers will scarcely ever be understood. It is the greatest of mysteries; although that He reveals Himself is the greatest of certainties" (Marti).

2. above him stood the seraphim. Better, seraphim were standing over him; i.e. angelic beings were in attendance upon Him.

covered his face. In reverence (Exod. iii, 6).

covered his feet. In humility, unworthy to meet directly the Divine glance.

he did fly. To perform the will of the Creator.

3. one cried unto another. Or, "one called to another" (AJ).

holy, holy, holy. Threefold repetition in Heb. poetry indicates the superlative degree: God is the highest Holiness. "Holy—in the highest Heaven, the place of His Divine abode; holy—upon earth, the work of His might; holy—for ever and ever unto all eternity." (Targum Jonathan).

"The Holy One of Israel," is the title of God in Isaiah's writings. In Rabbinical literature, the most frequent Name used for God is הקדוש ברוך הוא "The Holy One, blessed be He." Holy denotes the awe-ful and august ethical majesty of God (R. Otto), His moral perfectness and complete freedom from all that makes men imperfect and impure. It denotes "more than goodness, more than purity, more than righteousness: it embraces all these in their ideal completeness, but it expresses besides the recoil from everything which is their opposite" (Driver). Holiness is the essential attribute of God. Because of this holiness, inherent in Himself, His power is absolute and infinite.

the whole earth is full of his glory. All that is sublime in nature and human history is the outward expression and eradiation of the Divine Spirit.

4. foundations. Though the vision is seen with his inner eye, it is none the less actual. In the agitation of such a soul-experience, the pillars shake and the House becomes blurred before his physical eyes.

5. I am undone. God's holiness is, as it were, "a devouring fire" of all impurity. The Prophet, therefore, is overwhelmed by the sense of his own unworthiness, and of the unworthiness of his people. Like Abraham of old, he feels that he and his people and all existence are but "dust and ashes" in the presence of the Divine Holiness (R. Otto).

mine eyes have seen the King. No vision of any form or appearance is meant, but a revelation of His transcendent holiness and might.

6–13. Isaiah's Purification and Mission

6. from off the altar. Where the fire is holy; and where there is no "strange fire" (Ibn Ezra). Man must be sanctified, i.e. purged of impurity, before he can hear God.

thresholds were moved at the voice of him that cried, and the house was filled with smoke. 5.
Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone;
because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the LORD of hosts.
6. Then flew one of the seraphim unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar: 7. and he touched my mouth with it, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged.
8. And I heard the voice of the Lord, saying,
Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then I said, Here am I; send me. 9. And he said, Go, and tell this people, Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not.

"As earthly fire burns away the outward impurity, so the heavenly fire burns away the defilement of sin, first from the lips, but through them from the whole man" (Dillmann).

8. who will go for us. The plural is the so-called plural of majesty; as in Gen. I, 26.

here am I; send me. Isaiah answers the call not out of compulsion, but out of freedom. His eager response rushes from heart and lips cleansed of human impurity.

9. hear ye indeed. The great failing of the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem during the prosperous reign of Uzziah was an insensibility to God and Divine things; they did not miss God, and therefore they were not prepared to seek Him. To such a generation, the first effect of Isaiah's message of the holiness of God and His absolute sovereignty over their lives, would be to increase their blindness and obduracy. It would tend to "harden their hearts"; see on Exod. IV, 21. Most of his hearers will stubbornly reject his message; they will harden their heart; and the fuller the teachings imparted to them, the deeper will be the guilt of rejecting them. This tragic effect of his message, Isaiah is clearly shown on the very threshold of his ministry; and the "result of the prophet's ministration is described as though it were its purpose" (Skinner).

11. Lord, how long? How long shall this spiritual blindness and unwillingness to repent endure? This question is wrung from the Prophet by his compassion for his people. The answer is given in v. 11–13. The perseverance in unbelief will continue until national disasters and exile have swept away the idolatrous majority and enabled the Remnant, the indestructible germ of spiritual Israel, to flourish and blossom under God's care.

13. if there be yet a tenth. After the exile of the ten tribes of the Northern Kingdom, Judah maintained its existence for 134 years.

whose stock remaineth. As when a tree is cut down, the stump retains the vitality from which new shoots may grow, so there is a kernel of Israel that is indestructible. In the darkest periods of Israel's history, a Remnant of faithful and godly men cling to their Faith and Hope, in face of direst disaster. They form the indestructible "stock" of the Tree of Judaism.

10. Make the heart of this people fat, and make and houses without man, and the land become utterly waste, 12. and the LORD have removed men

the midst of the land.

From the vision of the future, the prophet returns to events of his day. pele-joez-el-gibbor-abi-ad-sar-shalom. i.e. Wonderful in counsel is God the mighty, the Everlasting Father, the Ruler of peace (AJ, following Rashi and Luzzatto). This is the significant name by which the child will be known; it should, therefore, remain untranslated in the Text (as in AJ); in the same way as Shear-jashub (v. 3), Immanuel (v. 14) and Maher-shalal-hash-baz (VIII, 3) are all given in the Hebrew form.

The above is a departure from the RV, which gives "Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace." This is quite impossible. No true Prophet—indeed, no true Israelite—would apply a term like "Mighty God" or "Everlasting Father" to any mortal prince. What is equally decisive against the RV rendering (which is followed by all Christian translators and, with some modifications, by many Jewish ones; e.g. Zunz, Leeser, Philippson) is the fact that the significant names of the children of the Prophets never describe the child, but in each case embody some religious message to the Prophet's contemporaries. Thus, Shear-jashub proclaimed that a faithful Remnant would survive the successive calamities that would befall Israel. This is true of all the

6. the throne of David. The kingdom of Israel, devastated by the Assyrians in the days of Ahaz, fell into the hands of Hezekiah by reason of the weakening of Assyria in his days. For the first time since the days of Solomon, the national unity was reestablished, and Hezekiah was the first ruler once more to occupy the throne of David; hence the Prophet speaks of the increase of his government.

MISHPATIM.

JEREMIAH XXXIV, 8–22 AND XXXIII, 25, 26

For the life and teachings of Jeremiah, see introduction to the Haftorah, p. 468.

The Sedrah opens with the enactment to free a Hebrew bondmen after six years' service. The Haftorah records a grave breach of this regulation at a critical hour of Israel's history. In the face of the disaster threatening the Nation and Holy City at the hands of the Babylonian besiegers, the last king of Judah had induced the ruling classes to bind themselves by oath to release their slaves, so that no Jew should any longer be a bondman to a fellow-Jew. They did so; but subsequently, when the danger had passed, they impiously broke their oath, and forced their emancipated brethren back into bondage. The king was too weak to restrain the nobles from adding perjury to inhumanity—both unpardonable sins. Jeremiah is outraged at this base conduct, and announces that the enemy would soon return; when fire, war, hunger and pestilence, would rage in the city.

VI. MISHPATIM

34 8. The word that came unto Jeremiah from the Lord, after that the king Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people which were at Jerusalem, to proclaim liberty unto them; 9. that every man should let his manservant, and every man his maidservant, being an Hebrew or an Hebrewess, go free; that none should serve himself of them, to wit, of a Jew his brother:
10. and all the princes and all the people obeyed, which had entered into the covenant, that every one should let his manservant, and every one his maidservant, go free, that none should serve themselves of them any more; they obeyed, and let them go: 11. but afterwards they turned, and caused the servants and the handmaids, whom they had let go free, to return, and brought them into subjection for servants and for hand-

10. princes . . . people obeyed. Impending danger from the besieging army of Nebuchadnezzar quickened their conscience into a course of action that might render them more worthy of deliverance; or because, the slaves if freed, would take part more whole-heartedly in the defence of the beleagured city (Streane).

11. afterwards they turned. They regretted their act of generosity, as soon as they thought the danger of a siege had passed.

14. at the end of seven years . . . and hath served thee six years. In English we would say, "at the end of six years' service" (Moffatt), in view of the clear statement of the second clause. A similar Heb. idiom calls the jubilee the fiftieth year, though in strictness it is the forty-ninth; and says "And on the seventh day God finished his work" (Gen. II, 2). Cf. the French "quinze jours" for the English "fourteen days"; or the German "nach acht Tagen" for the English "in a week's time."

13. Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel: I made a covenant with your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage, saying, 14. At the end of seven years ye shall let go every man his brother that is an Hebrew, which hath been sold unto thee, and hath served thee six years, thou shalt let him go free from thee: but your fathers hearkened not unto me, neither inclined their ear. 15. And ye were now turned, and had done that which is right in mine eyes, in proclaiming liberty every man to his neighbour; and ye had made a covenant before me in the house which is called by my name: 16. but ye turned and profaned my name, and caused every man his servant, and every man his handmaid, whom ye had let go free at their pleasure, to return; and ye brought them into subjection, to be unto you for servants and for handmaids. 17. Therefore thus saith the LORD: Ye have not hearkened unto me, to proclaim liberty, every man to his brother, and every man to his neighbour: behold, I proclaim unto you a liberty, saith the LORD, to the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine; and I will make you to be tossed to and fro among all the

TERUMAH

I Kings V, 26–VI, 13

The Sedrah describes the Tabernacle in the wilderness. This is paralleled in the Haftorah by the description of the Temple of Solomon at Jerusalem.

It was King David's yearning desire to build a Temple unto God—a central Sanctuary that was to be the symbol of Israel's obedience to God's Law, of Israel's unity and Israel's peace. He was not destined to see his life-dream realised; but Solomon his son makes its fulfilment almost the first care of his reign.

THE PREPARATION FOR THE WORK

27. a levy. Heb. mas. the same word as in Exod. I, 11, and denoting a body of men set to forced labour for a definite time. "It was perhaps from his Egyptian father-in-law that Solomon, to his own cost, learnt the secret of forced labour. In their Egyptian bondage the forefathers of Israel had been fatally familiar with the ugly word mas, the labour wrung from them by hard task-masters" (Farrar). See I Sam. VIII, 11–18. Discontent with this practice eventually rent Solomon's kingdom in twain. In contrast to this forced labour, the Tabernacle of old was the result of the free-will offerings of the entire People.

Chapter VI. A General Description of the Temple

The Temple buildings stood within a large court in which the worshippers could assemble. The Temple proper was a rectangular hall 60 by 20 by 30 cubits. Its entrance, in shape of a porch, was ten cubits long; and as it extended over the whole front, it was 20 cubits wide. On the three sides of the House were built a number of chambers in three stories. Within, the building was divided into two parts;

score and ten thousand that bare burdens, and fourscore thousand that were hewers in the mountains; 30. besides Solomon's chief officers that were over the work, three thousand and three hundred, which bare rule over the people that wrought in the work. 31. And the king commanded, and they hewed out great stones, costly stones, to lay the foundation of the house with wrought stone. 32. And Solomon's builders and Hiram's builders and the Gebalites did fashion them, and prepared the timber and the stones to build the house.
6 1. And it came to pass in the four hundred and eightieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the fourth year of Solomon's reign over Israel, in the month Ziv, which is the second month, that he began to build the house of the LORD. 2. And the house which king Solomon built for the LORD, the length thereof was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits. 3. And the porch before the temple of the house, twenty cubits was the length thereof, according to the breadth of the house; and ten cubits was the breadth thereof before the house. 4. And for the house he

the beams should not have hold in the walls. Thus the walls were not pierced in order to give support to the beams, and these were not fixed into the actual building of the Temple.

neither hammer . . . heard in the house. The Temple rose silently and peacefully. Jewish Legend wove its magic web around this striking verse. If neither hammer nor axe was used in the building of the House, how then were the stones fitted together? the people asked. Solomon in his wisdom, was the answer, had come into possession of a wonderful worm, one of the marvels of creation, the Shamir, which, if placed upon the hardest stones, would instantly and noiselessly cleave them as desired. The great moral truth enshrined in this verse and legend is this : a Temple of the Lord cannot be where there is discord, violence or revolt ; its ramparts must arise without noise of axe or hammer. This unfailing test of a true House of Worship is not met by many so-called Jewish "Temples", whose walls too often resound with loud wielding of axe and hammer against ideals and institutions vital to Judaism.

about: 6. the nethermost story was five cubits broad, and the middle was six cubits broad, and the third was seven cubits broad: for on the outside he made rebatements in the wall of the house round about, that the beams should not have hold in the walls of the house. 7. And the house, when it was in building, was built of stone made ready at the quarry: and there was neither hammer nor axe nor any tool of iron heard in the house, while it was in building.
8. The door for the middle side-chambers was in the right side of the house: and they went up by winding stairs into the middle chambers, and out of the middle into the third. 9. So he built the house, and finished it; and he covered the house with beams and planks of cedar. 10. And he built the stories against all the house, each five cubits high: and they rested on the house

11. And the word of the LORD came to Solomon, saying, 12. Concerning this house which thou art
in building, if thou wilt walk in my statutes, and execute my judgements, and keep all my commandments to walk in them; then will I establish my word with thee, which I spake unto David thy father. 13. And I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will not forsake
my people Israel.

TETZAVEH

Ezekiel XLIII, 10–27

The Sedrah concludes with a description of the altar of incense. The Haftorah describes the altar of burnt-offering in the restored Temple of Ezekiel's vision, and its consecration. For Ezekiel's life and message, see Genesis, p. 508–9, and the introductory remarks to Haftorahs Va-ayra, Parah and Hachodesh in this volume, p. 476, 596 and 602.

The last portion of the Book of Ezekiel, chaps. XL–XLVIII, is a Vision of the New Jerusalem that is to arise when the Exile is over. In his vision the Prophet is in Palestine on Mount Zion, and he sees the Temple building arising and extending like a city. No detail is too small to be delineated with passionate care. Chapter XLIII describes God's return to the Temple and His directions as to the construction and dedication of the altar of burnt-offering. This new Temple was also to symbolise and embody in concrete form the teachings of Holiness and Purity preached by the Prophet in the preceding 39 chapters of his book. He, therefore, lays greatest stress on correctness of Temple ritual and service. In this way alone can the aberrations and idolatries be prevented that so often disgraced the destroyed Temple. "For Ezekiel the Law is the means of preserving religious freedom from contamination; without it, the prophetic ideas would hardly have survived. The real hope of the future for Ezekiel lies in perfect and willing obedience to the Law" (Lofthouse).

13–17. The Altar of Burnt-Offering

The altar was to have a base, and upon it three square slabs of stone, one above the other, each decreasing in length, but increasing in thickness. The height of the altar, excluding the horns, would be 11 cubits (about 20 feet), and the top of the altar was to be reached by stairs on the east side (v. 17).

13. the cubit is a cubit and an handbreadth. i.e. one handbreadth longer than the common cubit, (thus seven handbreadths in all). This larger cubit was probably the standard of measurement of Solomon's Temple.

13. And these are the measures of the altar by cubits: (the cubit is a cubit and an handbreadth:) the bottom shall be a cubit, and the breadth a cubit, and the border thereof by the edge thereof round about a span: and this shall be the base of the altar. 14. And from the bottom upon the ground to the lower settle shall be two cubits, and the breadth one cubit; and from the lesser settle to the greater settle shall be four cubits, and the breadth a cubit. 15. And the upper altar shall be four cubits; and from the altar hearth and upward there shall be four horns. 16. And the altar hearth shall be twelve cubits long by twelve broad, square in the four sides thereof. 17. And the settle shall be fourteen cubits long by fourteen broad in the four sides thereof; and the border about it shall be half a cubit; and the bottom thereof shall be a cubit about; and the steps thereof shall look towards the east.

KI THISSA

I Kings XVIII, 1–39

In the Sedrah, the people worship the Golden Calf. In the Haftorah, centuries later, their descendants in the time of King Ahab are wavering between God and Baal. Ahab was a generous ruler, but weak-willed and dominated by his Phoenician wife, who pursued the prophets with murderous cruelty. It was high treason to proclaim the God of Israel. Against this dark setting, the figure of Elijah stands out in all its greatness. He meets and confronts the king and queen, and fearlessly pronounces the doom that will follow upon their apostasy and their outrage of justice. On Mt. Carmel, though he is alone and defenceless, his titanic personality overawes the multitude at that historic scene. He brings the people back to God in an overwhelming act of surrender. Their confession : Adonay, hu ha-elohim, " The Lord, He is God," has become, alongside the declaration of the Unity, Israel's watchword. Elijah, the timeless and deathless Prophet, is the champion of Purity of Worship and Justice to fellow-man. He is a type of Israel.

18 1. And it came to pass after many days, that the word of the LORD came to Elijah, in the third year, saying, Go, shew thyself unto Ahab;
and I will send rain upon the earth. 2. And Elijah went to shew himself unto Ahab. And the famine was sore in Samaria. 3. And Ahab called Obadiah, which was over the household.
(Now Obadiah feared the LORD greatly: 4. for it was so, when Jezebel cut off the prophets of the LORD, that Obadiah took an hundred prophets, and hid them by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water.) 5. And Ahab said unto Obadiah, Go through the land, unto all the fountains of water, and unto all the brooks:

32. he built an altar. To build an altar and offer sacrifices outside the Temple Mount, after the central Sanctuary at Jerusalem had been erected, was an action contrary to the Torah; but was permitted as an exceptional measure to meet an exceptional situation—horaath shaah.

36. let it be known . . . . at thy word. That all Elijah's actions, even his prophecy of drought, were in accordance with the will of God. His prayer is that the people shall recognise this, and be brought back to faith in God alone.

39. the LORD, he is God. Not Baal, or any other. These words form the conclusion of the Day of Atonement Service, and are the last words uttered by the dying Israelite.

The contest on Mt. Carmel is typical of every conflict

LORD that was thrown down. 31. And Elijah took twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the LORD came, saying, Israel shall be thy name. 32. And with the stones he built an altar in the name of the LORD; and he made a trench about the altar, as great as would contain two measures of seed. 33. And he put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid it on the wood. And he said, Fill four barrels with water, and pour it on the burnt offering, and on the wood. 34. And he said, Do it the second time; and they did it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time; and they did it the third time. 35. And the water ran about the altar; and he filled the trench also with water. 36. And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening oblation, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, O LORD, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word. 37. Hear me, O LORD, hear me, that this people may know that thou, LORD, art God, and that thou didst turn their heart back again. 38. Then the fire of the LORD fell, and consumed the burnt offering, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench. 39. And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces: and they said, The LORD, he is God; the LORD, he is God.

7 40. And Hiram made the lavers, and the shovels,
and the basons. So Hiram made an end of doing
all the work that he wrought for king Solomon
in the house of the LORD: 41. the two pillars, and
the two bowls of the chapiters that were on the top of the pillars; and the two networks to
cover the two bowls of the chapiters that were
on the top of the pillars; 42. and the four hundred
pomegranates for the two networks; two rows
of pomegranates for each network, to cover the
two bowls of the chapiters that were upon the pillars; 43. and the ten bases, and the ten lavers on
the bases; 44. and the one sea, and the twelve
oxen under the sea; 45. and the pots, and the
shovels, and the basons; even all these vessels,
which Hiram made for king Solomon, in the house of the LORD, were of burnished brass. 46. In under Solomon's supervision, and the consecrated gifts bequeathed by his father David.

40. Hiram. A famous brass worker, the son of a Tyrian father, who was also a skilled artist, and an Israelitish mother; see note on v. 14, p. 552.

44. and the one sea. An enormous circular vessel ten cubits (about 18 feet) in diameter and five cubits (about 9 feet) in depth. It was richly decorated, and was supported on the backs of twelve brazen oxen, three looking towards each of the cardinal points of the compass. See v. 23–26 of this chapter, p. 555.

45. in the house of the LORD. For use in the house of the Lord.

between Succoth and Zarethan. Succoth was on the other, the east side of the river, in Gad. Zarethan was on the west side of Jordan, about 24 miles north of the Dead Sea.

47. The amount of brass used was so great that no attempt was made to keep an account of it.

48. the golden altar. The altar of incense.

49. the flowers. The flower-like ornaments of the candlesticks.

To appreciate the significance of the Temple in the life of ancient Israel, we must continue reading the next chapter of the First Book of Kings, Solomon's Prayer of Dedication (set aside as the Haftorah for the first and eighth days of Tabernacles).

The Temple was the forum, the fortress, the " university," as well as the Central Sanctuary, of Israel. The People loved it; the pomp and ceremony, the music and song of the Levites, the ministrations of the priests, the high priest as he stood and blessed the prostrate worshippers amid profound silence on the Atonement Day. As for the choicer spirits, their passionate devotion found expression in words like those of the Psalmist :

the Plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in
the clay ground between Succoth and Zarethan.
47. And Solomon left all the vessels unweighed, because they were exceeding many : the weight of the brass could not be found out. 48. And Solomon made all the vessels that were in the house of the LORD : the golden altar, and the table whereupon the shewbread was, of gold ; 49. and the candlesticks, five on the right side, and five on the left, before the oracle, of pure gold ; and the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs, of gold ;
50. and the cups, and the snuffers, and the basons,
and the spoons, and the firepans, of pure gold ;
and the hinges, both for the doors of the inner house, the most holy place, and for the doors of the house, to wit, of the temple, of gold.

"How lovely are thy tabernacles,
O LORD of Hosts !
"My soul longeth, yea, fainteth for the courts of the LORD . . . .
"Blessed are they that dwell in thy house."

The destruction of the Sanctuary could not drown Israel's undying love of its "House of Holiness." Throughout the ages down to this day, the sole relic of its ancient glory—the so-called Wailing Wall—has remained for millions of Jews the most sacred memento of their national sanctities, a "Holy Place" from which the Shechinah has never departed.

VAYYAKHEL (FOR SEPHARDIM)

I KINGS VII, 13–26

The Sedrah continues the description of the skilled work lavished on the Tabernacle. Corresponding to this, the Haftorah describes the artistry of Hiram of Tyre on the pillars and the brass ornamental work in King Solomon's Temple.

13. Solomon sent. To the King of Tyre, for permission for his famous artist in brass and precious metals, to assist in the work for the Temple.

14. of Naphtali. In II Chron. XI, 14, his mother is called a daughter of Dan; and, according to Jewish tradition the father and not the mother (as might appear from the text) was of the tribe of Naphtali.

X B. VAYYAKHEL—For Sephardim

I Kings vii, 13–26

7 13. And king Solomon sent and fetched Hiram out of Tyre. 14. He was the son of a widow woman of the tribe of Naphtali, and his father was a man of Tyre, a worker in brass; and he was filled with wisdom and understanding and cunning, to work all works in brass. And he came to king Solomon, and wrought all his work. 15. For he fashioned the two pillars of brass, of eighteen cubits high apiece: and a line of twelve cubits compassed either of them about. 16. And he made two chapiters of molten brass, to set upon the tops of the pillars: the height of the one chapiter was five cubits, and the height of the other chapiter was five cubits.
17. There were nets of checker work, and wreaths of chain work, for the chapiters which were upon the top of the pillars; seven for the one chapiter, and seven for the other chapiter. 18.
So he made the pillars; and there were two rows

17. nets . . . chain work. The capitals were decorated with tracery.

18. two rows. Of pomegranates hung in festoons.

19. And the chapiters that were upon the top of the pillars in the porch were of lily work, four upon the two pillars, close by the belly which was beside the network: and the pomegranates were two hundred, in rows round about upon the other chapiter. 21. And he set up the pillars at the porch of the temple: and he set up the right pillar, and called the name thereof Jachin:

and he set up the left pillar, and called the name thereof Boaz. 22. And upon the top of the pillars was lily work: so was the work of the pillars finished. 23. And he made the molten sea of ten cubits from brim to brim, round in compass, and the height thereof was five cubits:
and a line of thirty cubits compassed it round about. 24. And under the brim of it round about there were knops which did compass it, for ten cubits, compassing the sea round about: the knops were in two rows, cast when it was cast.
25. It stood upon twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east: and the sea was set upon them above, and all their hinder parts were inward. 26. And it was an handbreadth thick; and the brim thereof was wrought like the brim of a cup, like the flower of a lily: it held two thousand baths.

And they brought up the ark of the LORD, and the tent of meeting, and all the holy vessels that were in the Tent; even these did the priests and the Levites bring up. 5. And king Solomon and all the congregation of Israel, that were assembled unto him, were with him before the ark, sacrificing sheep and oxen, that could not be told nor numbered for multitude. 6. And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto its place, into the oracle of the house, to the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubim. 7. For the cherubim spread forth their wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubim covered the ark and the staves thereof above. 8. And the staves were so long that the ends of the staves were seen from the holy place before the oracle; but they were not seen without: and there they are, unto this day. 9. There was nothing in the ark save the two tables of stone which Moses put there at Horeb, when the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt. 10. And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, that the cloud filled the house of the LORD, 11. so that the priests could not stand to minister by reason of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD filled the house of the LORD.

12. Then spake Solomon, The LORD hath said that he would dwell in the thick darkness. 13. I

Now it was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the LORD, the God of Israel. 18. But the LORD said unto David my father, Whereas it was in thine heart to build an house for my name, thou didst well that it was in thine heart: 19. nevertheless thou shalt not build the house; but thy son that shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house for my name. 20. MACHAR CHODESH (EVE OF NEW MOON)

I Samuel XX, 18–42

There is hardly a more beautiful figure in history than Jonathan. Truly he was "a very perfect knight," the very essence of chivalry. To the Rabbis, he stands for all time as the type of disinterested, self-denying friendship (Ethics of the Fathers, v, 17). His greatness was manifested in the very clash of duty between his loyalty to his father and his love of David. Jonathan's was a task of rare difficulty, to combine duty to his father with devotion to his friend. Yet he fails in neither. To Saul he was an affectionate son and faithful officer; and "no cloud of envy intercepted his admiration of the great warrior, the sweet singer of Israel, who hereafter was to supersede him" (Jowett). It is fortunate that the opening incident of the chapter, occurring on a Machar Chodesh—the eve of the New Moon, enables the story of Jonathan's friendship and self-abnegatior to be included among the Lessons from the Prophets.

Saul, half-crazed by jealousy of David's popularity and growing hold on the people, seeks to destroy him. David places himself in the power of Jonathan, who at first

20 Then Jonathan said unto him, To-morrow is the new moon: and thou shalt be missed, because thy seat will be empty. 19. And when thou has stayed three days, thou shalt go down quickly,
and come to the place where thou didst hide thyself when the business was in hand, and shalt remain by the stone Ezel. 20. And I will shoot three arrows on the side thereof, as though I shot at a mark. 21. And, behold, I will send the lad, saying, Go, find the arrows. If I say unto the lad, Behold, the arrows are on this side of thee: take them, and come; for there is peace to thee and no hurt, as the LORD liveth. 22. But if I say thus unto the boy, Behold, the arrows are beyond thee: go thy way; for the LORD hath sent thee away. 23. And as touching the matter which thou and I have spoken of, behold, the LORD is between thee and me for ever.

the new moon was come, the king sat him down to eat meat. 25. And the king sat upon his seat, as at other times, even upon the seat by the wall; and Jonathan stood up, and Abner sat by Saul's side: but David's place was empty. 26. Nevertheless Saul spake not any thing that day: for he thought, Something hath befallen him, he is not clean; surely he is not clean. 27. And it came to pass on the morrow after the new moon, which was the second day, that David's place was empty: and Saul said unto Jonathan his son, Wherefore cometh not the son of Jesse to meat, neither yesterday, nor to-day? 28. And Jonathan answered Saul, David earnestly asked leave of me to go to Beth-lehem: 29. and he said, Let me go, I pray thee; for our family hath a sacrifice in the city; and my brother, he hath commanded me to be there: and now, if I have found favour in thine eyes, let me get away, I pray thee, and see my brethren. Therefore he is not come unto the king's table. 30. Then Saul's anger was kindled against Jonathan, and he said unto him, Thou son of a perverse rebellious woman, do not I know that thou hast chosen the son of Jesse to thine own shame, and unto the shame of thy mother's nakedness? 31. For as long as the son of Jesse liveth upon the ground, thou shalt not be stablished, nor thy kingdom. Wherefore now send and fetch him unto me, for he shall surely die. 32. And Jonathan answered Saul his father, and said unto him, Wherefore should he be put to death? what hath he done?

Saul's violence soon assumes a murderous fury—85 priests are slain for having given bread to the hungry fugitive David. If Jonathan had, at the moment of farewell, only thought of providing his friend with a few loaves of bread, that massacre might have been averted (Talmud). David and Jonathan were never to meet again in the royal home. When the

David exceeded. 42. And Jonathan said to David,

tragic end came, and both Saul and Jonathan died for their people, David lamented them in the most beautiful elegy in literature:

> Thy glory, O Israel, is slain upon thy high places!
> How are the mighty fallen! . . . .
> Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives,
> And in their death they were not divided;
> They were swifter than eagles,
> They were stronger than lions.
> Ye daughters of Israel, weep over Saul,
> Who clothed you in scarlet delicately,
> Who put ornaments of gold upon your apparel.
> How are the mighty fallen in the midst of the battle!
> O, Jonathan, slain upon thy high places,
> I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan:
> Very pleasant hast thou been unto me:
> Thy love to me was wonderful,
> Passing the love of women.
> How are the mighty fallen,
> And the weapons of war perished!

When, to the example of David and Jonathan, we add the deep friendship of two women, Ruth and Naomi: ("Whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me and more also, if aught but death part thee and me,") we realise that the Bible is also the supreme Book of Friendship.

SABBATH AND NEW MOON

ISAIAH, LXVI

The Second Temple is nearing completion, and the Prophet corrects false ideas concerning the Temple building and the worship therein. He contrasts the faithful Israelites with the apostates, given to idolatrous practices, and doomed to extinction. The chapter concludes with the renewed assurance of the triumph of the Faithful Remnant, and the universal worship of the one God. Verse 23 that enshrines this hope in the phrase, "From one New Moon to another, and from one Sabbath to another," makes the section an appropriate Haftorah for this Sabbath.

1. what manner of house. God's presence cannot be limited to one spot. ("Behold heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain Thee; how much less this house that I have builded!" I Kings VIII, 27). The purpose of the Temple was to lead men to reverence and uprightness, and the sacrifices were to help the worshipper expel evil thoughts and desires from his heart, and burn them as burnt offerings on the altar (Kimchi). If these conditions did not exist, the Temple was not a house fit for God's glory.

2. all these things. i.e. heaven and earth came into existence at the word of God (Abarbanel).

the existence of a humble and sincere piety among the worshippers who make their will subservient to God ("that trembleth at My word").

3. The lit. translation of the first part of this verse is: "The slaughterer of an ox, a slayer of a man; the sacrificer of the sheep, a breaker of a dog's neck; the offerer of an oblation—swines' blood, &c." This is often explained to mean that he who offers the statutory sacrifices but is not animated by a sincere spirit is no better than he who takes a leading part in some horrible and unholy cult involving human sacrifices. No Prophet, however, would be guilty of such an exaggeration. More probably, the Prophet has in mind those who combined outward observance of Jewish ceremonial with the destestable rites of some debased fetish-worship which existed among those left in Israel after the Assyrian conquest (II Kings, xvii, 33f). There is no reason, however, to assume that these heathen worshippers indulged, or were permitted by the Persian authorities to indulge, in human sacrifices. The words מכה איש only mean "striketh a man" (Ibn Ezra), and not "slayeth a man." The Heb. root of מכה is used for "inflicting stripes," and may therefore here refer to sacred flagellations or scourgings which, as is well known, formed part of many pagan secret cults. He that sacrificeth an ox at God's Temple, complains our Prophet, is at the same time acting as flagellator or sacred scourger at heathen mystery worship!

he that breaketh a dog's neck; he that offereth
a meal offering, as he that offereth swine's blood;
he that burneth frankincense, as he that blesseth
an idol: yea, they have chosen their own ways,
and their soul delighteth in their abominations;
4. I also will choose their mockings, and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called,
none did answer; when I spake, they did not
hear: but they did that which was evil in mine
eyes, and chose that wherein I delighted not.
5. Hear the word of the LORD, ye that tremble
at his word: Your brethren that hate you, that
cast you out for my name's sake, have said, Let
the LORD be glorified, that we may see your joy; but they shall be ashamed. 6. A voice of tumult from the city, a voice from the temple,

let the LORD be glorified . . joy. These are the taunting words of the irreligious and insolent opponents.

6. a voice of tumult. The Prophet already seems to hear the sounds of the coming judgment against the mockers.

v. 8. כצ״ל

7–14. The Prophet again breaks off with words of comfort and hope to the faithful community. Though ridiculed by their adversaries, great increase of population (v. 7), peace and prosperity, (v. 12) shall come, and the enemy be destroyed.

7. Zion is the mother, and the verse describes the swift increase in her population through the re-inforcement of faithful children from all parts.

8. shall a land be born in one day. Emphasises the rapidity of this remarkable increase. It will seem as if Zion were regenerated in one day.

9. The work of Restoration and salvation shall be complete. God will not leave it unfinished.

10. A call to the children restored, and those still in Exile, to rejoice with Jerusalem.

all ye that mourn over her. All those in Exile, and those who since the Return have been depressed at the slow realisation of their hopes in Zion.

11. The figure of Zion as Mother is retained.

12. Peace and prosperity shall stream into Zion, like a river that overflows its banks.

glory. Wealth.

a voice of the LORD that rendereth recompense
to his enemies. 7. Before she travailed, she brought forth; before her pain came, she was delivered of a man child. 8. Who hath heard
such a thing? who hath seen such things? Shall
a land be born in one day? shall a nation be brought forth at once? for as soon as Zion
travailed, she brought forth her children. 9. Shall
I bring to the birth, and not cause to bring forth?
saith the LORD: shall I that cause to bring forth
shut the womb? saith thy God.

10. Rejoice ye with Jerusalem, and be glad
for her, all ye that love her: rejoice for joy with
her, all ye that mourn over her: 11. that ye may
suck and be satisfied with the breasts of her
consolations; that ye may milk out, and be
delighted with the abundance of her glory. 12.
For thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will extend
peace to her like a river, and the glory of the
nations like an overflowing stream, and ye shall
suck thereof; ye shall be borne upon the side,
and shall be dandled upon the knees. 13. As
one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you; and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem.
14. And ye shall see it, and your heart shall

shall be borne upon the side. Continues the figure of the nursling in the preceding verse. The nations become their foster-mothers.

13. as one whom his mother comforteth. God's is not only a Father's love. "As the grown man, coming back with wounds and weariness upon him to be comforted of his mother" (G. A. Smith), finds there the comfort he seeks, so will God comfort the men of Zion. God is our Mother.

The reference therefore is to an asherah, a grove of sacred trees or poles set up near an altar for idol-worship in the garden. If the word is read as written, אחד, the reference would be to a priest who led the company of worshippers.

21. and of them also will I take for priests and Levites Of the converted Gentiles and the Jews who are brought back by them, I will take to assist the priests and Levites in their service (Kimchi). This thought is quite in accordance with the universalist spirit in Isaiah.

22 and 23. In this new (and better) order of things, the race and influence of Israel will continue for ever, leading to the fulfilment of Israel's mission, i.e. the universal worship of the One God, with Jerusalem as the devotional capital of mankind.

24. A survey again of the conflict against evil, and its final defeat, through which the above great goal is reached. Delitzsch points out that, in effect, the thought is the same as in the concluding sentence of other sections of the second half of Isaiah—" there is no peace unto the wicked " (XLVIII, 22, and LVII, 21). Under the figure of the worm that dieth not, and the fire that is not quenched, we have here a symbolical representation of the lasting remorse that, on the

horses, and in chariots, and in litters, and upon
mules, and upon swift beasts, to my holy mountain
Jerusalem, saith the LORD, as the children of Israel
bring their offering in a clean vessel into the house of the LORD. 21. And of them also will I take for priests and for Levites, saith the LORD.
22. For as the new heavens and the new earth,
which I will make, shall remain before me, saith
the LORD, so shall your seed and your name
remain. 23. And it shall come to pass, that from
one new moon to another, and from one sabbath
to another, shall all flesh come to worship before
me, saith the LORD. 24. And they shall go forth,
and look upon the carcases of the men that have
transgressed against me: for their worm shall not
die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they
shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.

And it shall come to pass that from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another, shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the LORD.

realisation of their wickedness, troubles the souls of evil-doers. The knowledge of this, which will be clear to all ("And they shall go forth and look"), will become a restraining moral influence. It will be a factor in the attainment of the great consummation (the universal worship of the one true God) described in the previous verse.

they shall go forth. The worshippers.

According to ancient Jewish custom, v. 23 is read a second time after v. 24, so as to conclude the book (of which this is the last chapter) with words of comfort and encouragement. There is a similar direction in regard to concluding Malachi, Lamentations and Ecclesiastes. In each case, the last verse but one is reprinted in the Heb. text, and repeated during the reading in the Synagogue.

SHEKALIM

II Kings XI, 17–XII, 17

The historical background of the Haftorah is of deep nterest. In its opening sentences, it gives us the concluding cenes of the only revolution in the history of the Kingdom of Judah during the 347 years of its existence. And that evolution was directed against a foreign princess who had ttempted to exterminate the native dynasty of the House of David.

Athaliah, daughter of Ahab, king of Israel, had married ehoram, king of Judah, and had used her influence to oster the worship of Baal in Judah. On the death of her usband, she was the queen-mother—a position which arried great power with it. But when her son died at the ands of Jehu, she would have had to yield her position o her son's widow; and, therefore, this true daughter of ezebel, proceeded to murder all her grandchildren, and to scend the throne of Judah herself. Only one little grand-on was saved, the infant Jehoash, or Joash, who was con-ealed by an aunt, married to Jehoiada the High Priest. or six years Athaliah, that inhuman woman, usurped the hrone in Jerusalem. In the seventh year, the High Priest ehoiada brought forward young Joash from his hiding lace, and the royal bodyguard and the representatives f the nation greeted the legitimate ruler with wild en-

11 17. And Jehoiada made a covenant between the LORD and the king and the people, that they should be the LORD's people; between the king also and the people. 18. And all the people of the land went to the house of Baal, and brake it down; his altars and his images brake they in pieces thoroughly, and slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars. And the priest appointed officers over the house of the LORD. 19. And he

17. and Jehoiada made a covenant. This joyous renewal of the covenant was a fitting sequel to the end of the unholy reign of Athaliah, and her Phoenician idolatry.

Jehoiada. True type of High Priest and religious leader, whose advice and guidance during his life-time were followed by king Jehoash with blessed results to the nation. When he died at an advanced age, he was given signal honour by burial in the city of David "among the kings, because he had done good in Israel" (II Chron. XXIV, 16).

18. all the people of the land. This cannot be the correct translation of kol am ha-aretz. It cannot mean a mob of country-folk; for how could such a mob have become entrenched within the Temple citadel, without the knowledge of a vigorous ruler like Athaliah. Neither can it mean the city rabble; otherwise v. 20 ("and the city was quiet") would be meaningless. Besides, the city rabble would be spoken of as anshey ha-ir. All difficulties disappear if we follow Justice Sulzberger's explanation (see Genesis, 192) of am ha-aretz as the National Council. Jehoiada had won over the members of that body, as well as the military chiefs, before he attempted the overthrow of Athaliah,

5-17. REPAIR OF THE TEMPLE.

The Additional Portion for Sabbath Shekalim, Exod. xxx, 11–16, is a reminder of the half-shekel given by each individual to the services of the Tabernacle. Similarly, in the Haftorah the people bring their offerings in money to repair the breaches in the Temple. Although the Temple is no more, this special Sabbath continues to stress the thought that each member of the community is under the obligation to give his measure of support to the stability of the Tabernacle and the perpetuation of his Religion.

The priests were deflected from their rightful work, and sent out as tax-collectors to gather in the money; see II Chron. xxiv, 5: "And he gathered together the priests and the Levites, and said to them, Go out unto the cities of Judah, and gather of all Israel money to repair the house of your God from year to year, and see that ye hasten the matter."

The King had unworthy suspicions of them, and introduced a new system (Kimchi).

9. the priests consented. They were pleased to be relieved of a responsibility which should not have been imposed on them (Ralbag).

10. a chest. A collecting box for the money brought by the people for the repairs; the money came in abundantly.

12. that did the work. The headmen or the master workmen, responsible for the work.

14. but there were not made . . cups of silver. At the time when the repairs were in hand, and when it did not seem that there would be sufficient money for the renewal of the sacred vessels. Subsequently when the repairs were finished there was found to be a surplus, which, according to II Chron. XXIV, 12, was used for supplying new vessels for the Temple service (Kimchi).

was so, when they saw that there was much money in the chest, that the king's scribe and the high priest came up, and they put up in bags and told the money that was found in the house of the LORD. 12. And they gave the money that was weighed out into the hands of them that did the work, that had the oversight of the house of the LORD: and they paid it out to the carpenters and the builders, that wrought upon the house of the LORD. 13. and to the masons

made for the house of the LORD cups of silver,
snuffers, basons, trumpets, any vessels of gold,
or vessels of silver, of the money that was brought into the house of the LORD: 15. for they gave that to them that did the work, and repaired therewith the house of the LORD. 16.
Moreover they reckoned not with the men, into whose hand they delivered the money to give to them that did the work: for they dealt faithfully.
17. The money for the guilt offerings, and the money for the sin offerings, was not brought into the house of the LORD: it was the priests'.

ZACHOR

I Samuel XV, 1–34

The Additional Reading recalls how Amalek ruthlessly attacked the defenceless and the weak of the Israelites in the wilderness, "and he feared not God." The Amalekites showed their implacable enmity not only at Rephidim, but also opposed Israel's entrance into the Holy Land. It was an hereditary hatred; they were the allies of the Midianites when these harried the Israelites in the days of the Judges. The feud between the tribes of Israel and this untameable race of savages was thus of long duration. The command for exterminating them with which the Haftorah opens, may have been given in consequence of their raids having become more numerous and sanguinary under their present king; v. 33. It was clear to Samuel that the struggle with these ancient and ever-hostile opponents was a matter of life and death to Israel, a struggle which he regarded as a holy war.

The moral difficulty in connection with this command is very real. It seems to be in violent contrast to the Divine law which forbids vengeance, private vengeance. How-

15 1. And Samuel said unto Saul, the Lord sent me to anoint thee to be king over his people, over Israel: now therefore hearken thou unto the voice of the words of the Lord.

2. Thus saith the Lord of hosts, I have marked that which Amalek did to Israel, how he set himself against him in the way, when he came up out of Egypt. 3. Now go and smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not; but slay both man and woman,
infant and suckling, ox and sheep, camel and ass.
4. And Saul summoned the people, and num-ever, the truest mercy sometimes lies in the dispensation of sternest justice, and Israel here was the instrument of Divine Retribution.

Sabbath Zachor precedes the Festival of Purim, the story of which is recorded in the Book of Esther. Haman, the arch-enemy of the Jews, was a descendant of Agag, the Amalekite king in the Haftorah. Sabbath Zachor reminds us of their godlessness and inhumanity. Its charge to the generations in Israel is to blot out from the human heart the cruel, cowardly Amalek spirit, and to heal the wounds caused by "man's inhumanity to man."

1. to be king over his people. Not thy (Saul's) people. God's people, to be ruled according to the Divine word and will.

2. I have marked. "I remember" (AJ).

3. utterly destroy. lit. "ban" or "devote." They were not to be taken as spoil. The Israelites were to derive no material profit from this punitive war.

footmen, and ten thousand men of Judah. 5. And Saul came to the city of Amalek, and laid wait
in the valley. 6. And Saul said unto the Kenites, Go, depart, get you down from among the Amalekites, lest I destroy you with them: for ye shewed kindness to all the children of Israel, when they came up out of Egypt. So the Kenites departed from among the Amalekites. 7. And Saul smote the Amalekites, from Havilah as thou goest to Shur, that is before Egypt. 8. And he took Agag the king of the Amalekites alive, and utterly destroyed all the people with the edge of the sword. 9. But Saul and the people spared Agag, and the best of the sheep, and of the oxen, and of the fatlings, and the lambs, and all that was good, and would not utterly destroy them: but every thing that was vile and

10. Then came the word of the LORD unto Samuel saying, 11. It repenteth me that I have set up Saul to be king: for he is turned back from following me, and hath not performed my commandments. And Samuel was wroth; and he cried unto the LORD all night. 12. And Samuel Gilgal. In the Jordan valley. Perhaps to sacrifice there of the spoil in thanksgiving for the victory (Ralbag); see v. 15 and 21.

15. they have brought them from the Amalekites. Saul appears to lay the blame upon the people.

to sacrifice unto the Lord thy God. Saul thought that this would justify his action.

17. though thou be little in thine own sight. Samuel's answer to Saul's plea that the people were to blame (v. 15). Saul was the leader; and if he heeded the voice of his army in an act of disobedience, he was not fit to lead.

20. I have obeyed . . . and have brought Agag. Saul again seeks to justify himself. He had destroyed the Amalekites;

was told Samuel, saying, Saul came to Carmel,
and, behold, he set him up a monument, and is gone about, and passed on, and gone down to Gilgal. 13. And Samuel came to Saul: and Saul said unto him, Blessed be thou of the LORD: I have performed the commandment of the LORD.
14. And Samuel said, What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear? 15. And Saul said, They have brought them from the Amalekites:
for the people spared the best of the sheep and of the oxen, to sacrifice unto the LORD thy God;
and the rest we have utterly destroyed. 16. Then Samuel said unto Saul, Stay, and I will tell thee what the LORD hath said to me this night.
And he said unto him, Say on. 17. And Samuel said, Though thou be little in thine own sight,
art thou not the head of the tribes of Israel?
And the LORD anointed thee king over Israel;
18. and the LORD sent thee on a journey, and said, Go and utterly destroy the sinners the Amalekites, and fight against them until they be consumed. 19. Wherefore then didst thou not obey the voice of the LORD, but didst fly
upon the spoil, and didst that which was evil in the sight of the LORD? 20. And Saul said unto Samuel, Yea, I have obeyed the voice of the LORD, and have gone the way which the LORD sent me, and have brought Agag the king and the people had brought the spoil not for themselves, but for sacrifice.

22. delight in burnt offerings. Samuel's reply is couched in the rhythmical form of parallelism, the characteristic of Heb. poetry. He goes straight to the real disobedience behind Saul's excuses, and in a few immortal words summarises the ethical teaching of the Hebrew prophets.

to obey is better than sacrifice. "Asserts in clearest terms the superiority of moral to ritual worship" (Payne Smith).

23. teraphim. Idolatrous images. Deliberate disobedience towards God is compared to witchcraft, because both bow to an authority other than Divine; in the one case, to the individual will or passion; and in the other, to the idol. The comparison is especially appropriate here, as Saul had been zealous in abolishing witchcraft in Israel. Samuel accuses him of being as guilty as those he had himself condemned.

24. feared the people. Saul now admits the true reason of his lapse. He did not lead, though king, but was led.

of Amalek, and have utterly destroyed the Amalekites. 21. But the people took of the spoil, sheep and oxen, the chief of the devoted things to sacrifice unto the LORD thy God in Gilgal.
22. And Samuel said, Hath the LORD as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the LORD? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams. 23. For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as idolatry and teraphim. Because thou hast rejected the word of the LORD, he hath also rejected thee from being king. 24. And Saul said unto Samuel, I have sinned: for I have transgressed the commandment of the LORD, and thy words: because I feared the people, and obeyed their voice. 25. Now therefore, I pray thee, pardon my sin, and turn again with me, that I may worship the LORD. 26. And Samuel said unto Saul, I will not return with thee: for thou hast rejected the word of the LORD, and the LORD hath rejected thee from being king over Israel. 27. And as Samuel turned about to go away, he laid hold upon the skirt of his robe, and it rent. 28. And Samuel said unto him, The LORD hath rent the kingdom of Israel from thee this day, and hath given it to a neighbour of thine, that is better than thou. 29.

he is not a man, that he should repent. He is not changeable like man, but permanent in His purpose. He desires the good of Israel, and it is for their good that Saul should be deprived of sovereignty. There is no contradiction here to the expression in v. 10. It is because God is unchangeable in his purposes that " change of attitude in men from good to evil, seems to develop a corresponding change of attitude towards them in God " (Sime).

30. honour me now. A touching and natural request. Saul had been sufficiently humiliated; and, as he was still king, it was necessary that his authority should be upheld before the people.

31. so Samuel turned again after Saul. He had vindicated himself as representative of God's will, and now allowed Saul to precede him.

32. delicately. Some translate " tremblingly " (Septuagint); others, " cheerfully," as he now preferred death to life (Kimchi); or, " in chains " (AJ).

the bitterness of death is past. He had lost kingdom and liberty, and death held no further bitterness for him.

33. childless. He had practised the old Amalekite method of murdering the weak and defenceless, on the borders of Judah. Samuel, who in more than one way was the last of the Judges, seized a sword and with his own hand struck the murderer dead. It was national vengeance, not vengeance taken by Samuel in his own cause.

repent: for he is not a man, that he should repent. 30. Then he said, I have sinned: yet honour me now, I pray thee, before the elders
of my people, and before Israel, and turn again with me, that I may worship the LORD thy God.
31. So Samuel turned again after Saul; and Saul worshipped the LORD.

32. Then said Samuel, Bring ye hither to me Agag the king of the Amalekites. And Agag came unto him delicately. And Agag said, Surely the bitterness of death is past. 33. And Samuel said, As thy sword hath made women childless, so shall thy mother be childless among women. And Samuel hewed Agag in pieces before the LORD in Gilgal.

34. Then Samuel went to Ramah; and Saul went up to his house to Gibeah of Saul.

34. then Samuel went to Ramah. He saw Saul no more, He loved and grieved for Saul, and mourned for the failure of a career that had seemed so promising. "He had begun his reign as a knightly hero in the splendour of manly strength, good fortune and victory; he died, harassed, embittered, deranged, giving himself the death blow, avoided and forsaken by every one—by his trusted seer and counselor, by his greatest warrior, and, finally, by the last of his faithful followers" (Kittel).

Ezekiel XXXVI, 16–38

The Additional Reading lays down the regulations for bodily purification. The object of these laws, our Sages say, was to impress on the Israelites the need of moral purification after the apostasy in connection with the Golden Calf.

Moral purification is likewise the theme of the Haftorah taken from the Book of Ezekiel. How Israel is to emerge from the grave of the Exile, renew its life on its own soil, and open an era of undefiled service of God—such is the teaching of the Haftorah. God had justly sent Israel into captivity, says the Prophet; its disasters were inevitable, seeing that God is a God of Holiness and Right. But the heathens had misunderstood this punishment, taking it as a sign of God's inability to save His people (Rashi, Kimchi). In this way, Israel had occasioned the profanation of God's Name. To vindicate His own honour, God will restore them; not because Israel deserved restoration, but because God's Glory demanded it. This Restoration will, however, be accompanied by moral renewal; on the one hand, God will implant " a new heart and a new spirit " in the nation; and, on the other hand, Israel's soul

a monstrous chillul hashem, a profanation and degradation of the idea of God.

22–24. To vindicate His own honour, God will restore them, " for so only can His sole Godhead, which the ruin of His people had caused to be questioned, be generally acknowledged in the world; He can restore Israel, for of His own free grace He forgives their sins and transforms their hard heart."

22. I do not this for your sake. Because Israel was His own people, He must strictly punish Israel for its sins; cf. Amos III, 2 (Genesis, p. 502). His Name was inseparably connected with Israel. To that fact the nation owed its preservation.

23. when I shall be sanctified in you. Or, " when I shew myself holy in you." Israel is the subject through which God will show Himself to be the Omnipotent and Holy God to the nations. " The great act of reinstatement would make the heathen honour God's majesty, as the sufferings of Israel made them despise it " (Lofthouse).

21. But I had pity for mine holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the nations, whither they went. 22. Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD: I do not this for your sake, O house of Israel,
but for mine holy name, which ye have profaned among the nations, whither ye went.
23. And I will sanctify my great name, which hath been profaned among the nations, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the nations shall know that I am the LORD, saith the Lord GOD, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes. 24. For I will take you from among the nations, and gather you out of all the countries, and will bring you into your own land. 25. And I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse
you. 26. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. 27. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgements, and do them. 28. And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God. 29. And I will save you from all your uncleannesses: and

25. I will sprinkle clean water. Figurative for moral purification and inward spiritual renewal.

I will call for the corn, and will multiply it, and lay no famine upon you. 30. And I will multiply the fruit of the tree, and the increase of the field, that ye shall receive no more the reproach of famine among the nations. 31. Then shall ye remember your evil ways, and your doings that were not good; and ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for your iniquities and for your abominations. 32. Not for your sake do I this, saith the Lord GOD, be it known unto you: be ashamed and confounded for your ways, O house of Israel. 33. Thus saith the Lord GOD: In the day that I cleanse you from all your iniquities, I will cause the cities to be inhabited, and the waste places shall be builded. 34. And the land that was desolate shall be tilled, whereas it was a desolation in the sight of all that passed by. 35. And they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden; and the waste and desolate and ruined cities are fenced and inhabited. 36. Then the nations that are left round about you shall know that I the LORD have builded the ruined places, and planted that which was desolate: I the LORD have spoken it, and I will do it. (Sephardim end here).

37. Thus saith the Lord GOD: For this moreover will I be inquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them; I will increase them with men like a flock. 38. As the flock for sacrifice, as the flock of Jerusalem in her appointed feasts; so shall the waste cities be filled with flocks of men: and they shall know that I am the LORD.

HACHODESH

EZEKIEL XLV, 16-XLVI, 18

For the life and message of Ezekiel see Genesis, p. 508, and the Introductory Note to the Haftorahs of Tetzaveh and Parah, p. 582 and 596.

The Additional Reading describes the paschal sacrifice on the first Passover in Egypt, as well as the rules and preparation for the perennial celebration of that Festival. The Haftorah, likewise, touches upon the Passover sacrifices in the course of the Prophet's description of the Restored Temple.

The last portion of the Book of Ezekiel (chaps. XL–XLVIII) is a description of the New Jerusalem that is to arise when the Exile is over. "The Prophet, transported in thought to the Jerusalem to come, reconstructs the Temple, describes its proportions and forms, organises the future priesthood, the new cult, lays out the geographical plan of the re-organised kingdom, and divides it among the tribes that have come back from the four corners of exile. This plan of the constitution of the future is half-ideal, half allegorical" (Darmesteter). In the New Jerusalem, the Temple becomes both spiritually and materially the centre of the whole nation and its life; and the name of the City is for the future to be, The LORD is there. "Ezekiel realised that great things on earth are only produced by union. He, therefore, regarded it as the aim and task of his prophetic and pastoral mission to educate individuals, not only to be religious, but to be members of a community" (Cornill). That such a community be a holy community and serve ideal ends was, however, dependent on the people being prevented from again lapsing into their former sins. Hence, the new constitution for the nation in chaps. XL–XLVIII. Thereby the new Temple would be saved from the repetition of its profanations, and Israel rendered worthy of the God Who would make His dwelling in their midst. In this earliest of literary Utopias, the king's power is strictly limited. As wars are no more, his is no longer any military leadership; and the Prince of the nation is little else than its representative in the Temple. A rich reservation of land is assigned to him, which he tills like every other Israelite. The priests and Levites receive a definite portion of land as the material foundation of their existence.

16. oblation. i.e. the dues that were to be given to the Temple; see v. 13–15. The National Council, on behalf of the people, were to hand the dues to the Prince; he would thus possess a common stock from which the priests could draw.

17. to give the burnt offerings. From the contributions specified in the preceding verses, the Prince, as the head of the nation, would be held responsible for the supply of sacrifices at the appointed seasons.

he shall prepare the sin offering. i.e. provide the offering.

18–20. To ensure the purity of the Sanctuary, which may have been endangered by error or ignorance, Passover and Tabernacles were, according to Ezekiel's vision, to of Israel: he shall prepare the sin offering, and the meal offering, and the burnt offering, and the peace offerings, to make atonement for the house of Israel. (Sephardim begin here:—)

18. Thus saith the Lord GOD: In the first month, in the first day of the month, thou shalt take a young bullock without blemish; and thou shalt cleanse the sanctuary. 19. And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin offering, and put it upon the door posts of the house, and upon the four corners of the ledge of the altar, and upon the posts of the gate of the inner court. 20. And so thou shalt do on the seventh day of the month for every one that erreth, and for him that is simple: so shall ye make atonement for the house. 21. In the first month, in the fourteenth day of the month, ye shall have the passover,
a feast of seven days; unleavened bread shall be preceded on the first of the month by a day of expiation or atonement. The ritual therewith is so novel that, on the one hand, some Rabbis held that it could only refer to the Third Temple, in the days to come; and, on the other hand, there were attempts to exclude the Book of Ezekiel from the Canon of Scripture.

20. so shalt thou do on the seventh day. According to XLIII, 25 (Haftorah Tetzaveh), the consecration of the altar was to last seven days. When that was completed, atonement could be made for the unintentional errors committed during the services of consecration (Kimchi).

erreth. Unwittingly.

him that is simple. One who has trespassed in ignorance of the law.

21–25. The Festival sacrifices. These differ in many particulars from those in Leviticus. One Rabbi declares that this Chapter will only properly be explained "when Elijah appears."

CHAPTER XLVI

1–15. The rights of the Prince in the Sanctuary are strictly prescribed.

And the seven days of the feast he shall prepare a burnt offering to the LORD, seven bullocks and seven rams without blemish daily the seven days; and a he-goat daily for a sin offering. 24. And he shall prepare a meal offering, an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and an hin of oil to an ephah. 25. In the seventh month, in the fifteenth day of the month, in the feast, shall he do the like the seven days; according to the sin offering, according to the burnt offering, and according to the meal offering, and according to the oil.

Thus saith the Lord GOD: The gate of the inner court that looketh toward the east shall be shut the six working days; but on the sabbath day it shall be opened, and in the day of the new moon it shall be opened. 2. 8. shall go forth. The Prince is to leave the inner gate as he entered it; he is not to pass through the Inner Court. "The procedure of the Prince is thus minutely ordered that it may be understood that, though certain privileges are accorded his rank, he has no authority within the sacred precincts" (Toy).

9. in the appointed feasts. The three Pilgrim Festivals of the year (Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles) when all were to appear at the Temple in Jerusalem. Ezekiel lays down the regulations to prevent overcrowding. The members of the National Council, like every worshipper, were to pass reverently as near the Holy of Holies as was allowed, but pass on. There was to be no tarrying on the threshold; no curious looking on. Public worship was not to degenerate into a public spectacle.

10. the prince shall go in the midst of them. Of the am ha-aretz, the National Council. Those who take the words "people of the land" literally, explain that on the Festival days, when the people would be there in great numbers, the Prince was to mingle freely with them. In no other way does a ruler do himself greater honour (Altschul).
